When that number of teaching faculty falls below the minimum level, departments will be granted approval to bolster their faculty to meet prerequisites. As Holmes said, "When classroom availability is an issue, it's uncomfortable and discouraging to both professors and students."

Half of the department's classes are crowded, with more than 50 students in some classes, said Jennifer Modestou, assistant professor of English.

"It's uncomfortable and discouraging to both professors and students," Modestou said. "We're dealing with the same goal - to see the student experience improve."

Despite this, Eyman is seeking four to five more minority professors to help ease overcrowding. A majority of female students, said Modestou, have felt left out in class because research space must be reserved for graduate students, a priority in graduate programs nationwide.

"They wear cheeseheads to match the blue and gold, and they're in clubs in support of the Packers. It's kind of a love affair," Williams said. "Everybody loves the Packers - it's a love affair to see the Packers win."
Sandra Bullock feels the need for "Speed"

"It's like many of the other films," Bullock said. "The characters have shoes on that are too tight and they're struggling to get them to the finish line."

"I don't want people to think that I'm just a box office whatever," she added. "I'm just trying to do something that I love and that I think I can do well."

Bullock signed a contract to work on "Speed" in February, and she's been working on the film ever since.

"It's been really nice to work with the crew," she said. "They're all very professional and very talented."

Bullock is set to return to the screen in a role that will be quite different from her previous performances.

"I'm really excited about this role," she said. "It's a challenge, but I think I can do it."

Bullock has been working on "Speed" for the past few months, and she's been spending a lot of time in the gym to prepare for the role.

"I'm really focused on my physical preparation," she said. "I want to make sure I'm in the best shape possible for the role."

Bullock's performance in "Speed" is expected to be one of the highlights of the film, and she's looking forward to seeing how it comes together on the screen.

"I'm really excited about the final product," she said. "I think it's going to be something special."

Bullock's newest film, "Speed," is set to hit theaters in the fall.

"I'm really excited about the premiere," she said. "I can't wait to see how people react to the film."

Coleman outlines goals for 'excellence'

By Kelley Coleman

President Mary Sue Coleman and Bob York-Adams thrilled the 150 UI alumni who attended the University of Iowa Law School's annual event yesterday, which was titled "The UI Experience: What It's All About."

"UI alumni have the opportunity to get together, meet the university's new leaders, and learn more about the law school," said Robert V. Sierk, UI Law's director of advancement. "This event is about the future and the opportunities that the UI Law School presents."

Coleman said that UI has 42,000 students, which is about the same number of students as the University of Illinois and the University of Michigan.

"The UI Law School has a rich history and a strong tradition," said Coleman. "It is a place where we train the next generation of leaders."

The event included a welcome remarks from President Coleman, followed by a panel discussion on the future of the UI Law School.

"The UI Law School is a place where we train the next generation of leaders," said Coleman. "It is a place where we train the next generation of leaders."

The event ended with a reception for alumni and friends of the UI Law School.

Event organizers said that they hope to make the event an annual tradition.

"We hope to make this event an annual tradition," said Sierk. "We hope to bring back UI alumni and friends to celebrate the UI Law School's success and the future of the university."
You too can be hooked on Ebonics

In December 1996, the Oakland School Board broke new scholarly ground by declaring that the English language is too complex to teach to the children constituting a second language, and that instead the English-speaking students would learn Ebonics. If I didn’t think they were serious, I would not have been able to write this book. However, I did think that they were serious, and for that reason I am writing this book.

I am a writer, and I am a student of language. I have spent many years studying the English language, and I have come to realize that it is a complex and difficult language. I have written many books on the subject, and I have taught many courses on it. I have also written many articles on the subject, and I have given many lectures on it. I have been a student of language for many years, and I have come to realize that the English language is a complex and difficult language.

Iowa City could use bus-route reform

To the Editor:

Bobby Jones was right when he argued that the city of Iowa City should create a bus route that included UI Community Hospital. The hospital is situated in the heart of the city, which makes it difficult for many residents to access it. The current bus routes in the area do not provide adequate coverage, making it difficult for people to get to the hospital. This is a huge problem because it affects the well-being of many Iowa City residents.

The financial interest of the city is not the only reason for creating a bus route to the hospital. It is also important to consider the needs of the people living in the area. Many residents depend on public transportation to get to work, school, and other activities. A bus route to the hospital would provide a much-needed service to the community.

I urge the city to consider creating a bus route to the hospital in the near future. This would be a great step towards improving the quality of life for many Iowa City residents.

No support for the bombing of clinics

To the Editor:

I am a pro-life Christian who is deeply concerned about the issue of abortion. I strongly oppose the bombing of clinics and any other form of violence against pro-life organizations.

I believe that life begins at conception, and that every human being has the right to be born. As a Christian, I believe that God created each person in His image, and that all human life is sacred.

I urge all pro-life Christians to join me in praying for an end to abortion and for the protection of innocent human life.

Albright begins "new era of bipartisan foreign policy"

By David Brincke

WASHINGTON - After rapid-fire confirmation in the Senate, Madeleine Albright was sworn in Thursday as the first female secretary of state. "We must not only hold a candle for justice, but actually light the path," she declared.

Albright was confirmed 99-0 by her left shoulder. Albright raised her right hand and took the oath of office from Vice President Al Gore. She then turned and kissed Gore and her daughters. In the Oval Office ceremony she promised a bipartisan foreign policy and U.S. support for the United Nations. "If we are committed to real and meaningful resolution to the crisis, our citizens will not want to see any more American soldiers in a foreign land," Albright said.

The Senate victory was a long-awaited one, but some parts of the Capitol, like the Senate, have not been as strong as at the White House.

President Clinton and U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan met Wednesday at the White House. On Thursday, after their Oval Office meeting, the president promised the secretary general he would work with Congress to pay overdue U.N. dues. Clinton promised the secretary general he would work with Congress to pay America's long-tardy dues.

"We cannot expect to lead the world when support for the world body is a long-tardy dues," Clinton said Thursday he would work with Congress to pay America's long-tardy dues.

"As United States, we are committed to result-oriented approach we've created," Clinton said. But Clinton, as secretary of state, will work with Congress to pay America's long-tardy dues.

Annan, Clinton agree to work with Congress

By David Brincke

WASHINGTON -- The new U.N. secretary-general, Kofi Annan, told President Clinton Thursday he would push for "a reformed United Nations," which had vetoed Boutros Boutros-Ghali's re-election.

"We cannot expect to lead the world when support for the world body is a long-tardy dues," Clinton said. But Clinton, as secretary of state, will work with Congress to pay America's long-tardy dues.

Kofi Annan is the former secretary general of the United Nations. Annan met Thursday to begin his own 3-2-year term as secretary general of the United Nations. Annan, a former secretary general of the United Nations, was treating him like one.

"And Annan, at every stop, said he would work with the United States and other countries who are not meeting their U.N. obligations.

The United States occupies about 25 percent of U.N. funding but is about $1 billion in arrears to the United Nations, which has been withheld by Congress.

Clinton said Thursday he would work with Congress to pay America's long-tardy dues. Clinton said at a brief news appearance after the swearing-in ceremony, Clinton said he was open to discussion of the issue and would look for a final resolution in some parts of the Capitol, like the Senate, have not been as strong as at the White House.

Casualties escalate as army tries to expel Hutus

By Will Scally

France's highest court has accepted the government's appeal against the acquittal of a top-ranking Vichy official, who is charged with complicity in the deportations of thousands of French Jews to Nazi concentration camps during World War II.

Maurice Papon, 84, has been ordered to stand trial for complicity in crimes against humanity.

The only Frenchman convoluted of crimes against humanity in post-

World War II France, Papon is accused of being an administrator in the French police force.

He is the last living Frenchman in the extermination of Jews.

Papon's trial is due to begin in 1999.

The move comes as the French government seeks to bring to justice those responsible for the crimes of the Vichy regime, which collaborated with the Nazis during World War II.

Papon has always denied any wrongdoing and has been a key figure in the French government's efforts to distance itself from the Vichy era.

The case is expected to be the first of several trials that will take place in France in the coming years, as the French government continues to confront its past.

The trial is likely to be a highly charged and controversial affair, with many French citizens divided on the issue of whether or not to try those accused of crimes committed during the Vichy era.

However, the French government is determined to bring to justice those responsible for the atrocities of the Vichy era, and the trial of Papon is a key step in that process.

The trial is expected to last several months and will be watched closely by both the French public and the international community.
Ban on gifts spoils Super Bowl plans

By Jim Driskell

WASHINGTON — From finding Super Bowl tickets to engaging in political fund-raising, the National Football League and its 32 teams are besieged by requests from members of Congress looking for seats at America’s most popular sporting event. Former Rep. Lee Metcalf, a Montana Democrat who now heads the Professional Football Association of American Congressmen, said he was unable to find seats for the Super Bowl even though the tickets were available.

The most successful attempt to get seats was made by John Adler, a Democrat from New Jersey, who was able to secure seating for a group of state legislators. Adler said he was able to negotiate a deal with the NFL for a group of legislators from New Jersey and Pennsylvania to attend the game. Adler said he was able to negotiate a deal with the NFL for a group of legislators from New Jersey and Pennsylvania to attend the game.

But the NFL has been quick to point out that it does not condone such behavior. "We are very, very interested in the Super Bowl, but we do not encourage lobbying for seats," NFL spokesman Joe Stoddard said.

The NFL has also been under fire for its handling of the situation. Some critics have accused the league of using its influence to pressure Congress to pass favorable legislation.

"It’s clear that the NFL is using the Super Bowl to reward its friends in Congress," said Rep. Jim Costa, a California Democrat. "We need to make sure that our lawmakers are not being influenced by the NFL’s interests."
Violence signals imminent showdown in Yugoslavia

KRAGUJEVAC, Yugoslavia — Riot police killed two people and wounded more than 500 others Wednesday when they tried to block this city and opposition activists from进城 through roads throughout Yugoslavia on the eve of parliamentary elections.

President Slobodan Milosevic and his opposition were locked in a showdown that could result in thousands of fatalities.

Police detained at least eight opposition activists who attempted to block roads leading to vil­lages and small towns.

Police using water cannons and tear gas had to be called in to prevent demonstrators from entering the town center.

"We were not acting in order to protect anyone, but to defend the legitimate interests of the citizens," a police officer said.

Police said they had arrested 17 people who tried to block roads.

"Many of them have been detained under suspicion of preparing acts of violence," the police officer said.

The violence has been escalating since the election campaign began.

"There is a significant risk of the situation deteriorating further," the police officer said.

Milosevic is seeking a third term in office as his popularity in Serbia has waned.

"We are preparing for the worst," the police officer said.

"This is a very serious situation," the police officer said.

"Everyone is expected to act responsibly," the police officer said.

"We are not in a position to predict the outcome," the police officer said.

"This is a very dangerous situation," the police officer said.

Action-packed weekend awaits Hawkeye swimmers

Iowa women host Wisconsin before traveling to Ohio State

Two days, two important duals

The Hawkeyes’ expected weekend away from home began on Friday night, and Ohio State Saturday afternoon at the Fieldhouse pool.

The Hawkeyes, in 1-2 dual meet fashion for this season, are looking to get back on track after a disappointing loss in Illinois. If the Hawkeyes’ performance at Illinois, coached by Gary Hayes, is any indication, the team is capable of competing at a higher level, but it’s just not clicking.

The Hawkeyes were defeated by Ohio State, 177-123, at Ohio State in a double-dual meet Friday night, the Hawkeyes were defeated by Ohio State, 177-123, at Ohio State. The meet was the only way to go back to back to back in the pool at Illinois to a variable meet.

Iowa men home one day and gone the next

By Tony Wirt

The Iowa men’s swimming team had a busy weekend planned. First, the Hawkeyes will take on Wisconsin Saturday night at the Fieldhouse pool.

Saturday, they will travel to Minnesota to retain in a dual meet against the defending Big Ten champions, Minnesota Gophers.

The next Friday will be the last home dual of the season and the last chance for the seniors to compete at home.

Coach Glenn Patish is reporting his team’s performance at Illinois was not what he expected. Patish said that the Hawkeyes lost in the Big Ten’s, but it was due to a few reasons.

Bolich saw it as a chance to go into the next meet on a high note.

Bolich, a senior, said that the team’s performance at Illinois was lowered by the team’s disappointment before,“I was really disappointed with the meet,” said Bolich.

Bolich saw it as a chance to step it up a level, “They aren’t looking to make excuses,” she said.

Favre's hometown: Creatures and slot machines

By Hal Breck Associated Press

BOULDER, Colo. — The Favre name could soon be associated with a certain slot machine, not to mention a certain football player.

Chris Favre, a second baseman for the Mighty Mites baseball team in Fountain City, Wis., said his father, Brett Favre, once stopped by his high school to watch him play baseball.

"There was one baseball game that I remember now, because he walked up to the stands and saw me play and the whole team," Chris Favre said. "I had a hit."

Chris Favre said his father, Brett Favre, always had a little bit of gambling behind his name, even when he was growing up.

"He always liked that kind of stuff," Chris Favre said.

Brett Favre, who is expected to be named the starting quarterback for the Green Bay Packers when the regular season begins next week, has been a fixture in the local gambling community for years.

"I don't think he's ever been a big gambler," Chris Favre said.

But with the Packers in the playoffs, Brett Favre's name is becoming synonymous with gambling.

"I'm sure he's been part of it," Chris Favre said.

The Packers' games have been the subject of media attention, and Favre's name has been seen on a number of slot machines across the country.

Cleveland - John Jordan followed up his 31-point performance against the Hawks with 19 points as the Cavaliers beat the Chicago Bulls 92-90.

The Bulls were leading 86-80 in the fourth quarter when Jordan caught fire, scoring 10 of the team's next 12 points to help the Cavaliers erase a 16-point deficit. Jordan finished with 23 points and 12 rebounds.

Nuggets - Reggie Miller scored 14 of his 24 points in the fourth quarter to help the Indiana Pacers beat the Portland Trail Blazers 104-92.

Miller, who had been quiet in the first three quarters, came off the bench with 10:41 left and hit four straight shots, including two 3-pointers, to help the Pacers take a 94-86 lead. He finished with 23 points and 12 rebounds.

Pacers coach Larry Bird said Miller's performance was crucial.

"Reggie did a great job of making big shots," Bird said. "He's a great player, and he stepped up when we needed him."
Greg Buckner had 14 of his 19 points, tied for the game lead with Terrell McIntyre, and opened the outside for Wake's shooters. However, Buckner scored only two points in the second half for Clemson as close as it would come. Dunson twice went to the line and hit both free-throws in the final 12 seconds and made one shot from the floor up front to give the Demon Deacons a 62-57 lead. It was also Jurkunas to draw the foul.

Tarheels win state battle

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. - Jessica Gaspar scored 20 points and Tracy Reid added 15 rebounds Thursday in No. 17 North Carolina's 81-70 victory over No. 9 North Carolina State, the Tar Heels' 12th straight game and their ninth straight victory of the year.

Despite Reid's presence under the boards, the Tar Heels (16-1 overall, 5-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) won their 12-game winning streak, coming off a 77-50 win over N.C. State in the ACC opener last week, without a second-half surge to Clemson, which closed the gap to within four points at 52-48 with 10:20 remaining in the game.

"We've got to find a way to win these games without dominating," said Coach Sylvia Hatchell. "We're just starting to get a little consistency in our scoring, and we're starting to make some shots."

Dunson was called for charging. The Tigers went 6-for-6 from the 3-point range and scored 15 first-half points against the Bearcats. The Tigers went on to beat the Bearcats 77-66 for their ninth straight win, breaking a seven-game losing streak in the series.

Clemson's Tom Wideman and Wake Forest's Jurkunas struggled for the rebound Thursday. The Demon Deacons won 63-62, 12-of-13 from the floor, withstood a second-half challenge, and ended their 12-game winning streak, coming off a 77-50 win over N.C. State in the ACC opener last week, without a second-half surge to Clemson, which closed the gap to within four points at 52-48 with 10:20 remaining in the game.

Bijou draws big-name flicks this semester

By Greg Kroening

This semester, the Bijou barn boasts two nominees apparently sure to win the coveted best picture Oscar, and several other films sure to find their way into the Bijou calendar. The semester promises nine new features, both mainstream of obvious interest, and Maritime Society.

Other notable films appearing this semester include "The Fugitive," a crime thriller with two laser-bright lead characters; "Moonstruck," a small-screen-to-silver transition with an eye toward documentary on bugs; and "Double Buffalo Creek: A Minnesota Family," a feature film directed by the Grand Jury Prize-winning director of the Alberta Film Festival, "I pick up a calendar, and flip then see what came up next year. No break and breaking the Waves," Such wide-screen films have been known to get this writer to bring home lessthan-average films.

"Usually, we only have a certain set of genres, but this semester is different in that we decided we were going to get a lot of foreign films we wanted," Bijou director Michael Rivera-Dirks said. "We wanted novelty for the students, but we would attract more people as well.

The addition of films that have become the Bijou staple, movies like "The Fugitive," a documentary on the forest fire series, and the big, self-explanatory "Bijou" appear to those who don't consider them when they go to the Bijou.

The only people who remember these high school aren't the ones who entirely suffered pain, petty injuries. To them, it's who the world had to wait for long enough for an irrevocably etched face to finally realize life in the Dollhouse. "Welcome to the Dollhouse" is clearly evident after a long look at Dawn's similarly cursed life. Dawn's similarly cursed life

"Welcome to the Dollhouse," which plays through Sunday at the Bijou.

High school grungy, just like most junior highs do. Solondz is careful to humanize the younger sister of her "Special People," Solondz realizes Dawn for the first time in the film that she is, but from experience, most of us could spot this person as she was.

The end of the film becomes the most poignant moment in the movie, as Dawn's damage is left behind. The theory is that the movie is just as realistic as it is, but from experience, most of us could spot this person as she was.
