The three — of the five total gubernatorial candidates — were in Iowa City for a Chamber of Commerce luncheon, which was canceled.

and Pate, sponsored by Pi Sigma Alpha, was the 15th between the two candidates; the candidates focused on higher-education issues and finding ways to increase the number of Iowa graduates staying in state.

"We need to focus on creating a vibrant economy with jobs that appeal to young Iowans," Oman said. "The quality of life also determines the retention. Everything does not revolve around taxes. We need to make the state more attractive and exciting."

Looking back at the Holocaust

Two Polish Jews, who passed as Christians during WWII, remember the Holocaust.

By Amy Westfeldt
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, N.J. — Norman Salsitz met his wife-to-be in early 1945. He had come to kill her.

Amalie Petranker, a Polish Jew masquerading as a Christian to stay alive, was working for a German business that had planted mines throughout Krakow, Poland. The Germans planned to blow up the city before Soviet forces arrived.

Salsitz, also a Polish Jew passing as a Christian, was a member of a Soviet-controlled Polish resistance group; he had been ordered to obtain the plans for the mines and then kill the person who supplied them.

Petranker looked at Salsitz and thought he might be Jewish. She tried to prove that she was, too, by reciting the prayer Kol Nidre in Hebrew. Suspicious that she might be a German who had learned Hebrew, Salsitz asked her when Jews observe Kol Nidre — the eve of Yom Kippur.

She answered correctly. And then, eyes filling with tears, she pointed a finger at him.

"She said, 'You? You? You too?'" Salsitz recalled. "I said, 'Yes. I too.'"

They married later that year. Fifty-three years later, Salsitz, a semi-retired developer, has written two books, one with his 75-year-old wife, and testified on video at the Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington.

"I tell and I tell and I write and I speak," says Salsitz, 77. "We shouldn't let people forget."

His latest project is the collection of 6 million pennies — one for each Jew killed by the Nazis. He began the collection in January and had hoped to raise the $60,000 by Thursday, Holocaust Remembrance Day, but so far has come up with only $11,000.

He plans to give the money to the New York-based Jewish Foundation for the Righteous, which pays 1,400 monthly stipends to Christians or Muslims in 26 countries who rescued Jews from death.

By posing as a non-Jew during the war, Salsitz was able to rise through

Local vigil tonight

Family members and friends of people killed by any type of violence such as hate crimes, domestic abuse or the Holocaust, will be able to attend a candlelight vigil in remembrance tonight, said organizer Rina Rothmann.

Scheduled for 9 p.m. at the basketball courts behind Burge Residence Hall, the vigil falls on Yom Hashoah, a Jewish day of remembrance for victims of the Holocaust.

Rothmann, whose grandparents survived the Holocaust, said it's important to include other types of violence because they are often forgotten.

"All those losses are so similar in that people kill other people in the name of religion, or brotherhood — it's ridiculous," she said. The vigil will begin with an opening given by Nicole Cook, director of education for the Rape Victim Advocacy Program. The opening will be followed by an open microphone in which people may talk about their family members.

Candles will be provided, along with counselors if people want to talk with someone alone, Rothmann said.

The vigil is the first in what Rothmann hopes will become an annual event. The event is sponsored by Associated Residence Halls.

Wide-eyed daughters head for workplace

UI employees across the campus say they plan to participate in National Take Our Daughters to Work Day.

By Roger Kuznia
The Daily Iowan

Today, 18-year-old Heather Stoner, an Iowa City City High senior, will finally find out what her mother, Terri, does for a living at the UI Hospitals and Clinics.

Heather will be one of an estimated 60 participants from the UI in the national "Take Our Daughters to Work Day."

Terri Stoner, a value analysis facilitator who attempts to find ways to save the UIHC money, said she and Heather will be meeting with several hospital groups.

"It will be a good opportunity for her to see what I do before she goes off to school," she said.

Local firm may assist telescope project

With the potential help of an Iowa City firm, Japanese officials will look to the sky for asteroids and debris.

By Cori Zarek
The Daily Iowan

An Iowa City company is currently involved in negotiations with Japan to help build a multimillion-dollar telescope system.

Taurus Precision Optics, 783 W. Highway 1 is working with the National Astronomical Observatory in Tokyo, Japan, to complete plans for construction of a telescope system that will track asteroids and space debris, said James Mulherin, president of Taurus Precision Optical. The observatory has yet to accept Taurus' bid on the project but is likely to do so, Mulherin said.

"They've visited the facility, we've discussed the project, we already have systems developed," he said. "Now we're working to finalize everything."

Japan is planning to build the radar and telescope system to monitor asteroids and debris that may threaten rockets and satellites launched from earth.

The telescope is projected to be constructed in Iowa City, at a cost of $1 million; the radar system will be made elsewhere, Mulherin said.

Taurus, which specializes in optics and telescope construction, became involved in the project when representatives from the company and the observatory met in Honduras at a world trade fair, Mulherin said.

One reason Taurus is likely to receive the green light on the project is that its bid is lower than those of the competing companies, he said.

Swisher monkeys will not be returned to Sue Kriz

The monkeys from Swisher, Iowa, will remain in zoos and sanctuaries across the country, according to the Iowa Supreme Court.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

It has been a long road for Sue Kriz and her 50 monkeys, but it seemed to end Wednesday when the Iowa Supreme Court ruled the simians should be distributed to various zoos and sanctuaries across the United States.

The ruling denied an appeal by owner Kriz, of Swisher, Iowa, that the monkeys be returned to her or put up for public auction.

"One person, even under the most favorable conditions, cannot properly care for 50 monkeys," the court said in the ruling. "In fact, at the Blank Park Zoo in Des Moines, it takes three full-time employees and a night keeper to care for just 35 of them."

Kriz's attorney, Robert Hearity, said he disagreed with the decision and the comparison with the Blank Park Zoo; the zoo employees don't take care of only the monkeys, he

Ways to confuse your roommate

- Every time your roommate falls asleep, wait 10 minutes, and then wake him/her up and say, "It's time to go to bed now."
- Insist that your roommate recite the "Pledge of Allegiance" with you every morning.
- Put up traffic signs around the room. If your roommate doesn't obey them, give him/her tickets. Confiscate something your roommate owns until he/she pays the tickets.
- Walk, talk and dress like a cowboy at all times. If your roommate inquires, tell him/her, "Don't worry little buckaroo, you'll be safe with me."
- Complain that your elbows, knees and other joints have been bothering you. Get a screwdriver, and pretend to "fix" them.
- Paint abstract paintings and give them such titles as, "Roommate Dying in a Car Crash," and "Roommate Getting Whacked in the Head with a Shovel." Comment often about how much you love the paintings.
- Buy a lava lamp. Stare at it for hours, imitating its movements with your face. Explain to your roommate you have established a connection with the spirit world through the lava lamp. Tell him/her "Grandma said hi."
- Put headphones on your roommate while he/she is sleeping, and subliminally teach him/her to speak Spanish, play the trombone and memorize all the major imports and exports of each African nation.
- Dress like a military officer. Insist that your roommate salute you upon sight. If he/she refuses, insist that he/she do 100 push-ups.
- Get a pet gerbil. At a designated time every day, take the gerbil into the bathroom and engage in loud shouting matches. If your roommate inquires, refuse to discuss the situation.
- Spread toothpicks all over the floor. Stare at them, acting like you're trying to read something. Tell your roommate it's a message from God, but you're not sure whether it's a warning about a loved one in danger or a recipe for really great chili.

Serving up laughter

■ A local bar offers an alternative to the usual bumpin' and grindin' on its dance floor.

By Kelli Otting
 The Daily Iowan

Here's laughing at you, kid. One-Eyed Jake's owner Mike Porter said it seven years ago, when Comedy Night was Comedy Afternoon: The success road wasn't as smooth as it is right now.

"We started it for the students who enjoyed Friday After Class (FAC) festivities before the weekend began," he said. "It wasn't very consistent in the beginning, because we competed with Penguin's when they had a small club here."

Porter said Comedy Night was moved to Wednesday nights after he tried Thursday with no luck because of the increase in downtown competition.

"It was hard to get people to come out on Thursday, when every other bar had dancing and drink specials," he said. "Wednesday night has worked well as long as the crowds keep rolling in."

Porter said he realized that not every person likes each comedian each week, but he and his employees really have no control over it.

"Our booking agent, Comedy Productions, based in Sioux City, lines up our nights at least three months in advance," he said. "We don't specifically get to choose each comedian, but depending on if they are good or bad, we can ask them back or not."

UI senior Chris Schmidt, a bartender at One-Eyed Jake's, said he's worked almost every Wednesday night since last July, and each one has its own variety of laughs.

"One week, the comedians will be absolutely hilarious, and the next week they'll be toned down just a bit," he said. "It doesn't seem to matter to students, because they still come even if they haven't heard anything about the comedians."

Comedy Night is one of the busiest nights of the week, but usually not the rowdiest one, even though Jake's is one of the few establishments in town that provides this sort of entertainment, Schmidt said.

"We have our regulars that come every single week because they like the relaxed atmosphere and the good laughs," he said. "When word spreads, people just come to see one show and end up coming on a regular basis."

Students who come on a regular basis like the laid-back mood and that most of the comedians come from all over the Midwest, Porter said.

"Comedy Night is a lot more relaxed than the normal downtown scene," he said. "It's something that costs as much as a movie, but the audience gets to view a wide variety of national talent."

Jake's has featured headliners who have appeared in Las Vegas, on "Star Search" and on "The Rosie O'Donnell Show," Porter said.

"Students don't understand the caliber of comic talent that we provide for their entertainment," he said. "Comedy Night survives on people spreading the news by word of mouth, which means we have to provide an excellent show each week."

Schmidt said that from what he has heard, Comedy Night can be extremely addicting.

"I think the variety of comic style is the main thing that brings our audiences back for more each week," he said. "Everyone must admit $5 a show is a lot cheaper than going to Penguin's in Cedar Rapids and paying $15 to $20."

UI freshman Mary Sitko said she and her friends love Comedy Night so much that it sometimes interferes with their nightly studying.

"It's awesome," she said. "It's a nice little break in the middle of the week."

One of the main reasons why she likes Comedy Night is because no one has to worry about the dance scene and the loud music, Sitko said. People can just sit back, relax and not worry about not being able to hear the people around them or having nowhere to move.

Woman survives on beer alone
 STILLWATER, Okla. — DeVonna Cervantes spent almost four days in her van, sipping beer and yelling.

It wasn't for fun, Cervantes, a paraplegic, was stranded on her way to a party late April 12 when her specially equipped van got stuck on a railroad tie that ripped off the oil pan and drained the engine of oil.

She called 911 with her cell phone and gave what she thought was her location, but no one came. So, with the terrain too rough for her wheelchair, she pulled out the van's couch and slept.

The next day, she flew a white handkerchief outside her window and wrote "help" on the windshield with lipstick. She rationed herself sips of water and a six-pack of beer she had brought for the party.

"I truly knew what pioneers felt like," she said.

Occasionally, Cervantes would honk her horn and scream. But it wasn't until the afternoon of April 15 that Oklahoma State University golfer Jay Tewell heard her as he practiced at Karsten Creek Golf Course.

He couldn't locate the noise and went to class. But he heard the sounds again when he came back to the course, and Karsten head professional Tom Jones and former OSU golfer Jeff McMillian walked down the road and found Cervantes. "They don't carry clubs and putters, but lances and swords," Cervantes said. "They are my knights."

Taking out tiny screw
 HEPPNER, Ore. — This Oregon Department of Transportation crew has a few screws loose. Eventually, they hope to have a lot more loose.

A five-man team clad in protective suits is unscrewing tens of thousands of tiny screws to dismantle a storage shed that is shedding flakes of lead-based paint.

"We're afraid to estimate how many screws," said crew member Wes Cain, grimacing slightly.

The agency bought the old shed to store sand, but the chipping paint could drift into a public swimming pool next door or contaminate the soil that drains into Willow Creek.

Bids were taken to redo the shed's exterior, but a contractor who bid $50,000 backed off when told the job would mean 10 years of monitoring the soil to ensure it didn't become contaminated with lead.

That's when the agency came up with the idea of unscrewing the flaking metal walls and replacing them. That would cost only about $40,000, and would avoid potential soil and water contamination.

Court aims to simplify harassment suits

■ Some members of the Supreme Court appeared to be seeking an easier way to resolve the increasing number of sexual harassment cases.

By Laurie Asseo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court justices showed frustration with the growing complexities of sexual harassment law Wednesday as they debated a case that could affect Paula Jones' effort to revive her lawsuit against President Clinton.

Several justices' comments on the case before them indicated they were unlikely to rule that employers can be forced to pay damages when a supervisor's pressure for sexual favors is accompanied by a retaliation threat that turns out to be empty.

And, more broadly, some members appeared to be seeking a simpler way to resolve the increasing number of sexual harassment lawsuits filed since the high court ruled in 1986 that such on-the-job problems can be illegal sex discrimination.

"How did all this come up?" asked Justice Ruth Bader Ginsburg, once a pioneering lawyer for women's rights, in referring to the two different legal standards now used in sexual harassment cases.

Jones' name was not mentioned during the hour-long argument in an Illinois woman's lawsuit against Burlington Industries. But the high court's decision, expected by July, could help determine whether she will win her appeal of a judge's April 1 dismissal of her case.

Jones accused Clinton of propositioning her when he was Arkansas governor and she was a state employee. The federal judge who dismissed the case said employees can collect damages only if their refusal to submit to demands for sexual favors results in on-the-job retaliation.

The judge also said Jones did not show she suffered adverse consequences or that Clinton ever made a clear threat.

In the case before the Supreme Court, Burlington wants the justices to throw out a lawsuit by former employee Kimberly Ellerth, who says a supervisor patted her bottom, made sexual innuendoes and said he could make her job "very hard or very easy." She was never fired and in fact got a promotion, but she said she quit because of the alleged harassment.

"Automatic liability should not be applied in a situation of unfulfilled threat," argued Burlington's lawyer, James J. Casey. "The supervisor has done nothing but speak words."

Ellerth's lawyer said the company should be held liable, noting that the man accused of harassing her was a Burlington vice president. "He is the company," contended attorney Ernest T. Rossiello.

Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist and Justice Anthony M. Kennedy questioned how a company could be held responsible if an employee does not give in to sexual demands and "nothing happens."

"A great deal has happened" because the employee has been told her job conditions are different, responded Clinton administration lawyer Barbara D. Underwood, arguing in Ellerth's support.

IOWA BRIEFS

Small fires plague I.C.

Three small, yet unusual, house fires ignited in a span of three hours in Iowa City Wednesday afternoon, according to fire department officials.

Mary Dvorsky, 1215 S. Franklin St., a senior systems analyst for the UI Physics and Astronomy Department, was among the homeowners whose house sustained damage. The ICFD estimated the damage to Dvorsky's home at $12,000.

The fire originated from a short circuit in a bathroom exhaust fan, fire department reports said. The fire department was alerted to the fire at 1:47 p.m. by one of Dvorsky's neighbors.

No one was home at the time, except for one dog and two cats, which were unharmed.

"One of the cats was hiding quite well," Dvorsky said. "When he emerged, he didn't want to be around anyone for awhile. The other two were afraid, but were easier to deal with."

The fire department responded to a second call at 2:23 p.m. at 1509 Aber Ave.

ICFD Lt. Chris Bok said since all available fire engines were at the Franklin Street scene, an engine from the Coralville Fire Department was called in for assistance.

The fire, caused by smoking materials smoldering in a waste basket, spread to a chair, but was quickly put out by firefighters, officials reported.

"After unsuccessfully extinguishing the fire, the two occupants exited the home through a window without clothing," said Bok, who estimated damages at $5,000. "One was taking a shower and the other one was sleeping."

A final fire alarm call was logged at 4:46 p.m. at 2128 S. Riverside Drive, Bok said.

Bok said the fire originated from a clothes dryer inside the trailer. The rags were placed into the dryer with a residue of cooking oil on them. The fire started from spontaneous ignition after the dryer cycle had stopped, Bok said.

Teen pleads guilty in death of her newborn

■ Minutes before the hearing began, she convulsed into sobs in the embrace of her mother.

By Todd Spangler
Associated Press

WILMINGTON, Del. — A young woman charged along with her high school sweetheart with murdering their newborn at a motel fell sobbing into her mother's arms Wednesday before pleading guilty to manslaughter.

Amy Grossberg, 19, entered the plea a month after her boyfriend, Brian Peterson, turned against her.

Manslaughter carries a maximum of 10 years in prison. Under sentencing guidelines, Grossberg and Peterson could each get up to 2 1/2 years.

Grossberg's voice cracked as she answered the judge's questions about her plea. Minutes before the hearing began, she convulsed into sobs in the embrace of her mother, who stroked her hair.

Grossberg and Peterson, 19, were both initially charged with first-degree murder, and prosecutors said they might seek the death penalty after their baby was found in November 1996 wrapped in plastic in a trash bin behind the motel in Newark where Grossberg had given birth.

The state medical examiner's office said the boy was born alive at full term and died of skull fractures caused by blows and shaking.

Grossberg's lawyers would not say what prompted her guilty plea, but Peterson pled guilty to the same charge last month and agreed to testify against her at her trial in May. Peterson, according to his lawyers, believed the baby was stillborn and put it in a plastic bag in the trash after Grossberg yelled, "Get rid of it! Get rid of it!"

Grossberg's lawyer, Robert Tanenbaum, said the young woman takes "full responsibility" for actions that led to the infant's death.

"At no time were there any intentions to hurt anyone or do anything," he said. "She should have never gone to the motel. They had no plan. They were two scared teen-agers who were in over their heads."

Both remain free on $300,000 bail each until their sentencing July 9.

Prosecutor Paul Wallace said imprisonment is appropriate, but he did not say what he would recommend. "Amy Grossberg caused the death of her child by her action or inaction," he said. "It was caused by her chilling indifference."

Grossberg and Peterson were sweethearts from well-to-do Wyckoff, N.J. At the time of the baby's death, Grossberg was a freshman at the University of Delaware, while Peterson was attending Gettysburg College in Pennsylvania.

Bush jumps into Paula Jones fray, favoring agents' silence

■ Also, the National Organization for Women decides against filing a brief supporting Jones' harassment suit.

By Karen Gullio
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former President George Bush jumped unexpectedly behind Secret Service efforts to keep agents from testifying about what they saw while protecting President Clinton. The nation's largest women's group, however, stayed out of the fray and decided not to support Paula Jones' lawsuit.

Just days after toying with the idea, the National Organization for Women announced it would not file a court brief in support of Jones' effort to reinstate her sexual harassment civil suit against Clinton.

NOW President Patricia Ireland said the group's national board and local chapters were overwhelmingly against filing a friend-of-the-court brief because the "highly charged political" lawsuit should not be used as a test case on sexual harassment and the group did not want to take sides with Jones' right-wing legal and financial backers.

"The disreputable right-wing organizations and individuals advancing her cause... have a long-standing political interest in undermining our movement to strengthen women's rights and weakening the laws that protect those rights," Ireland said at a news conference.

The conservative Rutherford Institute, which is financing legal expenses for Jones, and her spokesperson Susan Carpenter McMillan "are using this case to advance their own political agendas," she said.

Meanwhile, Bush wrote a personal letter to Secret Service Director Lewis C. Merletti in which he said the trust between agents and the people they protect would be damaged if the agents were compelled to testify about what they might have seen or heard while on duty. The Clinton administration made the letter part of its sealed court filing seeking to stop Kenneth Starr's Whitewater prosecutors from questioning Secret Service agents, sources familiar with the filing said.

Prosecutors want to ask Secret Service agents protecting the president what they observed in an apparent effort to obtain information about Clinton's relationship with former intern Monica Lewinsky. Clinton has denied allegations that he had an affair with Lewinsky and asked her to lie about it.

Bush's office would not release the letter, but excerpts leaked out. "If that confidence evaporates, the agents... cannot properly protect the president," MSNBC quoted Bush's letter as saying.

In making the move, Bush is giving a boost to the man who ousted him from the White House in 1992 and putting himself at odds with Starr, his former solicitor general at the Justice Department.

"That may be the case, but we can't change our position just because our position is the same as the White House's," Bush spokesperson Michael Dannenhauer said. Bush has a very high regard for the Secret Service, he added.

Ironically, it was information supplied by Secret Service officials that ultimately cleared Bush of allegations that, when he was a vice presidential candidate in 1980, he met with Iranian officials in Paris about a deal to delay the release of American hostages in a bid to influence the presidential election.

A congressional task force investigating the so-called "October Surprise" battled with the Secret Service about interviewing agents protecting Bush about his whereabouts on the day of the alleged meeting.

"They said then exactly what they are saying now, that to give up this type of information would compromise their ability to protect the president," said Michael Zeldin, who was deputy counsel for Democrats on a task force investigating the matter.

Secret Service agents protect candidates for the presidency and vice presidency, as well as the president and vice president.

After a long series of behind-the-scenes negotiations, the service eventually turned over Secret Service logs of Bush's activities and allowed some agents to be interviewed but limited the questioning. Portions of the logs were blackened out.

The task force cleared Bush of the allegations, based partly on the information supplied by the Secret Service.

Leader assails U.S. for Puerto Rico policy

■ The governor plans to lobby in Washington for approval of a process offering Puerto Ricans a choice for their future.

By Charles J. Haney
Associated Press

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico — The U.S. government freely assails one Caribbean island — Cuba — for its undemocratic ways while leaving the 3.8 million U.S. citizens of another — its own possession Puerto Rico — essentially disenfranchised. Gov. Pedro Rossello complains.

"It's somewhat inconsistent," said the Puerto Rican chief executive.

Rossello, who favors Puerto Rican statehood, called on Washington to keep what he called a longstanding "promise of full democracy" for Puerto Rico.

The governor was interviewed by the Associated Press on the eve of his departure Wednesday to lobby in Washington for approval of a U.S.-sponsored plebiscite process offering Puerto Ricans a choice among statehood, independence or the current semiautonomous commonwealth status.

The legislation was approved by the U.S. House of Representatives last month by a mere one-vote margin and is in danger of stalling in the Senate before the 1997-98 term ends.

Ricardo Figueroa/Associated Press

Puerto Rico Governor Pedro Rossello speaks during an interview with the Associated Press held in the governor's office of La Fortaleza, the governor's mansion in San Juan, Puerto Rico, Tuesday.

Some members of Congress oppose the bill as an unwanted opening to establishment of a Spanish-speaking 51st state. Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., with whom Rossello planned to meet during his visit, has shown little interest in advancing it.

But the governor said he still expects the bill to emerge from a Senate committee this summer, and "once this comes out of committee, we hope and expect Sen. Lott will see fit to allow this to come to a vote."

or in U.S. presidential elections.

"I think it's somewhat inconsistent for the United States to be pointing at Cuba and saying that there should be an open democracy and there should be a plebiscite, there should be free elections, when in your own backyard you have 3.8 million disenfranchised U.S. citizens," the governor said.

Under the plebiscite bill, Congress would still have to give final approval to independence or statehood.

Rossello, a 54-year-old pediatric surgeon, is a national Democrat but a member of Puerto Rico's Republican-aligned, pro-statehood New Progressive Party.

Interviewed in the neoclassical splendor of San Juan's historic executive mansion, La Fortaleza, the governor sidestepped a question of history that is stirring debate here this centennial year: Was the U.S. takeover of this Spanish colony in 1898, during the Spanish-American War, an invasion, or was it done at the invitation of islanders?

The U.S. troops who landed here encountered relatively light Spanish resistance and an often warm welcome from the colonized islanders.

said, but all the parks in the area are closed. Kriz still may apply for certain portions of the money, Hearity said.

However, Hearity said, she got spoken with his chief of staff last Friday afternoon and she thought they would talk about it.

The 50 monkeys, which were endangered species, were covered Dec. 2, 1995, by a court order that required conditions at Kriz's home to be met before the deputy from the Johnson County Sheriff's Department could call 911 because of a complaint that the monkeys were about to be killed.

The deputy encountered a strong ammonia smell and where the monkeys were kept. Another deputy and an animal control officer Paul Cooper returned to the house two days later and found Kriz's monkeys in the care of the monkeys. The monkeys were moved to the UI Oak Grove facility, where they were kept for several weeks later, where they were kept.

Judge Larry Conrad in January 1996 the monkeys remain in the UI's care until the UI's appeal of the ruling is over, requesting own animals.

During the appeal, the monkeys were dispersed across the county. Anne Lahey, the assistant director of the UI's HOLOCAUST CENTER, said she was interviewed by the ranks of the Polish Poles, he says, although Jews had dark eyes and light blue eyes are light blue.

"I survived because I had a sad face," he said. Twenty-one members of the family were killed in immediate family raids or died in concentration camps. His wife was killed in Poland. She lost her day five years ago in New York City; it has since become a national event.

The day was designed with the needs of adolescent girls specifically in mind, said Diane Finnerty, diversity resource coordinator for the Office for Affirmative Action.

"In balancing their future work/life paths, girls need encouragement to focus on establishing work- and ability-related goals," she said.

Although the day was made for daughters, activities planned at the UI will be directed at sons, too.

"Boys need more encouragement to focus on balancing the 'life' portion of the equation, which includes family and relationships," Finnerty said.

Sharon Sheib, external relations director for the College of Business Administration, said if she brought her two sons to work, they'd probably be bored in a hurry.

"Spending a whole day with mom just isn't very exciting," she said.

According to the Ms. Foundation Web site, the organization hopes the day raises the level of self-esteem in adolescent girls.

It cites a study showing that as adolescence begins, girls show "a significant drop in self-esteem, report a lowered sense of self-worth and describe intense feelings of insecurity about their own judgments and emotions."

Donna Sherlock, executive director of Minnesota Women's Foundation, said her organization released a study in February 1990 called "Reflections of Risk: Growing Up Female In Minnesota."

She said the study focused on what adolescent Minnesota girls face concerning emotional stress, physical and emotional abuse, negative body image, eating disorders, suicide and pregnancy risk.

spoke to a crowd of 50 supporters at the Great Midwestern Ice Cream Co., 126 E. Washington St.; he also focused on education but added that Iowa needs to improve entrepreneurship.

"We can't compete with all of the large industries that every state competes for," he said. "We need to focus on agriculture and smaller companies. We need to support university research. The state has an $800 million surplus, in which we need to make sure that we aren't shortchanging anything."

Even though Iowa will have its first new governor in 16 years, voter turnout is expected to be low, Pate said.

"When things are going well, people are less inclined to go out and vote," he said. "It's different when someone says 'You are taking something from me'; then they'll go out and vote."

Republican frontrunner Jim Lightfoot has attended only one of the 15 debates, and all three candidates spoke out against Lightfoot's absence from the campaign trail.

"I hope that people remember this," McCormick said. "Lightfoot's absence is arrogance; I think that he is afraid to debate, because it will expose his views."

Oman and Pate said that the differences in opinion in the Republican Party aren't between them but stem between the two and Lightfoot.

"Lightfoot has been at one debate," Oman said. "Some people may feel that this is irrelevant, but I'd like to think that it is relevant. This is a good time to have a running conversation about the issues."

Lightfoot could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

aid, but all the park's animals. Kriz still may apply for review of certain portions of the decision.

However, Hearity said, he hadn't yet spoken with his client Wednesday afternoon and was unsure whether they would take that step.

The 50 monkeys, six of which were endangered species, were discovered Dec. 2, 1995, in unsanitary conditions at Kriz's home by a deputy from the Johnson County Sheriff's Department. Kriz had called 911 because she was concerned about possible intruders.

The deputy encountered a strong ammonia smell and dried feces where the monkeys were housed.

Another deputy and UI veterinarian Paul Cooper returned to the house two days later; Cooper convinced Kriz the monkeys needed more care. The monkeys were transported to the UI Oakdale campus two weeks later, where it was determined they were malnourished.

Judge Larry Conney ruled in January 1996 the monkeys should remain in the UI's care. Kriz appealed the ruling two months later, requesting ownership of the animals.

During the appeal process, the monkeys were dispersed to sanctuaries across the country.

Anne Lahey, the assistant Johnson County attorney who prosecuted the case, said the monkeys were suffering in Kriz's care.

"Placing them in sanctuaries was in the best interest of the monkeys and alleviates their suffering," she said.

The court decided against an auction on several counts, including the level of care needed for the monkeys, the diseases monkeys can carry and the possibility the monkeys would return to private ownership or even be bought again by Kriz.

"A public sale, for all of these reasons, would not be a good idea," the court wrote. "In fact one veterinarian testified that the sale of monkeys at a public auction would be a 'disaster.'"

The ruling stated an auction would not bring enough to cover the cost sustained by the UI in caring for the animals, which came to a total of $35,000, Cooper said.

However, Hearity placed the monkeys' value in excess of $100,000. He also said Kriz eventually did receive a license to care for the monkeys from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Cooper said if Kriz got the monkeys, or new ones, and they were kept in the same condition, the country would have to intervene again.

"The USDA would step in again, and we would be doing the same thing all over again," he said.

the contract are Mitsubishi, of Tokyo, Japan, and Contraves, of Pennsylvania, both with estimates about four times as much as Taurus' bid, Mulherin said.

"Mitsubishi doesn't build telescopes, so there would be a lot of developing costs, and Contraves is used to charging government prices," he said. "It just won't fit their budget to go with these companies."

Another reason the Japanese observatory is likely to go with Taurus is that it has already been working on design and engineering plans, Mulherin said.

To help complete the engineering plans, UI engineering students may be called in to help, he said.

"We may consult with the engineering department to help with analysis," Mulherin said. "So students could end up working on this project."

Representatives of the College of Engineering say they would welcome an opportunity to be a part of a project of this magnitude.

"If it would involve students and faculty both in research and in the classroom, it would be nothing but a positive thing," said Fred Streicher, director of external relations for the engineering school. "We'll definitely keep on top of this."

Taurus hopes to provide the Japanese observatory with a final bid in June and expects to be awarded the contract in August, Mulherin said. It plans to begin construction by October on the 18-month project. The entire system is expected to cost more than $9 million and should be completed within five years.

the ranks of the Polish resistance. The Poles, he says, always thought that Jews had dark, sad eyes. His eyes are light blue.

"I survived because I did not have a sad face," he says.

Twenty-one members of Salsitz's immediate family were shot in raids or died in concentration camps. His wife was the only member of her family to have survived in Poland. She lost her parents, her sister, cousins, nieces and nephews. "God wanted me to live," she says, "to bear witness and to tell the world what happened to my brothers and sisters."

Salsitz can still hear his father's screams the day the older man was shot in front of an outhouse in his village of Kolbuszowa, Poland.

"Revenge! Revenge! Revenge! Take revenge!" his father shouted. Salsitz watched from an attic window as officers fired five more times until his father stopped shouting.

JOB MARKET

Future isn't bright enough for shades

■ The economy may be booming, but things aren't as rosy for grads as they might like to think.

At 3.7 percent, the Midwest's unemployment rate in March was among the lowest in the nation, according to Bureau of Labor Statistics. The job market is supposedly so ripe, young brains not yet out of college are up to their pocket protectors in job offers.

But the statistics are misleading. While a fortunate few may be telling recruiters to take a number, most job seekers are out pounding the pavement with résumé in hand. The economy may be at a high point, but the job market is by no means a shiny free-for-all. It's time for college job placement officials to ditch the pretense and be real.

The UI Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office has noted approximately a 60 percent increase in the number of firms interviewing students on campus over the past five years. By comparison, the College of Engineering has recorded a doubling in the number of companies interviewing in the last year alone.

For sure, both these figures suggest that recruiters are taking a greater interest in students as prospective employees. But more specifically, the demand for mechanically-inclined candidates is what's growing exponentially. Even in the Business and Liberal Arts Placement Office, well over half the recruiters represent bio-tech labs, automotive and electronics companies, software engineering firms and other technical businesses.

So, the outlook is bright for the computer ace. But what of the great many who think Java is just something that stunts your growth? Liberal arts students aren't kidding themselves. The race for "real" employment is a bane for many graduates who soon give up and take anything they can find.

At 2.2 percent, Nebraska registered the lowest state unemployment figure in March. But no guarantee is made that college graduates will land the job of their dreams.

Jeff Davis, 23, received his bachelor's degree in communication studies from the University of Nebraska in May 1997. "There's not a whole lot out there," he said. "The only job I could get was shift manager at a grocery store and I've been there ever since. I'm thinking strongly about grad school."

Statistics say more graduates are opting to enter the job market with a bachelor's degree than in past years, but numbers don't tell the whole story. Heather Bedtka, a psychology major at Clarke College in Dubuque, said she knows she won't get a good job with only a bachelor's degree. Only a sophomore, Bedtka is already making plans for graduate school.

"I will go on to get my master's, then I am pretty confident that I can get a job," she said. "Eventually, I'd like to get my Ph.D."

The demand for an advanced degree in Bedtka's field is strong and a similar demand is rising in an increasing number of vocations. Job seekers should indeed revel in the secure economy while they can. But they could be in for a shock if they don't know the rest of the story.

TAKE OUR DAUGHTERS TO WORK DAY

Daughters deserve our attention

■ Take Our Daughters to Work Day isn't about excluding boys but empowering young girls.

Today is the fourth Thursday of April, which means it is Take Our Daughters To Work Day. This is the fifth year of the event, and concerns have been raised over the fact that Our Sons are excluded from the day's festivities.

However, bringing boys along for the day would make the whole premise of TODTWD a moot point. The purpose is not to exclude boys, but to broaden the horizons of girls who are poised upon the point of their life when their self-esteem begins to go downhill.

Recently, the New York Times Magazine described girls as "confident at 11, confused at 16" on its cover, hearkening back to those middle school days of yore, a time that causes most females to cringe. With adolescence's bad hair, bad skin, and mouths full of braces, it is not the most pleasant times of life.

All this makes no mention of how adolescent girls are inundated with unrealistic depictions of women in the magazines they read and the television shows they watch. It can suck the confidence right out of them.

By welcoming girls ages 9 through 15 into the workplace for a day, they get to see women in a different light and are able to aspire to something grander that they may have thought they didn't have a shot at.

That is why the Ms. Foundation founded TODTWD in 1993. According to the Foundation, "this is a day to focus on girls' abilities rather than appearances. We believed a day at work, particularly a day watching women in the workplace, would brighten girls' aspirations."

This day is not a "career day" designed to make boys feel left out. It is an avenue for girls to explore and can expose them to a world that hopefully they can one day make a difference in.

"Bringing boys in defeats the purpose," Professor Jael Silliman of the UI's Women's Studies Department says. "Most boys think they will have a career."

Today is meant to be a day that opens girls' eyes to the real world and showcases opportunities that will be theirs one day. Adolescent girls can enjoy one day in the limelight when oftentimes they are starting to shy away from it at school.

There is no need for controversy with TODTWD. To make a huff over the fact that boys are not a part of the day detracts from it.

Don't dilute the power of words with ineffective speech

I have a penchant for diction. Translated, I love to talk. I like debating a point, even if I know I cannot win. I think that it's fun. I like to tell stories, real or made-up.

So what? Due to something or another, technology or ignorance, we have stopped using language to its fullest potential. Rather than expressing ourselves in words, we seem to prefer blowing things up to get attention. Effective verbal and written communication seems to have gone the way of the dodo.

I just take it for granted that I can call Bill Clinton any name I want, and not be thrown in jail. Last time I heard, some psychiatrist claimed Bill had an "addiction to sex." Not big news in itself, but spoken aloud is a taboo in some areas. If you lived in a country ruled by communism, that comment would probably land you in jail. If you were ruled by a dictator, you might be shot. Our freedom of speech is taken for granted.

If I have a problem with something in our community, I can talk about it. Same holds true on a national level. There are many things I can say to get attention. A well-written letter will be given more consideration than abuse or a bomb threat. But for some reason, we seem to think that actions will always work well without words.

Being an activist about an issue is a great thing. Having strong feelings relating to something that troubles you, and doing something about it is an admirable trait. Not many people are all that effective about it, though. They wander around, spouting off about this, that or the other thing, without really supporting their case. And usually they get written off as freaks that just don't quite understand the whole issue.

Once had a professor tell the class that by erasing one-fourth of your opinions, it is amazing what you can learn. So, I tried. Instead of being so concerned with everything I knew about, abortion, death penalty, animal testing, I just listened to what everyone else had to say. It's amazing. Some people are a few beers short of a six pack. Other people make a lot of sense, and really do have a point to make. Listening to both sides of an argument gives one a new respect.

Living in America, we have the right to make idiots of ourselves from time to time and not risk anything other than personal humiliation. No death, no imprisonment, not even really a slap on the wrist (unless you count the continued ridicule of your friends). It's called freedom of speech, and we made it law many years ago. Too many places still don't have it.

Higgins inspires women to defy roles

Julie Bill

How many people do you know who toss around words like "love," "hate" and "low-fat"? Do they really have the power that they must of once had? It all depends on the context.

Take China for instance. Only recently have they begun to release imprisoned dissidents (still to the accusations of using them as political pawns). However, the medical parole of Wang Dan, a leader of the Tiananmen Square protests, is a step towards the recognition by countries of the rights of human beings.

If his words were not powerful weapons, then he never would have been considered a major threat to the government, and never would have served time in prison. But he made true points that could not be ignored forever and still ring in the minds of those who suffer from oppression. These are the words that have finally sunk in, and now are making changes.

The problem with words is that at times they can be so powerful that violence is invoked, but now are rarely put to constructive use. No longer used to illustrate a point or make social changes, words have simply become a way to communicate on the basest level, to insult or hurt each other. How many people do you know who toss around words like "love," "hate" and "low-fat"? Do they really have the power that they must of once had? It all depends on the context.

Someone trying to get something from someone else might evoke the word love to convince the other: "But, honey, I just love you so much." There isn't much meaning behind that word, other than personal gain. But, use "hate" in an emotionally charged environment, and the whole thing can erupt into a violent fiasco. It's a far cry from "I hate Captain Picard." The latter usually won't get you beaten to a bloody pulp, unless of course you are at a Star Trek convention, and then you're on your own.

Mass destruction, hate crimes and the like have taken over the way to get things accomplished. Instead of using words to create change, because we don't understand what they mean anymore, we use them to shift blame and illustrate our ignorance. The trend is moving towards getting attention with a bomb — then stating the "demands." Instead of demanding changes from others, we should facilitate the changes within ourselves.

So, by using words, supported and powerful, to get our points across, whether it be for the death penalty or colonizing Mars, things will be heard. Often action doesn't happen until later, but the seed is planted. The winds of change don't blow very strong at first, but when they do, there's no stopping the hurricane.

Most nosebleeds result from air drying the mucous membrane passage. Drying can occur from the septum or the two nasal chambers. A hefty sneeze, or a blowing can easily dislodge many fragile blood vessels close to the surface of the nose.

The causes of nosebleeds are often minor. However, they may be caused by disease such as a tumor or arteriosclerosis.

Rohypnol scare far from over

Q: Recently I have been having a lot of bloody noses. It is embarrassing and kind of scary. What is causing my nosebleeds and what can I do to prevent them? — Running Scared

Dear Running Scared,
For its size, the nose is one of the hardest-working parts in the body industry. Every minute it performs the important routine of first filtering out large impurities in the air we breathe, then humidifying and warming the air as it moves from the nasal passage to the throat and lungs. Is it any wonder that this little extremity sometimes becomes irritated?

Most nosebleeds are simply the result of air drying and irritating the mucous membranes of the nasal passage. Drying causes a crust to form on the septum, the front portion of the nose that separates the two nasal chambers. A small bump, a hefty sneeze, or a vigorous nose blowing can easily damage the many fragile blood vessels that lie close to the surface in this part of the nose.

The causes of nosebleeds are often minor. However, sometimes they may be caused by an underlying disease such as high blood pressure or arteriosclerosis. If you are concerned about the frequency of your nosebleeds or the quantity of blood lost, a trip to your physician is recommended. For most, though, a few preventive steps will decrease your incidence. Begin by removing all fingers and investing in a box of tissues. Try turning your head down and increasing the humidity of the air you breathe by using a humidifier or a vaporizer. Lightly swabbing your nasal septum with petroleum jelly once or twice daily will also help prevent drying.

If your nose does bleed, avoid blowing it for several hours to prevent the recurrence of another bloody nose. As a kid you might have been encouraged to "lie down" and "put ice on your nose — not anymore. Sitting or standing in an upright position actually slows the flow of blood because it decreases the blood pressure in the veins of the nose.

Some people think applying ice stops bleeding because vessels will constrict from the cold. This technique certainly isn't harmful, but it isn't effective in stopping the bleeding, either. Instead, take your thumb and index finger and pinch your nostrils together. Hold this position for 5 to 10 minutes while breathing through your mouth. The constant pressure on your septum should stop the flow of blood.

Q: What is the latest on Rohypnol, the so-called "date rape drug"? Is the roofies scare over?

— Safe and Secure?

Dear Safe:

There is both good news and bad news on the Rohypnol front. The good news is that Rohypnol, a sedative, has undergone a significant reformulation. The makers of Rohypnol, Hoffman-LaRoche Inc., in response to reports of abuse of the pill, have produced a formula that is less potent and easier to detect. The original version of this powerful tranquilizer dissolved quickly in being too hot and too cold, amnesia and disorientation within 20 to 30 minutes of ingestion.

Ultimately, the person passes out and may stay passed out from 8-24 hours. When they emerge from the sedating effects, they often have no memory of anything that happened while under the influence of the drug.

Taken alone, Rohypnol is not likely to be lethal. However, when mixed with alcohol, as it often is, the sedating effects on the central nervous system increase dramatically and become much more deadly.

Rohypnol addiction and withdrawal is another growing concern. The drug's reputation has branched out from being a weapon used against others to a drug that teens and young adults are taking themselves. Rohypnol is highly addictive with nasty withdrawal symptoms. Headache, nausea, extreme anxiety, irritability, confusion, convulsions and cardiac collapse are among the possible withdrawal effects a consistent recreational user can anticipate once he or she decides to quit.

More bad news about Rohypnol emerged earlier this fall with the discovery of a street manufactured "copy cat" pill. Home-brewed versions, like the original Rohypnol formula, are almost impossible to detect in drinks. As if these two versions weren't enough to worry about, yet another drug is being used to secretly sedate people. GHB, known in the clubs as "easy lay" or grievous bodily harm, produces a psychedelic effect at low doses, but has tranquilizing effects at higher doses.

For all of these reasons, you need to continue to exercise caution and protect yourself. Here's how:

- Do not leave any beverage unattended.
- Do not accept an open drink—especially from a stranger.
- Only drink from tamper-proof bottles or cans and make sure that you open them yourself.
- Return or immediately discard any beverage that looks or tastes suspicious.
- Do not leave a friend who is displaying any of the possible effects of this drug.
- If you are drinking alcohol, monitor your use. Alcohol impairs judgment, and you may not be as careful about who has access to your drink.
- If you believe that you or someone else has been exposed to Rohypnol, seek medical assistance immediately. Rohypnol can be detected in urine for about three days after ingestion.

beverages, leaving no sign of its presence.

The new formula dissolves much more slowly and leaves chunky, salt-size particles. When slipped into light-colored beverages such as water, 7-up or beer, the beverage takes on a bluish tint, whereas dark beverages become cloudy. Although most descriptions of Rohypnol tout it as "odorless and tasteless", both the new and original formulas do produce a subtle bitter taste when mixed with alcohol.

While these changes provide some comfort, "the scare" is far from over. Smuggled pills remain available on the streets and are still being used to secretly sedate unsuspecting men and women, leaving them vulnerable to crimes such as rape, assault and robbery. Ten times more potent than Valium, Rohypnol produces drowsiness, dizziness, impaired motor skills and judgment, simultaneous feelings of

Tut, Tut: Museum one huge mess

The museum is changing, but reforms are slow.
By Jasper Mortimer
Associated Press

CAIRO, Egypt — The art professor had waited three decades to see the Egyptian Museum, studying its contents through books in the apartheid years when no South African could visit Egypt. When he finally got to the world's greatest collection of Pharaonic artifacts, he was appalled. "Here is an international treasure house of objects of unrivaled quality," said Professor Neville Dubow of the University of Cape Town. "Yet the way they have been presented is nothing less than an international disgrace. "With the exception of the Tutankhamen treasures, a lot of the less popular stuff is behind dirty glass," he said, adding that the Fayoum portraits from Egypt's Roman period "look as if they have been left lying in a junk room."

The neglect of the museum hit the newspapers 18 months ago when a thief stole into the Tutankhamen room one night and unscrewed a display cabinet. Neither the room nor the cabinet were wired to an alarm. He was caught the next morning trying to hide priceless statuettes in the toilets. He had gold and jewels in his socks.

The museum is changing. But reform is slow. The director, Mohammed Saleh, disagrees with critics on how far the changes should go. A $3 million security and fire alarm system has been installed. Since Dubow's visit in September, the three rooms containing Tutankhamen's gold mask, Egyptian jewelry, and the artifacts from Tanis — a Pharaonic capital in northern Egypt — have been redesigned to the highest standards of display.

But in the other 100-odd galleries, the problems remain. Saleh — who bustles around the museum — says his biggest headache is the summer heat. In a city surrounded by desert, he has only 150 electric fans to lower the temperature in a building that covers a city block. A prime tourist attraction, the museum was the site of a September shooting that killed nine Germans and their Egyptian driver in a bus on the parking lot. Tourism

A vacuum cleaner, a fire extinguisher and other modern devices sit in a corner of the Egyptian Museum in Cairo April 4 next to artifacts from Egypt's pharaonic and Greco-Roman eras. Many critics claim that the museum is a disgrace, an international treasure trove of ancient objects of unrivaled quality displayed with little order, mistakes on the labels and very poor lighting.

has been slowly recovering since that and a November terrorist attack that killed 58 tourists outside a Pharaonic temple in the southern city of Luxor.

The Ministry of Culture wants to build a new Egyptian Museum near the Pyramids but does not have the $1 billion it would cost.

However, much can be done to improve the existing museum. Take the lack of light in the central atrium, for instance.

"It is almost impossible to see details on statuary in some areas of the atrium, and sometimes it is even difficult to read the text on a label," said David Silverman, the Egyptian curator at the University of Pennsylvania Museum.

In other galleries, the large windows let in too much light. Visitors peer through their own reflections in the display cabinet glass.

William Ward, the Cleveland, Ohio, designer who revamped the Tutankhamen and adjoining galleries, blacked out the windows and illuminated the items with lights diffused through frosted glass.

In the atrium, Ward would block out the windows behind the colossal statues of Amenhotep III and Queen Tiye, where the incoming light wrecks one's view. And he would use directed lights to "bring out the modeling in the sculptures."

But Ward says one cannot overhaul the museum's lighting without installing air-conditioning. Saleh says that would cost about $4.4 million, and proper lighting another $1.8 million.

Saleh says even if he had the funds, he would not block out every window, for that would destroy the "classical atmosphere" of the museum, which was completed in 1902.

The other big problem is the sheer quantity of exhibits: 140,148.

There are towering statues of pharaohs, hundreds of tiny carvings of gods, sandals made of sheet gold, frescoes of waterfowl and reeds, alabaster sculptures, coffins and children's rattles from thousands of years ago. But after a while the visitor feels pulled in all directions.

"There is too much," says Ward. "It is a warehouse."

Ward would take out 70 percent of the exhibits to better display the remainder. Kent Weeks, professor of Egyptology at the American University in Cairo, would remove about 80 percent.

"You have to plan for a very large number of tourists," says Weeks, because in the tourist season the museum is "like Harrods on sale day." Saleh agrees there should be fewer exhibits, but he would remove only 40 percent.

Dubow faults the museum for failing to provide the maps and data that would explain how, why and where the works were created.

VENEZUELA
Former coup leader, popular in presidential polls, scares the rich

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — A ban on visiting the United States and the scorn of his country's wealthy elite hasn't kept former coup leader Hugo Chavez from becoming a hero to millions of Venezuelans or rising to the top of the polls in this year's presidential race. His popularity is provoking predictions of doom from investors and the Venezuelan establishment, which contends that Chavez is a dictator-in-waiting who will bring back failed socialist policies.

The State Department, citing the 1992 coup attempt, said last week that Chavez had been barred from entering the United States, where he had wanted to address businessmen, academics and Wall Street investors.

Many investors fear Chavez, 43, will reverse Venezuela's free market reforms if elected in December by turning back the clock on recent privatizations and imposing new trade barriers.

As an army lieutenant colonel, Chavez led a Feb. 4, 1992, coup attempt against then-President Carlos Andres Perez. He was pardoned after spending two years in jail and formed a political movement based on the teachings of South American liberation hero Simon Bolivar.

Since entering the presidential race, Chavez has been drawing support from the poor and middle classes for his tough anti-corruption rhetoric.

INDONESIA
Indonesia announces reforms; students stage more protests

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — As student protesters scuffled with police at anti-government protests, Indonesia on Wednesday announced a string of economic reforms to meet a timetable laid out by the International Monetary Fund. Seeking to get foreign loans flowing again, the government said it had dropped restrictions on foreign investment in wholesale trade and taken steps to tighten up Indonesia's bankruptcy law.

The measures fall in line with terms of a $43 billion rescue package led by the IMF, which suspended the bailout because of concern that President Suharto was backsliding on reforms.

But for thousands of students who staged protests in at least seven cities, reform of Indonesia's battered economy must be accompanied by change in its rigid political system.

Many chanted slogans against Suharto, a former army general who has been in power since the 1960s.

At least 16 students were slightly injured in a scuffle with police at an Islamic university on Sumatra island, a campus employee said by telephone. And 15 students were arrested in a fight with security forces on Sulawesi island, local media said.

Discontent has been fueled by Indonesia's worst economic slump in three decades, which has pushed up inflation and unemployment. Despite daily student protests, most of Indonesia is peaceful, and the government is in firm control.

At a news conference in the presidential palace, Suharto's economic team said it had met a Wednesday deadline for a first batch of reforms required under a revised deal with the IMF.

SOUTH KOREA
Amid financial crisis, 25 Koreans a day kill themselves

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — An average of 25 South Koreans a day are committing suicide, with most believed driven to desperation by economic woes, officials said Wednesday.

Thousands of companies have collapsed, and the number of jobless people has doubled to more than 1.5 million since South Korea called in the International Monetary Fund in December to bail out its foundering economy. High interest rates and dried-up credit also left many families bankrupt.

Between January and March, 2,288 people committed suicide, the Grand Prosecutor's Office said. That reflects a 36 percent increase over the same period last year. South Korea has a population of 44 million.

Although it was impossible to know the exact motives of all suicides, many were believed caused by economic problems, prosecutors said.

In South Korean society, men often equate business failure or inability to support their family with dishonor.

College athletes win right to work

OVERLAND PARK, Kan. (AP) — Division I athletes may hold part-time jobs, the NCAA board of directors ruled today.
"It definitely passed," Bridgit Niland, head of the NCAA's student-athlete advisory committee, told The Associated Press.
The board, which consists of college presidents and holds ultimate power in the NCAA's new structure, met in Indianapolis and adopted the recommendation made last week by the NCAA management council.
The new rule takes effect Aug. 1, and a formal announcement was expected later in the day.
For the first time in decades, athletes at the roughly 300 Division I schools will be able to hold part-time jobs, even if they are arranged by their school's boosters. They cannot make more than $2,000 every year.
"This really shows the optimum the NCAA can operate at if it chooses to," said Niland, a former runner at the University of Buffalo. "It was a piece of legislation that was really thought through. They really did consider the welfare of the student-athlete instead of just saying they were."
Opponents of the rule, including many coaches and athletic administrators, fear the potential of abuse in which some athletes will be given money without working. Many are also worried that high-profile recruits will now demand jobs with scholarships.
"It's going to be a disaster," Kansas State basketball coach Tom Asbury said.
A similar right-to-work rule was adopted by majority vote of the NCAA's Division I schools in January 1997 in the last days of the NCAA's old governance structure.

USA BASKETBALL Duncan, Hardaway added to Dream Team IV

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Tim Duncan, the San Antonio Spurs' rookie center, and Miami's Tim Hardaway were added to the U.S. basketball team on Wednesday, completing the 12-member unit that will represent the United States at the World Championship in Greece this summer.
The first 10 members of the team were announced Oct. 30.
They are Vin Baker and Gary Payton of the Seattle SuperSonics; Terrell Brandon of the Milwaukee Bucks; Kevin Garnett and Tom Gugliotta of the Minnesota Timberwolves; Grant Hill of the Detroit Pistons; Allan Houston of the New York Knicks; Christian Laettner of the Atlanta Hawks; Glen Rice of the Charlotte Hornets and Chris Webber of the Washington Wizards.
Hill and Payton were on the 1996 U.S. "Dream Team" and Laettner played on the 1992 team as the only collegiate member.
Houston Rockets coach Rudy Tomjanovich is the head coach while Del Harris of the Los Angeles Lakers, George Washington University coach Mike Jarvis and University of Illinois coach Lon Kruger are assistant coaches.
The games will be held July 29-Aug. 9 at Athens, Greece.

Let there be lights

The softball team will play its first game under the brand new lights at the Hawkeye Softball Complex today.

By Tony Wirt
The Daily Iowan

On May 24, 1935, the Cincinnati Reds altered sports history forever when they took on the Philadelphia Phillies in the first night game in the major league baseball.
Sixty-three years later, the Iowa softball team will make a little history of its own tonight when the Hawkeyes play their first game under the new lights at the Hawkeye Softball Complex.
Iowa will host the Creighton Lady Blue Jays for a doubleheader, with the first game scheduled to start at 3 p.m.
With tomorrow's inaugural doubleheader, Iowa will become only the second softball team in the Big Ten with the option of playing night games. In fact, the Hawkeye softball complex is now the only outdoor field to have permanent lighting fixtures at Iowa.
"The team is really excited," freshman Melissa Stuber said. "This is a new step for our program. The improvements that are still to come look really good on the blueprints, too. A lot of people are doing a great job with this."
The lights are just one part of the Hawkeyes' "Grandstand Campaign."

"They would probably love to spoil this night, but we're not going to worry about that. We're just going to go out and play the way we know how."

Also making its debut today are 133 new stadium-style seats surrounding the home plate area. Two new sections of bleachers have also been added down each baseline to support the added crowds.
Musco Lighting, a company based in Oskaloosa, Ia., donated the lighting fixtures, worth $82,000. According to Assistant Sports Information Director Erik Snider, it is the largest gift in kind to the Women's Athletic Department.
In the past, Musco lights have lit up the Super Bowl, Rose Bowl, and the Daytona 500. They also bring in portable lights to Kinnick Stadium when the need arises.
"This is a big thrill. We've been waiting for these lights for a long time," assistant coach Pam Lee said. "We are very fortunate for this campaign and all that it has brought to the program."
Besides bringing great new facilities to the team, these new renovations should help bring in more quality players to carry on the Hawkeye tradition.
"This should definitely help us recruit," Lee said. "We've had a great

IOWA 3-7, ST. AMBROSE 0-8

Hawkeyes split yet again

St. Ambrose was the second NAIA team in as many weeks to gain a split with the Iowa baseball team.

By James Kramer
The Daily Iowan

St. Ambrose coach Jim Callahan didn't say his first-game ejection Wednesday was a ploy. But the way his team was playing, you had to wonder.
With the Fighting Bees on the verge of dropping a doubleheader opener, 3-0, to host Iowa, Callahan argued a third-strike call in the seventh inning and was tossed from the game by home-plate umpire Neils Johnson.
In Game 2 of the twin bill, Callahan's team came to life with 11 hits in an 8-7 extra-inning victory. St. Ambrose (15-15) had managed just three hits in their opening-game loss.
"I don't like to criticize the umpires," Callahan said. "But he was nonchalant the whole game."
"That did fire the team up. I don't get thrown out of many ball games."
Iowa's loss was its second in a week to an NAIA school. Last Tuesday, the Hawkeyes (17-16) dropped a game to Grand View.
Ian Theis, a walk-on freshman, pitched five and one-third innings of relief for the Game 2 victory. He allowed one run on eight hits to earn the victory.
Not bad for a guy who didn't play high school baseball.
"I get the job done," said Theis, a Davenport native. "That's why they put me in there."
St. Ambrose struck for five runs in the second inning of the nightcap to take a 6-1 lead. In the bottom half of

McIlravy focuses on U.S. title

Former Hawkeye Lincoln McIlravy is expected to be the top seed heading into this weekend's U.S. Freestyle Open Championships.

By James Kramer
The Daily Iowan

The 1997 wrestling season was a little too long for Lincoln McIlravy. So long, in fact, that he began to lose interest.
McIlravy won his third NCAA championship for Iowa last year, then won the United States Freestyle Open, then earned a spot on the U.S. international team with a victory at the World Team Trials.
By the time he had a chance to catch his breath, McIlravy was at the World Championships in Russia, where he failed to place.
"Last year at the World Championships, I was not real excited about wrestling," said McIlravy, who graduated from Iowa last year. "It had been such a long year."
Now as a volunteer assistant coach for the Hawkeyes, McIlravy has time to concentrate all of his time to freestyle training. While at Iowa, McIlravy had to focus on folkstyle — the technique used in collegiate wrestling.
Starting Friday, McIlravy will showcase the results of his extensive work in Orlando, Fla., as he defends his U.S. Freestyle Open title. The three-day tournament concludes Sunday.
McIlravy has competed in the U.S. Open since 1995, but this one will be different.
"I've never devoted a whole year just to freestyle, until this year," he said. "Now it's 100-percent freestyle training. Technically, I'm a lot better; position-wise, I'm a lot better; and

IOWA MEN'S GYMNASTICS

No. 2 finish special for Dunn

Iowa men's gymnastics coach Tom Dunn has officially turned the Hawkeyes into a national power.

By Megan Manfull
The Daily Iowan

It wasn't for easy for ESPN to conduct its interview with Iowa gymnastics coach Tom Dunn at the NCAA Championships last week. The noise bouncing off the walls of the Bryce Jordan Center made hearing a tough task.
And the fact that a group of Hawkeye fans had gathered near the interview and were shouting the chant, "We love Tom," didn't help either.

Members of the Iowa men's gymnastics team celebrate their second place trophy at last weekend's NCAA Championships at Penn State.

The Hawkeyes were in the middle of their route to a second-place national finish — their best since 1969 — and the fans knew who was in the driver's seat. And they wanted to make sure the national television audience knew as well.
"Tom would never ask for any of that," Bonnie Agnew, mother of freshman Kevin Agnew, said.

Iowa fans flock to NAAs

By Megan Manfull
The Daily Iowan

Former Iowa gymnastics co-captain Mark Kuglitsch couldn't resist the temptation. He just had to be at the NCAA Championships to watch his alma mater compete for its first national title since 1969.
So he packed his graduate books, headed to Cedar Rapids, and hopped on a plane bound for Happy Valley, Pennsylvania — without even telling his mom.
In his eyes it was all worth it. He had to cheer on the Hawkeyes.
"A lot of these guys used to be on the team with me and I knew it was worth my time and energy to support them," said Kuglitsch, who competed from

McLean, who was charged with the walk, the winning run and the loss. "It wasn't the top of the eighth (that hurt), it was the second inning when we walked two guys and misplayed a bunt," Iowa coach Scott Broghamer said. "If they don't score five, we win in regulation."

The Hawkeyes certainly hit well enough to win the second game. Ramsey, Jon Holte and Zach Grabinski each had three hits. Ramsey homered down the left-field line for Iowa's first run. Iowa's problem was getting its runners home. Ten Hawkeyes were left on base in the nightcap. Iowa left nine on base in Game 1, but it didn't play a factor thanks to St. Ambrose's dormant offense. Four Hawkeye pitchers combined for the three-hit shutout, with Troy Wulf getting credit for the win. For the afternoon, Iowa utilized 10 different pitchers. "We just needed kids to get some innings," Broghamer said. "And they did a good job except for the one inning in the second game." Iowa scored its opening game runs on RBI singles by Eric Martinez and Ramsey and a sacrifice fly by Nate Prese. Grabinski and Ramsey both had five-hit days for the Hawkeyes, who play at Illinois this weekend in a four-game Big Ten series.

Dunn/ Coaching staff key to Hawkeye success

enjoy doing and Iowa is nice enough to pay me for it," Dunn said. "It's just been a fun year. It's fun to win and it's been a fun group to work with."

In his 17 years at the helm of the Iowa program, Dunn has converted the Hawkeyes into a national powerhouse. Only one time has an Iowa squad coached by Dunn not finished amongst the Top 4 in the Big Ten. And Iowa is one of only three schools in the country to qualify for 13 of the past 14 NCAA Championships.

But last weekend's national meet, according to senior Matt Thurber, was different for the veteran head coach. "This was the most fun I've seen Tom have at a meet," Thurber said. "He always paces, usually back and forth at meets. After the pommel horse, it was the most relaxed I've seen him. He actually sat down with the team and was just having a great time watching us do what we do best."

Anthony Petrocelli, Sr. has been a fan of Iowa gymnastics ever since his son, Anthony Jr., joined the team two years ago. And the praise he holds for the team and the program, is even stronger for Dunn.

"Iowa has stability like no other team in the nation because of Tom," said Petrocelli. "He has brought in incredible assistants and he's very impressive in his quiet and subtle way. The guys really feel they have to produce for him."

Over the past few years, Dunn has been joined by Russian Olympians Alex Kolyvanov and Dmitri Trough. Kolyvanov joined Dunn five years ago, after competing with the Unified gymnastics team that won the gold medal in the 1992 Olympic Games in Barcelona.

After receiving many honors during his career, Trough was forced to retire from gymnastics in 1995 with a knee injury. But after surgery, he made a remarkable comeback, joined the 1996 Russian Olympic team, and helped them upset the highly favored Chinese to win Gold in Atlanta.

"If Tom's the architect, Alex and Dmitri are the foundation," junior Lou Datilio said. "Just having them in the gym helps. They tell you precisely what they think. And when they say we're good, we know we're good because they've been the best in the world. They still are the best in the world."

Following California's second straight NCAA title last weekend,

Illinois coach Yoshi Hayasaki predicted that if any team could knock California off the platform in the near future, it could be the Hawkeyes, led by Dunn.

"His coaching's consistent and his team's consistently up in the national ranking," Hayasaki said. "He's that kind of coach. And as long as his team says healthy and he continues bringing in good athletes, his turn to be a national champion is going to come really soon."

Dunn said he is grateful to his assistants and has enjoyed the compliments, but there's only one thing he hopes this season is leading up to.

"I just hope it's a building block for a national championship next year," he said. And if it is, then imagine the roars.

Fans/ "Special chemistry" unites team, followers

1991-'96. "I knew they had such a good chance of winning it all. I just hope my mom doesn't read about this."

Kriglitsch wasn't the only one attracted to following the '98 Hawkeye squad. Other past Hawkeyes, along with parents, relatives, friends, and former coaches drove the 800 miles to the NCAA meet. And their presence was heard.

When Illinois coach Yoshi Hayasaki walked into the Bryce Jordan Center for the first time and heard the roars of the Fighting Illini's faithful, he was quite proud. The thrill lasted about a minute, as the Hawkeyes entered behind him. "Iowa overwhelmed us," Hayasaki said.

Even Iowa coach Tom Dunn was impressed. "It's never been quite like this," Dunn said. "I really never envisioned tailgating and that kind of stuff." While tailgating kicked off meets at this season, cow bells, pom-poms, homemade signs and personal cheers highlighted the meets.

For ten years, East Moline native Rick Hamilton has followed Iowa gymnastics. And when his son, sophomore Brian Hamilton, joined Iowa's highly touted recruiting class of 1996, he saw a distinct change in support.

"When the sophomores came in with their rowdy parents and fans the whole nature of the situation changed," said Rick Hamilton. "I've heard it from gymnasts and coaches across the country that Iowa has changed the nature of gymnastics and taken it to a new level."

While Dunn said crowds grow as teams win, the Iowa fans said their support goes beyond the team's won-lost record.

"They are just young and exciting," said Larry Engstrom, a resident of East Moline that has followed the sport for decades. "The other teams seem to be more conservative and structured, where as this team is loose and it looks like they have fun."

For 13 hours, Iowa senior Ellen Sunshine and some of her friends followed the Hamilton's fan en route to Penn State. As a freshman, she met a few of the guys in the dorms and became close friends. Ever since, she's become one of their biggest supporters.

"The guys really appreciate everyone's support," Sunshine said. "And everybody kept saying, 'It's so awesome you came this far.' But I just kept telling them that after everything they've done for me, it's worth it to come and support them."

Sophomore Todd Strada's childhood coach, Jeff Robinson, has traveled around the country with hundreds of gymnasts and supporters. But after following the Hawkeyes the past couple of years, he's found unique support encompassing them. "It's like when they went out to eat after Friday night's meet," Robinson said. "They go downstairs, they run everybody out and they rock the place."

"They have a special chemistry, and that happens very rarely. What the Iowa fans have going for them right now is not the rule it is by far the exception."

And in the middle of the throng of fans are the competitors — the people truly holding the supporters together. Bonnie Agnew, mother of freshman Kevin Agnew, has loved the experience the Hawkeyes have created for the fans.

"I've never met a group of young men with such different personalities, yet every member has integrity, commitment and friendship," Bonnie Agnew said. "This team's given me so much joy, pleasure, heartache and tears. It's just been a wonderful year."

GOLF
Rejuvenated Daly takes game to Greensboro
 GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — John Daly's campaign to stay sober is in its 13th month, and his golf game has yet to come around. "It has been very, very difficult," he said. "Everything is a whole new feeling. Like today, if I was still doing what I did I would be out in a short sleeve shirt and I wouldn't be cold at all." Golf's biggest hitter spoke Wednesday while preparing in 50-degree temperatures for the Greater Greensboro Chrysler Classic. In 1991, he played the Skins Games in short sleeves on windy, 38-degree day. Besides feeling little aches and pains in the morning and being cold, it's just a better feel," Daly said of being sober. "It has just been taking a long time to master it, it's like starting all over again." Daly's late-night drinking binge at the March 1997 Players Championship in Florida sent him into alcoholic rehabilitation and cost him half of last season. Daly, one of golf's most popular and recognizable players, was faced with changing his lifestyle of giving up the game. "I wake up at 4:30 or 5 o'clock in the morning now when I used to get in at that time," said Daly, who won the 1991 PGA Championship and 1995 British Open. "It definitely is a different way of life, but I know it's a better one." Daly, who turns 32 on Tuesday, hasn't won on the PGA Tour since that British Open. However, victories are a distant second to his battle with alcoholism. "It would be nice," Daly said when asked about winning. "But I am just hungry to play and be as competitive as I possibly can. I still am not expecting a whole lot. I have accomplished a lot of goals this year that I never really felt I could, like coming back."

WORLD CUP SOCCER
United States bounces back in 3-0 over Austria VIENNA, Austria (AP) — After leading the United States over Austria 3-0 Wednesday night with a goal and two assists, Claudio Reyna said the win was at least on par with February's upset of World Cup champion Brazil. "This," he said, "was perhaps the best performance for us this year. We put on the pressure and used our chances." Since a 1-0 upset of Brazil on Feb. 10, the United States (5-3-1 this year) had lost to Mexico, the Netherlands and Belgium, and tied Paraguay. Against the Austrians, the Americans were missing their top scorer, Eric Wynalda, who had arthroscopic surgery on his left knee last week and isn't expected back until mid-May. But Reyna provided the offensive spark in the second half, feeding Frankie Hedjuk and Brian McBride for goals. It gave the team some badly needed confidence heading into final preparations for the World Cup, where the Americans play Germany, Iran and Yugoslavia in the first round this June. Reyna said the victory was important because Austria's style is similar to that of the Germans. Italy may break ties with Nike ROME (AP) — Leftist lawmakers are trying to force the Italian soccer federation to drop Nike as a sponsor of the national team, accusing the company of abusing its workers. "Our soccer team is a major national symbol. It should not have a sponsor that exploits child labor," Alfio Nicoltra, an official of the Communist Refoundation party, said Wednesday. The party has asked sports minister Walter Veltroni to cancel Nike Italy's $4 million sponsorship and presented him with reports that allege abuses of child and women workers in Indonesia and Vietnam. The information comes from a January 1997 audit by the firm of Ernst & Young, and from U.S. labor and human rights groups. WNBA Orlando, Minnesota get league franchises NEW YORK (AP) — The WNBA will expand to Orlando and Minnesota in 1999, bringing the league to 12 teams. The addition of the two teams is conditional on the sale of 5,000 season tickets by Sept. 1, league president Val Ackerman announced today. The 10-team WNBA, owned and operated by the NBA, begins its second season on June 11 with new franchises in Detroit and Washington. Nicknames and logos are expected to be announced in a few months. The rival ABL this year announced that it was expanding to Chicago and Nashville, with both franchises starting play in November for the league's third season.

Will he or won't he?

As the playoffs start, the question of whether Michael Jordan will play next year remains unanswered.

By Rick Gano
Associated Press

CHICAGO — His body, exquisitely sculpted but still 35 years old, has been pounded repeatedly during a season that started in October and could yet last until June. Planes and practices, jump shots and jostling.

But it is one question that wears Michael Jordan more than anything else. At every stop, before and after every game, it is always the same: What's next?

Jordan has said he will not play next year if Bulls coach Phil Jackson is not back. General manager Jerry Krause has said it is time for Jackson to leave, and the ex-hippie, Zen-practicing coach is ready to take a year off.

So that ought to be it. Right?

Who knows? Jordan has at times appeared to hedge. And he's changed his mind before. And almost no one wants to believe basketball's greatest player, a man whose salary alone has totaled $63 million the last two years, is going to hang up his flying shoes.

So the question keeps coming, over and over and over again.

"It's a lot of the same old questions I had to deal with city-to-city," Jordan said. "It gets monotonous, although I may have the same answers. It's taken too much time to talk about something that really hasn't been decided."

He's been on top of the NBA as its best player for years, even after taking a nearly two-year respite from the game when he experimented with baseball.

Comebacks from retirement often produce players who are just a shadow of what they once were. Jordan, who altered his game the second time around and has made great use of a fallaway jumper that is unblockable, has won two championships since coming back. This season, he captured his 10th scoring title.

What's it like to guard him? "Hell," says Nick Anderson, the Orlando Magic guard. "You ever been to hell before? You don't want to go."

Now Jordan's favorite time has arrived — the playoffs. Knowing the Bulls need 15 more wins for their sixth title of the decade, he'll be revitalized for the postseason, which begins Friday against the New Jersey Nets.

The playoffs, Jordan says, start "with your own willingness to push yourself." And no one has done that better.

His career playoff average of 33.6 is the best in NBA history. He has made game-winning shots in the postseason an art form.

"Having him means you've got the mental edge over every team you play, because he's the best," teammate Steve Kerr said. "Even if you lose a game or are down in a game, you've got him on your side. You're always in the game. Until we lose or get knocked off, we will always have that."

Associated Press

Michael Jordan gestures following practice on Wednesday, at the Berto Center in Deerfield, Ill., as the team prepares to challenge the New Jersey Nets in the first-round of the NBA playoffs beginning Friday in Chicago.

That this might indeed be what Jackson calls the Bulls' "last dance" will make Jordan even more passionate in his quest for another title.

"I think the last championship is always the hardest and probably the most gratifying because of the expectations you deal with over the whole course of the season," Jordan said. "My first (championship) year maybe there weren't expectations there are now. Now we've won five and everybody expects a sixth because of the way we've played. "That makes it even harder to maintain the level of being on top of the world for so long."

So, what if this is the end? "I think it would be a terrible loss for the game," said Chuck Daly, the Orlando coach whose champion Detroit Pistons teams of the last '80s often frustrated Jordan, for years denying him a shot at a title.

"I think he is probably at the prime of his game," Daly said. "I think he is probably playing the best basketball he's ever played in his life. I think it would be unfortunate if he left the game."

McIlravy/Former Iowa champ heads to U.S. Open

strength-wise, I'm a lot better. So I'm real excited."

The Philip, S.D., native will be the No. 1 seed in Orlando, while Townsend Saunders of Phoenix, Ariz., is ranked second. Former Iowa wrestler Terry Steiner likely will be seeded fourth.

Since last fall's world tournament, McIlravy has enjoyed nothing but success. In late January, he won a title at the Yarygin Tournament in Russia, and earlier this month he won a gold medal at the World Cup in Stillwater, Okla.

"I've been competing really well this year," said McIlravy, who is sponsored by Gateway 2000. "I'm just excited to keep it going."

The winners of this weekend's Open become the No. 1 seeds at the World Team Trials, which will be held June 12-13 in Waterloo. The winners of the Trials compete for the U.S. at this year's Goodwill Games and the World Championships.

In essence, the U.S. Open is not the end-all of tournaments — but it is important.

"If you're the No. 1 guy at the World Team Trials, everyone else wrestles to get to you," McIlravy said. "So it's a huge advantage to win this weekend."

Last year at the U.S. Open, McIlravy was not the favorite to win. He was just one of the guys. Now he is the guy everyone else will try to beat.

"People will be shooting for me," he said. "But in my own mind, I'm shooting for them. At this level, there are guys that are really good and there are reasons they're at this level."

Dan Gable, the former Iowa coach who won a world title and an Olympic gold medal, thinks McIlravy has what it takes to do the same.

"If he properly prepares for these matches, he'll be okay," Gable said. "These matches are five-minute matches (compared to seven in college), so if you're not ready, a lesser wrestler could beat you."

"He's pretty dang good right now. ... He could have won (a world title) last year, but he wasn't ready."

McIlravy said he is currently wrestling better than he ever has in his life, which is good news to U.S. wrestling fans. Last year, Les Gutches was the country's sole world champion.

"I'm having more fun at it, too," McIlravy said.

Several ex-Iowa wrestlers are expected to compete in Orlando this weekend, including Terry and Troy Steiner, Bill Zadick, Daryl Weber and Mike Mena.

Two-time world champion Terry Brands will not compete this year, but former Hawkeyes remain a big part of the U.S. field.

"We hold up our own international," Gable said. "Without Iowa, they'd be down for numbers."

1998 NBA OPENING DAY PLAYOFFS PREVIEW

(AP) — The team with the best record in the NBA opens the playoffs Thursday night, and it's not the champion Chicago Bulls.

Utah quietly beat out the Bulls for the best regular-season record, meaning the Jazz will have the homecourt advantage for every playoff series, including the opener against the Houston Rockets.

Three other series also start Thursday: Cleveland at Indiana, Atlanta at Charlotte and San Antonio at Phoenix.

On Friday, it's New Jersey at Chicago, New York at Miami, Minnesota at Seattle and Portland at the Los Angeles Lakers.

All series in the first round are best-of-5.

SPURS VS. SUNS

Phoenix and San Antonio had identical 56-26 records, using different routes to get there. The Suns won 12 of their last 13 games while the Spurs won their last three after dropping three of four.

Both teams enjoyed giant turnarounds. With David Robinson injured, the Spurs missed the playoffs a year ago but won the draft lottery and came away with Tim Duncan, who was NBA Rookie of the Month six straight times and led the league with 57 double-doubles.

The Suns recovered from an 0-13 start to squeeze into the playoffs last season at 40-42 and made a 16-game improvement on that this season. Phoenix earned the home-court advantage by winning three of the four regular-season meetings.

HAWKS VS. HORNETS

Atlanta swept the four games this season by an average of nearly 17 points, but Hawks coach Lenny Wilkens says that doesn't matter much.

"You make everyone aware that nothing should be taken for granted, and there are lots of examples we can point to and that you have to make your players aware of," Wilkens said. "We're going to go in confident."

Charlotte coach Dave Cowens hopes the Hornets can turn things around.

"We're going to have to make changes. We're going to have to make adjustments," Cowens said. "They're not going to have to do anything."

CAVALIERS VS. PACERS

Indiana expects 7-foot-4 Rik Smits back. He played in just four of the Pacers' last 12 games because of foot problems and a family death in his native Netherlands.

"He'll be playing," coach Larry Bird said. "We'll see how he reacts. "We anticipate he'll be out there playing."

Smits helped the Pacers to a franchise-record 58 wins this season.

"They have a big, physical frontline, and that's one of the reasons they have had the success they've had," Cleveland coach Mike Fratello said. "It is something that we are aware of, we'll pay attention to, and all you can do is go out and do the best you can do in the playoff games."

The teams split four games during the season.

ROCKETS VS. JAZZ

This will be the fourth time in the last five seasons the Rockets and Jazz have gone against each other in the playoffs, and it could be the last hurrah for Houston.

Clyde Drexler will be coaching the University of Houston next year. Hakeem Olajuwon, who missed 35 games because of injuries, is playing on aching knees and Charles Barkley is trying to play through a hernia.

The Rockets struggled through a tough season, finishing at 500, 21 games behind Utah in the Midwest Division.

"It's a new season," Houston coach Rudy Tomjanovich said. "We can still have a successful year."

The Rockets get no sympathy from the Jazz.

"They were the champions just a couple of seasons ago, and that (aura) isn't something that you lose," Utah guard Jeff Hornacek said.

Ken Caminiti hit a home run in the 14th inning as San Diego kept a 3-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs, the Padres' fourth win in five games.

San Diego is 5-0 in its final at-bat games decided by two runs. The Padres have opponents 18-2 at home.

Padres 3, Cubs 2, 14 innings

CHICAGO (AP) — Late-inning heroics are nothing new for the San Diego Padres.

Ken Caminiti hit a go-ahead single in the 14th inning Wednesday as San Diego kept its hot start with a 3-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs, the Padres' fourth win in five games.

At 15-4, San Diego is off to its best start ever, topping the 1984 NL champions, who began 14-5.

"We've had a lot of tight games like this and we've come out on top," Tony Gwynn said.

San Diego is 5-0 in games decided in its final at-bat and 10-2 in games decided by two runs or fewer. The Padres have outscored opponents 18-2 after the eighth inning.

Caminiti also hit an RBI single in the first inning nearly four hours before he connected on the game-winner. He said the Padres were still thinking about Tuesday night's 5-3 loss to the Cubs.

"We were upset," Caminiti said. "We didn't have that comeback thrill. When they tied it today, we didn't put our heads down. This team was ready to go for as long as it took."

With the score 2-all, Amaury Telemaco (0-1) walked Quilvio Vera in the 14th and Steve Finley singled in front of a diving Matt Mieske in left. Caminiti, who also drove in a run in the first, hit a looping single to center and Vera scored easily when Lance Johnson's throw was off the mark.

Brian Boehringer (3-1) pitched one scoreless inning, and Carlos Reyes pitched a perfect 14th for his first save.

"Everybody's busting their butts, throwing up zeros," Reyes said. "It motivates you. You say, 'I'm not going to be the guy who gives it up.'"

Chicago lost for just the third time in 11 games at Wrigley Field this season.

"You obviously want to win every game," Cubs starter Kevin Tapani said, "but San Diego has a tough rotation. I think, looking around this room, we're going to win more games this way than we'll lose."

Padres starter Joey Hamilton allowed two runs and five hits in seven-plus innings, walked five and struck out none.

Tapani, who retired 18 straight at one stretch, gave up two runs and four hits in seven innings, struck out five and walked one. He is unbeaten at Wrigley Field in nine career starts.

San Diego took a 2-0 lead in the first. Finley reached on a fielder's choice, advanced on Tony Gwynn's single and scored on Caminiti's single. Wally Joyner then singled in Gwynn, who had three hits.

Mark Grace hit a sacrifice fly in the sixth following Mickey Moran-dini's single and Sammy Sosa's double. Sosa, 3-for-6 in the game, was thrown out at third by Greg Vaughn trying to advance on Grace's fly to left.

Chicago tied the score in the eighth when Hamilton walked Johnson, Morandini sacrificed against Sterling Hitchcock and Sosa singled.

Phillies 5, Reds 4

PHILADELPHIA — Tyler Green survived a rocky first inning and Doug Glavine homered Wednesday night as the Philadelphia Phillies snapped a six-game losing streak with a 5-4 win over the Cincinnati Reds.

Glavine's homer off Gabe White (0-3) snapped a 4-4 tie in the fourth inning.

Green (2-1) allowed four runs and five hits in the first before blanking the Reds on four hits over the next six innings. After walking 12 in his previous eight innings, Green walked just one in his seven innings.

Ricky Bottalico put two on in the ninth before striking out Barry Larkin and getting Eddie Taubensee to pop up. Bottalico then got Willie Greene to foul out to the catcher for his third save.

Dmitri Young went 2-for-3 with an RBI for the Reds.

Reds starter Mark Hutton, making his first start of the season, gave up four runs and six hits in 2 1-3 innings.

Taubensee, Bret Boone, Young and Hutton had RBI singles in the Reds' first.

The Phillies closed 4-3 in the second on Desi Relaford's RBI groundout. Green's two-out double drove in the second run, before Glavine singled in the third.

Philadelphia tied it in the third when Mike Lieberthal tripled and scored on Mark Lewis' single to chase Hutton.

Pirates 5, Giants 2

PITTSBURGH — The Pittsburgh Pirates stopped their longest losing streak in five years, getting three hits from Kevin Young and an effective start by Jose Silva to beat San Francisco 5-2 Wednesday night.

Pittsburgh's seven-game losing streak, a byproduct of poor starting pitching, was its first since June 1993. The Pirates haven't lost eight in a row since August 1991, the season they won 98 games.

Young — in a 5-for-32 slump beforehand — had a solo homer, an RBI double and a single off Giants starter Danny Darwin (1-2), who is 0-3 against Pittsburgh over the last two seasons.

The Giants have lost five of six overall and have won only one of their last six against Pittsburgh dating to last season.

Silva (2-2) became the first Pirates starter to pitch into the seventh inning since Jon Lieber on April 14, throwing six shutout innings before tiring in the seventh. Pirates starters were 0-5 with a 9.38 ERA during the losing streak.

Rich Loiselle earned his fifth save with a scoreless ninth.

Silva departed after left fielder Al Martin was charged with a two-base error for dropping J.T. Snow's fly ball and Stan Javier doubled. Marc Wilkins came on to get the next three outs despite surrendering Rey Sanchez's sacrifice fly.

Silva struck out eight, walked none and allowed two unearned runs over six-plus innings.

Darwin was in trouble from the start as each of the first six Pittsburgh batters hit drives to the warning track, with Jason Kendall and Young producing a run with consecutive two-out doubles off the center-field fence.

Young, 4-for-6 with two homers lifetime against Darwin, led off the fourth with his third homer and second in three at-bats. He also homered in the ninth inning Tuesday.

Washington defeats Boston, 3-1, in opening game

■ The NHL Playoffs kicked off Wednesday night with six first-round matchups.

WASHINGTON (AP) -- A hush fell over the MCI Center when Peter Bondra limped off the ice midway through the second period. It seemed the Washington Capitals' perpetual run of injuries had hit a new low at exactly the wrong time. "He said, 'Coach, I broke my leg,'" coach Ron said. "I'm calloused to hearing things like that, because I've heard them far too often here. I kept my fingers crossed and hoped that it wasn't that bad."

It wasn't. Doctors said it was only a twisted ankle, and a roar rippled across the arena when the 52-goal scorer, the centerpiece of the Capitals' offensive threat, came back at the start of the third.

As it turned out, Bondra wasn't needed in that final period. Washington's tenacious defense and goaltender Olaf Kolzig held off Boston in a 3-1 victory in Wednesday's Game 1 of the first-round Eastern Conference series. But if he were lost for the series -- and he's not sure he'll be back for Game 2 -- it would severely dampen the Capitals' hopes of breaking their run of playoff misery.

"If he's out for one game, it probably won't make much of a difference," defenseman Mark Tinordi said. "But over the series ..." While Bondra's departure and return were very visible, it was the disappearance of the Bruins' leading scorer, Jason Allison, and the rest of the young Boston attack that made the difference in the game.

Allison, who had 83 points during the regular season, was held to just one shot by defenders Tinordi and Calle Johansson. Kolzig made 27 saves, and the only goal he allowed came off a teammate's skate as he outdueled his best friend Byron Dafeo, who had 24 saves.

sity of the game," said coach Pat Burns, noting the lack of postseason experience among the players.

"There were players who didn't know what they were getting into, and we've learned," Brian Bellows and Sergei Gonchar accounted for a 2-0 lead.

Sabres defeat Philly in Game One

■ The home team lost in Philadelphia on Wednesday night, while Buffalo came out on top.

PHILADELPHIA (AP) -- Coach Lindy Ruff said he needed his smallest Buffalo Sabres to play big against the NHL's largest team, the Philadelphia Flyers.

Donald Audette, the smallest Sabre at 5-foot-8, grew in his coach's eyes by scoring the game-winning goal as Buffalo beat Philadelphia 3-2 to take the first game of their NHL playoff series Wednesday night.

Audette slapped in a rebound from the side of the net with 8:17 left after the Flyers erased a 2-0 deficit with goals 19 seconds apart earlier in the period.

"It's been one of our characteristics down the stretch," Ruff said. "We've showed we can score some goals late in games to win or at least tie them."

Audette got the winner after Flyers goalie Sean Burke flopped to stop a shot from the point. The rebound trickled to the side of the net, and Audette lifted the puck over the fallen goalie from a tough angle.

"I just went to the net," Audette said. "It was definitely important to get it, because we had worked too hard to get the 2-0 lead."

Star goalie Dominik Hasek made

Buffalo's Donald Audette is mugged by Vaclav Varada after scoring the winning goal against Philadelphia.

22 saves overall, but had one rough spot when the Flyers rallied from a 2-0 deficit to tie the game.

"To come back the way we did, it's a tough loss," Flyers coach Roger Neilson said, noting his team was 0-for-6 on the power play. "We have to get the power play working. That is a key."

Michal Grosek and Wayne Primeau also scored for Buffalo, while Rod Brind'Amour and Chris Gratton got Philadelphia's goals.

Game 2 is Friday night in Philadelphia.

Hasek stopped the first 20 shots before the Flyers beat him on their next two shots to tie the game. But Philadelphia managed only six shots for the period.

Brind'Amour made it 2-1 at 8:29. His wrist shot from the top of the left faceoff circle beat Hasek, who was screened by Eric Lindros, high to the stick side.

Gratton also beat Hasek high to the stick side. Alone in the slot, Gratton shot a 25-footer that seemed to catch the Sabres goalie off-guard.

program for years, and now we have facilities to match it. This is going to bring us a lot of things that other schools don't have, and a lot of recruits are attracted to that."

"While the improvements to the Hawkeye Softball Complex are coming from many generous donations from Iowa fans, the team is quick to give credit to the tradition that players past and present have built at this University. Iowa has gained national exposure by reaching the College World Series each of the past three seasons."

"We're really benefiting from past successes," Lee said. "It is a long process building a program, and this team feels very fortunate." These sentiments are not lost among the underclassmen on the current Hawkeye team.

"While I'm really looking forward to this, I feel bad for the seniors," Stuber said. "They won't get the opportunity to take advantage of all these changes, and they were the ones who paved the way for all this."

"While no team needs extra motivation playing against the Hawkeyes, the Lady Jays, who will come to Iowa City with an impressive 24-10 record, are looking to put a damper on this festive night."

"They would probably love to spoil this night, but we're not going to worry about that," Stuber said. "We're just going to go out and play the way we know how."

Coming off a sweep of Wisconsin where the Hawkeye bats pounded out 15 runs in two games, Iowa will be riding a wave of momentum into today's doubleheader.

"We came out and hit Wisconsin hard," Stuber said. "That has really given us a confidence boost. Hopefully that can carry over and we can keep doing what we are capable of doing."

After the games with Creighton, Iowa's biggest test of the year looms on the horizon. The Hawkeyes will travel to Ann Arbor, Mich. to take on the Big Ten leading Wolverines, currently ranked second in the nation.

To stay in the Big Ten title race, the second place Hawkeyes need to take at least two of the three games at Michigan to keep in the title race. That fact, along with the hoopla surrounding the first night game, make for a lot of high intensity games packed into a few short days.

"Playing college sports is about how you handle pressure," Stuber said. "We don't worry about what's down the road. We're taking things one game at a time, and that way the pressure doesn't build up on you."

Red Wings defeat Coyotes, 6-3

■ Game One of the playoffs went to the defending champion Detroit Red Wings.

DETROIT (AP) -- Detroit opened defense of its Stanley Cup championship in high gear Wednesday night as Joe Kocur scored two goals in the Red Wings' 6-3 win over the Phoenix Coyotes.

The Red Wings also got some payback on an old antagonist: Nikolai Khabibulin.

Detroit, hoping to become the first NHL team in six years to repeat as Cup champion, scored three times in the first 13 minutes and blew it open with three more goals in the second period.

Nicklas Lidstrom, Kocur and Sergei Fedorov scored first-period goals for the Red Wings, who ended 42 years of frustration by capturing the Cup in 1997. Darren McCarty, Kocur and Kirk Maltby scored in the second as the Red Wings chased Khabibulin, the goalie who caused them so much anguish in a first-round series two years ago.

Rick Tocchet scored in the first period, while Cliff Ronning and Bob Corkum scored in the third for the Coyotes, who haven't advanced beyond the first round of the playoffs since 1987, when they were the Winnipeg Jets.

Game 2 will be played Friday night at Joe Louis Arena. Action in the best-of-7 series then shifts to Phoenix for games Sunday and April 28.

Four key Detroit players -- Doug Brown, Brendan Shanahan, Kris Draper and Brent Gilchrist -- sat out with injuries, but clearly weren't needed.

Lidstrom's goal came at 5:31, eight seconds after Murray Baron was sent off for slashing Vyacheslav Kozlov, giving Detroit a two-man advantage. Lidstrom, at the top of the left circle, blasted it past Khabibulin low on the stick side.

Kocur never appeared to see the puck on his first goal. Martin Lapointe's shot hit Kocur's left skate and the puck deflected across the goal line. It was the first goal in 41 games for Kocur, who hadn't scored since Dec. 31.

Just 1:01 later, the Coyotes, who extended the Red Wings to six games in a first-round series that ended the franchise's run in Detroit's Joe Kocur (26) is congratulated by teammate Anders Eriksson after scoring a goal in the first period against Phoenix.

Winnipeg two years ago, made it 2-1. Tocchet's shot from the left circle went between Chris Osgood's legs.

Fedorov made it 3-1 when he knocked in a loose puck in front of the crease.

Go, Daddy-o!

Swing music is making a comeback across the nation and Big Bad Voodoo Daddy brings it to Iowa City.

By Stacy Atchison
 The Daily Iowan

As Vince Vaughn would say, "Swing music is all grown up. It's so money." Big Bad Voodoo Daddy, one of the bands responsible for catapulting swing music into the current music scene, is scheduled to perform to a sold-out crowd at the Union bar, 121 E. College St., early Saturday night. Whether the ticket holder is 18 or 50, this show will undoubtedly get all bodies grooving to the contemporary jive labeled neo-swing.

"It's flyin'," said the Union bar owner Joe Muran. "I love the look of swing — it's 'let's get goin' and have a fun time' type of music ... and it will get everyone up and dancing. I won't be surprised if lots of people get all dressed up." Neo-swing's roots reach across the nation to California, where it was born in the late 1980s. During the age of big hair and heavy-metal rock, Los Angeles blues band Royal Crown

Comedy

Second City to entertain I.C.

This improvisational comedy troupe launched the careers of Bill Murray, John Candy and Mike Myers.

By James Ashton
 The Daily Iowan

What's the difference between a stand-up comedian and an improvisational troupe? People actually like improvisers, according to Sue Maxman, one-sixth of The Second City group playing the Union bar Friday night.

"I think the audience wants us to succeed with their ideas whereas a stand-up comedian is set up on stage to fail," Maxman said. "Stand-up is such a different beast — I'm not tempted by it at all, not because group-work is comfortable, although I do like the security."

No performer could deny the security associated with The Second City, the 38-year-old Chicago-based improvisational company which has made things up on the spur of the moment in front of sold-out audiences all over the world. But with security comes a great pressure to succeed, along with a sense of what has gone before.

The Second City launched the careers of Bill Murray, John Candy, Mike Myers and George Wendt. Today the first step to success is graduating from their special training centers in Chicago or Toronto — most of their actors have trained there, including Maxman, who gave up teaching and returned to Chicago when her husband, Todd, was discharged from the military.

"I grew up in Chicago around a lot of humor, I was always using humor to keep me from getting bored," she said. Maxman was a frequent visitor to the free after-show Four ska bands are set to take the RiverFest main stage this Friday.

 Widespread Panic may have been organizers' first choice for RiverFest weekend, but some music fans don't see ska as second best.
 Animal Chin, Issac Green and the Stalars, Scofflaws and Mephiskapheles are set to provide almost five hours of happy entertainment in Hubbard Park. And it's free.
 "You may not know the bands by name but come on down, hear the music — you'll have good time," said Jen Burke, assistant director of the Student Commission on Programming and Entertainment (SCOPE).
 "This is a new phase in popular music," Burke said. "You get one with a kind of music people like, it gets popular and people start looking for it."

Clash of the local music titans

Local bands will compete for money and prestige in the RiverFest Battle of the Bands on Saturday.

By Ben Schnoor
The Daily Iowan

When it came to selecting the bands for this year's RiverFest Battle of the Bands, RiverFest Music Director Alexandra White found herself up to her ears in music. Forty bands applied for the annual competition that crowns the king of the local music scene.

"We listened to all of them and narrowed the list down to 20. Any of those 20 bands could be playing on Saturday," White said. As it turned out, only six of the bands made the final cut. Shakti, the Poison Squirrels, Inventing Victor, dimglimmering, Garden of Rabbits and Tack-Fu Productions are scheduled to perform in that order from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturday in Hubbard Park, at the corner of Jefferson Street and Iowa Avenue. The concert is free and open to the public.

When selecting bands for the battle, White said her committee was looking for originality, musicianship and musical styles that would appeal to a wide audience.

"We wanted a really diverse group of bands this year," White said. "We had to look at what genre each group represents. This year I was really set on making RiverFest something that everyone could enjoy."

The lineup for this year's Battle is extremely diverse, with styles ranging from rap to rock. The melodic rock of bands like Garden of Rabbits and Inventing Victor is offset by the pop tendencies of Shakti and dimglimmering. Finally, Tack-Fu Productions' hip-hop and the Poison Squirrels' loud punk add color to the lineup.

The bands' performances will be rated by six judges, including "Big D" Don Rossum, Iowa City entertainment guru; Jim Zimmerman, booking agent for The Q bar; Allison Bills and Tiffany Hamilton of KRUI; and Steven Cook of the DI. The judges will be looking for originality, musicianship and interaction with the crowd.

Cash prizes of $400, $200 and $100 will be awarded to the first-, second- and third-place bands. However, the bands are competing for more than just money.

"People are expecting a band that wins the Battle of the Bands to be a band that's going to be popular around the Iowa City music scene," White said. "It's a starting point for a lot of local bands, like High and Lonesome."

THE BANDS

Shakti — This pop-rock band composed of UI students has made a name for itself playing at Gabe's and this year's Dance Marathon.

The Poison Squirrels — This three-piece band emits a lot of loud punk-rock energy during its performances at local venues like Gabe's.

Inventing Victor — Playing melody-driven rock in the style of Rush and The Police, this band is one of the lesser-known acts in this year's Battle.

dimglimmering — Hailing from Cedar Falls, dimglimmering is hoping to win the Iowa City audience over with its pop mentality.

Garden of Rabbits — By far the most established local band out of the six, this band fuses everything from rock to avant-garde jazz in its vast instrumental melange.

Tack-Fu Productions — Tim Tack, a.k.a. Tack-Fu, blends hip-hop, rap and acid jazz in a unique style that is easy to dance to.

I'll take three of these ...

80 Hours My Crazy Weekend

We came to rock around the block

Brian Moore/The Daily Iowan

More than 15,000 people flooded Hubbard Park for the performance of legendary rap group Run-DMC at last year's RiverFest. This year's Friday night free concert, SkaFest, features four national ska bands.

Black Genesis to combine gospel and Mariah Carey

Accompanied by Mariah Carey tunes and classical music, the Black Genesis Dance Theater have practiced up to 15 hours a week for seven months for its performances this weekend.

By Christy Johnson
The Daily Iowan

Practicing for up to 15 hours a week since September, Black Genesis Dance Theater will represent a broad range of dance experience, said Sabrina Madison-Cannon, artistic director of the group.

"We have those that have danced since they were 4 to those that started in high school," Madison-Cannon said.

Ranging from love stories to abstract, Picasso-inspired modern art, the pieces in the program will feature a variety of dance styles, including abstract-modern, classical-modern, gospel and jazz. The accompanying music ranges from classical to Mariah Carey.

The piece Madison-Cannon is most proud of is a gospel piece which she choreographed. Gospel pieces have a tradition of being designed by outstanding African-American choreographers, she said.

"It's always frightening to take on something like that," Madison-Cannon said. "African-American choreographers of previous generations have done incredible work. Whenever you take a gospel piece you know that everyone who has seen these works can be comparing your piece to the incredible pieces of the past."

The program opens with work called "Camy," which Madison-Cannon described as "a fun, feel-good number that takes place in an English club."

"Triangles," inspired by a piece of artwork by Picasso, will be performed in silence. Eight out of a total of 10 pieces will be performed each night.

The group's popularity has led Black Genesis to performances outside of Iowa City. It dances in Chicago and towns around Iowa, including a lecture-demonstration and two mini-performance is Cedar Rapids. Since its founding in 1969, Black Genesis has undergone numerous changes, Madison-Cannon said.

"During the '60s, a format was needed to talk about the more militant issues that were taking place at the time," she said. "Now, the concept has changed, although it's still a nice vehicle for dancers to be able to relate the black experience."

After a period of dormancy in the '80s, Black Genesis was reorganized in 1995. A co-founder of the new Black Genesis is President Beverly Carrington, who said Black Genesis is a way to bring African-American women together.

Black Genesis Dance Theater are scheduled to perform Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. in Space/Place Theatre, North Hall. Tickets are $5 for general admission and $4 for students.

The buzz: Graham is revered as one of the nation's top poets — with her work appearing in six collections ("Errancy" is the most recent) and numerous anthologies. The New York Times writes that Graham "develops a genius for apprehending and scrutinizing human perceptions, reflections and desires ... Graham's poetry is among the most sensuously embodied and imaginative writing we have."

The 411: The concert is scheduled to be performed at Saturday at 8 p.m. at Harper Hall, Voxman Music Building. The concert is free and open to the public.

The buzz: Performing around the globe, the Minneapolis-based quartet often premieres compositions specifically written for them. Lewis, the director of jazz studies and the Center for Advanced Studies in the Arts at the University of Texas at Austin, is a member of the Nova Saxophone Quartet and has written texts widely utilized by jazz instructors and students.

SUNDAY

Latin kings

The 411: The concert is scheduled for 12:30 p.m. on Sunday at Hubbard Park. It is free and open to the public.

The buzz: The "Salsa Band" has gradually established a reputation as one of the hottest groups in the Midwest and an outdoor concert is a perfect venue for its dance music. The band's burgeoning popularity is based in its crowd-pleasing combination of a wide range of music — from Disney's "Under the Sea" to Tito Puente's Latin jazz to elements of merengue, Afro-Cuban and, of course, salsa.

However, ska isn't a new way to groove.

The first wave of ska popularity started '60s Jamaica. Bob Marley took the ska beat and slowed it down to what we now know as reggae. Ska was reinvented with a punk attitude in '80s Britain by bands including Madness and Bad Manners.

In the 90s, ska got a new look, one with a dot in between her eyebrows and three-inch high sneakers. Bands like No Doubt and the Mighty Mighty Bosstones have put a pop-punk spin on the traditional Jamaican sound.

Despite the band name and a debut album entitled God Bless Satan, Friday's finale band Mephiskapheles is not devil worshiper, according to their publicist. Instead, the self-proclaimed leaders of modern ska are very artistic, with roots that lie in jazz and punk.

Lead singer The Grand Invidious and other band members are hell-bent on expressing their deep dissatisfaction with the state of pop music, most notably through their latest album, Maximum Perversion. The Skalars describe their music as a mix of traditional and 90s ska.

"There is punk ska, reggae-punk ska, old school. And then there is us," said Jessica Butler, lead singer of The Skalars.

The Skalars met while in college at Washington University in St. Louis. The band has recently signed and cut its first CD with a major New York ska label, Moon Ska Records.

Ska, in its many forms, has become quite popular in Iowa City. "I don't think we have ever found more excited people to play for than in Iowa," Butler. "I don't know what it is about the kids — they go nuts."

The Scofflaws formed in 1987 when Richard "Sammy" Brooks quit his job as a school bus driver to team up with Mike Drance, who was replaced by trombonist Buford O'Sullivan in 1995.

Originally called The New Bohemians, the guys sold their name to Edie Brickell so they could afford to buy new instruments and re-record their debut album. They perform traditional, horn-powered ska as pioneered by the Skatalites. Their third studio album, as yet untitled, is set to be released in the fall.

SWING/Voodoo Daddy helped spark the trend

Revue was turning out fresh jump-blues inspired by Louis Jordan. Instantly, neo-swing gained the following of punk rocked-out music fans who were craving tunes not focused on (illegal) drugs and violence.

It continues with bands like Big Bad Voodoo Daddy, the Squirrel Nut Zippers and Cherry Poppin' Daddies, whose Zoot Suit Riot has sold more than 90,000 copies and is currently sold out at many local record shops.

Big Bad Voodoo Daddy's lead singer-songwriter-guitarist Scotty Morris was one of the many musicians bored with the rock scene. Longing to bring something different to the music industry, Morris went back to his roots.

"I was a hired gun playing anything and everything from punk to country," Morris said. "I was disenchanted and wanted to do what I felt in my soul. I had started out playing trumpet and loved Louis Armstrong, King Oliver ... that Bib Band mambo I heard while growing up when people first started dancing in the aisles."

BJ's Records and Compact Discs Manager Chad Smith believes neo-swing's twist on early big-band sounds is responsible for its growing success.

"Instead of hearing the guitar sounds that we grew up with, (swing bands) play instruments we aren't used to hearing all the time," Smith said.

Moviegoers might remember Big Bad Voodoo Daddy's stint in the 1996 hit film "Swingers" and their two original songs "You, Me & the Bottle Makes 3 Tonight" and "Go Daddy-O" featured on the movie's soundtrack album.

Big Bad Voodoo Daddy had already established a reputable career in the underground Hollywood club scene when friend-of-the-band Jon Favreau told Morris about a movie he had recently written and asked the group if they would be interested appearing in it.

"(It) was very much the sort of life we were all living. So we figured let's just do this cool movie with our friends. We had no idea it would do what it did," Morris said.

Big Bad Voodoo Daddy was also featured on the Fox television series "Party of Five" that year, as well as the album Music From Party of Five.

Muran first became interested in Big Bad Voodoo Daddy after seeing and hearing its music on "Swingers." "Like everyone else in this city, I saw that movie. I became interested in booking them, and to my understanding, they've never played in the Iowa area before."

"A lot of my friends who've seen (Big Bad Voodoo Daddy) perform in California and at the House of Blues in Chicago say the show is phenomenal, and gives out a really great vibe," Muran said.

SECOND CITY/Chicago group performs Friday sets of improvisation at The Second City.

"Coming back to Chicago seemed the ideal opportunity to get out of the 9-to-5 and into comedy," she said.

After attending the training center, Maxman gained more experience before a cosmopolitan audience with Boom Chicago, a comedy theatre in Amsterdam. She regularly played to a mix of Dutch, Brits, Australians and Americans.

"They knew how to heckle, it was a very good training ground," she said.

Maxman was so busy performing she didn't have time to sample the wares of the celebrated Dutch hash bars, but "the smell was everywhere."

She has been touring with The Second City troupe for six months and thinks they are subject to less heckling than associated with a stand-up show because "improv is more theatrical than stand-up."

"We are very fortunate people to participate in a different way. There are some really strong actors at The Second City — strong acting is more important than people who tell jokes," she said.

Playing in such a large group has its pros: "Five other people in the troupe is great to have other people to play off." And its cons: "You have to be very flexible — you have to be prepared to come in with an idea and then to have someone else to completely change its reality."

Friday's show is made up of sketches from the group's 38-year oeuvre and new sketches improvised in rehearsal. The group of six will be ready to work with whatever the audience throws at them.

Maxman says they are not afraid to improvise on topics everyone has joked about before — Bill Clinton, for example.

"We are not worried about skits on him. There are 10 million things we can do with Clinton," she said.

Maxman has never been to Iowa City, but she is well aware of the positive reception The Second City troupe had when they were acclaimed as the highlight of the Iowa Arts Festival last June.

Joe Moran, who booked The Second City to appear at the Union bar, hopes it will be as much of a success on Friday as it was last time.

"It's not as if we get much of this stuff in town," he said. "Why should we be entertained by the same thing all the time?"

Cost is $15 for a seat, $10 general entry. Doors open at 7 p.m., show starts at 7:30. The Second City is expected to perform two 45-minute sets followed by a 20-minute improvisation set.

FILM CHATTER

Rumors are wild that we will see a new Batman film, with Kurt Russell in the title role. "Ain't It Cool News" reports that due to the ill-fated "Superman" project, the new Dark Knight film could be out by next summer. It is said to be a Batman-centered film, without Robin or Batgirl.

Mariah Carey may be bringing her act to the big screen, according to The Hollywood Reporter. The diva is reportedly in talks to star with Chris Tucker in the spy spoof "Double-O-Soul," which will be produced under Tucker's Tuck You Productions.

Those waiting anxiously to go where no one has gone before — again — may not need to wait longer than June 1 to get a preview. "Dark Horizons" reports that director Jonathan Frakes (Cmmdr. William Riker) has convinced Paramount to place a preview of "Star Trek: Prime Directive" in theatres ASAP.

Dennis Quaid is the latest addition to the all-star cast of Oliver Stone's upcoming NFL project, tentatively titled "On Any Given Sunday." "Mr. Showbiz" reports that the "Dragonheart" star will play a veteran quarterback whose coach (Al Pacino) forces him to play with an injury or else lose his job to a newcomer, played by Sean "Puff Daddy" Combs.

Jesse Camp won the spot of MTV VJ.

The new face of MTV

Off the street and into the studio: MTV's newest VJ, Jesse Camp.

By Ted Anthony
Associated Press

NEW YORK — He only wanted a brief glimpse of MTV from the inside — just for fun, to join 4,000 other hopefuls grabbing at the instafame that the absurdly popular music television network bestows upon viewers now and then.

But on Monday night, Josiah "Jesse" Camp, all of 19, found himself sitting in the VJ's chair in MTV's Times Square studios, freestyling his own lyrics, interviewing Lenny Kravitz, taking a call from Jakob Dylan and wading into Manhattan's rush-hour crowds for a few quick absurdist interviews with fans. Even veteran news anchor Kurt Loder had this to say: "Jesse, you ARE rock and roll."

Thanks to MTV and his own peculiar brand of charisma, Jesse Camp had arrived — rather suddenly, even by his own estimation.

"You gotta go nuts. You never know how long this is gonna last," he said. "You get in these crazy situations, and the only way you can deal with it is not to take it seriously."

Fortunately, this was MTV, where not being serious is serious business, and Jesse, an aspiring drummer for an East Village band called Easy Action, fit in immediately.

He made his live-television debut five months after arriving in Manhattan from suburban Connecticut and two days after being selected by producers and viewers from the would-be talent that showed up at the network's door last week for its "become a VJ" contest. (For the uninitiated: VJ is to video jockey as DJ is to — well, you get it.)

Somewhat to MTV's surprise, the network had never issued an open casting call for VJ.

"One of the things we really want to do is re-identify with the audience," said Dave Sirolnick, executive vice president for MTV news and productions.

"We didn't know going in who would be great and who wouldn't," he said. But with Jesse, "it was clear there was that spark — something there."

Though he had no on-air experience, Jesse was prepared. He is a fringe rock icon waiting to happen — Nosferatu build, Ziggy Stardust face, hair that combines Medusa with Don King on a humid day.

His outfit: a sheer, brown, sequined rayon shirt; a Mongolian lambswool scarf to match; blue Adidas; lemon-yellow socks and blue bell-bottoms complete with a leg warmer worn over the right thigh.

And his voice — well, his voice made the whole thing worthwhile. A strange, throaty melange, it echoed Spicoli from "Fast Times" and Bob Dylan, with undertones of Barry White.

Lead guitarist and vocalist Jon Herchert rocks out at a concert.

Preserve-ing dignity

Mango Jam members spread jam on their faces and developed rashes in the process of creating their new CD, Preserves.

By Melanie Mesaros
The Daily Iowan

After spending two weeks in the recording studio, the patience of Mango Jam was tested during a photo shoot for the CD insert.

"We smeared mango jam on our faces and pressed them up against plexiglass," co-lead vocalist and guitarist Jon Herchert said in a telephone interview with the DI. "Everyone kinda broke out in a rash though. Something in the jam made us all turn red."

Mango Jam, which often performs in Iowa City, is launching its fourth album, Preserves, with a CD release party at Gunnerz, 123 E. Washington St. on Friday night at 11.

Promising the band's best song-writing, the album matches clever wordplay with Mango Jam's characteristic funk/rock vibes, Herchert said.

"A lot of the songs have been around for quite a while," Herchert said. "It was recorded with a live feel. We all played most of the things as it went down."

Two tracks on Preserves draw directly from the band's road life during the past eight years. "Kalamazoo" is based on a trip the band took to Kalamazoo, Mich., after co-lead vocalist Jason Bush spent the night in the hotel room pining for his wife who was miles away. "Pretty Little Town" sings the praises of the small college towns that have been staple stops on its tours, he said.

"Everyone has been in a town that they want to get out of but is having a good time in," he said. "It's the ode to small towns."

The song "My Best Friend" also was inspired by the band's touring experiences, he said.

"It's about having a friend but not really communicating for a long time," he said. "We can all relate to that because we are on the road all the time."

Single of the week

Fastball, "The Way"
Yes, this single has been on the radio airwaves for a while but it has taken that long to appreciate its brilliant simplicity. Latin-tinged sing-song versus, much like Sublime, and a rock-out chorus are the refreshing remedy to the bulk of overproduced drek.

Video of the week

Green Day, "Redundant"
Directed by: Marc Kohr
The title is bound to be the punchline of many a Greenday joke, but the video is a visual masterpiece. A ensemble of oddballs parade onto a single set, repeating everyday actions such as picking up the paper or hanging a sign.

During a pivotal scene in last year's underrated "Cop Land," Ray Liotta tells Sylvester Stallone, "Being right isn't a bulletproof vest."

Such is the dilemma that consumes the lead characters in a pair of stellar cop dramas that hit the video shelves this week, "Cop Land" and "L.A. Confidential."

Both films have their share of good cops and bad cops. But the pulse of each movie comes from the in-between cops. And it is the viewer's enviable task of watching these in-between characters develop as they float across the thin line between right and wrong.

As Liotta points out, it's not so easy to do the right thing when you likely will end up dead because of it.

These films both are enjoyable because, first and foremost, they are cop films. They have plenty of action, suspense, shootouts and chases. But what separates these films from the pack is substantial plots and character development.

These films are everything a Bruce Willis movie is not. You almost have to watch each movie twice to fully understand the plots — but that's good. These are cop movies that serve an intelligent audience rather than laying out the plan right away: Good guy has to stop bad guy at all costs, and he'll become a hero.

These plots are ugly. If the good guys — if you can call them that — decide to go after the bad guys, the consequences could be severe.

Russel Crowe and Guy Pierce investigate in "L.A. Confidential," which featured 1997's most impressive performances.

That's where the character development comes in. So rare in today's Steven Seagal/Will Smith/John Travolta-dominated cop films, "Cop Land" and "Confidential" are character studies.

Even the baddest, toughest cops show their fear in these films. They also go through an awakening as they scan what's going on around them.

Baddest of them all is "Confidential's" Russell Crowe, who delivered one of 1998's most impressive performances. He plays Bud White, a tough-as-nails badass who is willing to shoot a suspect in the back, plant evidence or — his personal favorite — beat out a confession. But the seemingly one-dimensional White shows surprising emotion when he falls for Oscar-winner Kim Basinger. And he eventually struggles with a nagging need to do the right thing.

Fellow cop Ed Exley (played by relative unknown Guy Pearce), never has any trouble with the whole right-wrong dilemma. He's not afraid to rat out a fellow cop for the sake of justice — and a promotion or two. But he also desperately wants to put away the people "who get away with it."

"Confidential" picks up as White and Exley find themselves tracking down the same truth and seeking the same justice. Though they hate each other, and even take a moment to beat the piss out of each other, there is a greater battle to be fought. Also spectacular in "Confidential" is Kevin Spacey, a third cop who is desperate for fame but saddled with character, Al Freundlich, who is, in Frank's words, "a putz."

"When I was at 'Nightline,' talking to some of the producers and talking to producers in network news, I started to hear really good stories about high-maintenance correspondents."

All of which added up into a character Frank said he quite liked.

"I like his purity, he cares about the news."

Perhaps the most tantalizing piece of information Al dangled in front of me was details concerning his dream guest for the show.

"I want to have Hillary on," Frank said. "Freundlich would go to interview her, and we have the story worked out where Freundlich thinks she has a crush on him."

At the speech, Frank mentioned another upcoming project, his new book, "The Al Franken Presidency, by Anonymous." Fans will be delighted to know that the book is nearly completed.

"Hopefully I'll finish it in the next month and it'll be out in the fall."

It wasn't hard to tell from Tuesday's performance that Frank loves performing, but for most of his career, he's been pigeonholed as a writer. Now with "Lateline," he finally has a chance to spotlight his talents as a performer.

Franken admits that the writer typecasting was something he struggled with in the past.

"I struggled with that a little bit at 'SNL' because Lorne Michaels, 'SNL' producer valued me as a writer and I think he felt to some extent that the more I performed, the more he would lose me as a writer."

Franken does have a serious side, as evidenced by his involvement in the Meg Ryan drama, "When a Man Loves a Woman," which he co-wrote. More recently, Franken was featured on Tom Hanks' epic HBO miniseries, "From the Earth to the Moon."

"I'm a comedian," Franken explains, "that's what I am. But if other stuff comes by, I'll do that. How could you not? Tom Hanks wants you to play something in this incredible series. I don't think I'm going to be a dramatic actor. It was fun doing that little thing."

So there I was, talking to one of the Ten Men I Admire Most, trying not to sound like Al Freundlich. That's harder than it sounds. Al Franken represents everything I want to be: funny, successful, adored. And throughout the conversation, he was patient, honest and open.

Still, if I will remember one thing about this conversation, it will be this: When I was setting up the interview, I somehow ended up on the phone with Al's wife, Franni. We talked for around 10 minutes about her husband, her children and her life with Al.

Really, all she had to do was take down my information and pass it on to Al, but she took the time to talk to starstruck kid from Iowa. I didn't think she'd remember me, but I would remember her.

Then, toward the end of my interview with Al, there was a noise behind him and he asked me to hold on. After a brief pause, Al returned to the phone and said, "Franni says 'hi.'"

Hi, Franni. And thanks, Al.

what's got people talking this week

- 1. RIVERFEST — It sure as hell beats VEISHEA now.
- 2. BIG BAD VOODOO DADDY — How long does it take for a hot trend (swing music) to reach the Midwest? Count how many months ago you saw "Swingers" on video. Add one year for its original theatre release and add one more year for the time the film probably spent in development. This all means Iowa City is as cutting edge as grunge music.
- 3. AL FRANKEN — Norm MacDonald was funnier.
- 4. THE SECOND CITY — We're not famous ... but our alumni are. (Yeah, that's the ticket.)
- 5. "THE BIG HIT" — Mark Wahlberg plays a '70s porn star with a 12 inch ... sorry, wrong film.
- 6. House of Love — The popular drag ensemble kicks off the first night of RiverFest. It's about time.
- 7. JESSE CAMP — MTV watchers get their sweet revenge.
- 8. TCI — The ever-generous cable conglomerate decided to install Comedy Central to a few lucky homes. We are forever indebted.
- 9. JIMMY SMITS — The popular star of "NYPD Blue" has decided to leave the program to pursue other offers. Hey, it worked for David Caruso.
- 10. "TARZAN AND THE LOST CITY" — Write your own punchline.

Iowans are not big fat idiots

Good news, Iowans. Al Franken doesn't hate us.

I spoke with Franken upon his return to his New York home on Tuesday. The first thing on my mind was checking to see whether his view of Iowans had been tainted by the rather disastrous question and answer session following his packed Hancher Auditorium speech on Monday.

We were in luck. "I like Iowa," Franken said. "I grew up in Minnesota, and I have a generally very positive impression of Iowa. I have friends from Iowa, and I had a very good time at the school."

"I had some weird questions," Franken paused briefly. "I do not enough of these that I get unusual questions quite a lot. But we had, like, three in a row that were right up there. Two that were very, very strange."

He continued, "You don't draw a lot of conclusions from those very few people. I thought the crowd was great."

One of the bizarre questions came from a gentleman who insisted upon giving Franken a gift, a T-shirt that Franken, against the wishes of the gentleman from the audience, didn't show to the rest of us. What was on the shirt?

The answer might surprise you. "It was Fonzie. It was such a nothing thing. He was one of the most relentlessly bizarre people I've ever encountered," Franken chuckled.

Would he rule out coming back to the UI?

"In some other capacity, maybe. But I don't want to speak again like that, because, you know, I've got a basic speech," Franken laughs.

With business taken care of, I switched gears and asked Franken some questions about his remarkable career. First on the list, his new show, "Lateline."

Not surprisingly, Franken has high hopes for the show.

"Hopefully, we'll get picked up for next season, at least 13 (episodes) and maybe a full season, and then...

What you always want with a show like this is to go long enough to go syndicated."

Franken went on to share some interesting tidbits about the creation and development of the show, specifically his

Monday afternoon I got a chance to visit KRUI's studios. Luke Azinger, above, was in the house. His unique personality is expressed in the music he programs. (While I was there he played selections that included everything from the Dead Kennedys to the Wu-Tang Clan.)

Most music in KRUI's all-digital studio is from compact discs but every once and a while they break out a piece of vinyl and give the table a spin and what you hear are the grooves screamin'.

Look for a brief on KRUI's Radiothon on Page 3C.
