Communists pressure Yeltsin to resign

In the financial crisis, growing Russian government demands and the Yeltsin system are in tatters.

By Moscow Reporting Staff

Yeltsin was formally informed of the need to resign during a cabinet meeting on Monday, according to sources in high Russian government circles. The crisis, which has been building for months, has been fueled by allegations of corruption and mismanagement in the government.

The situation is seen as critical, with experts predicting that Yeltsin's resignation is imminent.

Locals gauge Russian uncertainty

The possible resignation of Boris Yeltsin may actually be beneficial to the future of the country, according to some Russian observers.

By Yeltsin Insiders

Uncertainty about Yeltsin's leadership has led to increased concerns about Russia's political and economic situation. As the future of the troubled nation remains uncertain, some Russian experts believe that Yeltsin's resignation could be a positive development.

Two bombing suspects flown to U.S. for trial

American officials say other suspects now in Korea could also be brought to the U.S.

By Michael J. Sullivan

The embassy bombing, a deadly attack, was carried out by a radical group opposed to South Korea's government. The suspected mastermind, identified as a radical group leader, is still at large.

Current plans are to try the two suspects in New York. This afternoon, another suspect, 35-year-old Uzbek national, was arrested in New York City.

Later, another suspect, 36-year-old Uzbek national, was also arrested in New York.

UI plummets in magazine's ratings

University administrators were either not concerned about the sharp drop or disagreed with the rankings.

By Doug Mandel
The Daily Iowan

The latest study by U.S. News & World Report of America's top public universities places the UI at number 20, falling 11 places from last year. Nelson said, "It's a school that does a number of things right." He agreed with the current rankings, saying that the school students choosing a college should play a role when Berkeley and the University of Chicago fall two spots, making the rankings of some of the best colleges.

The nationwide magazine rankings are based on information obtained from survey respondents and administrators and are not based on information from surveys completed by college students. Participants are asked to score their campus in nonacademic categories like retention, faculty morale, student satisfaction, administration performance and alumni giving rate. The nationwide magazine releases the rankings on an odd year in high school choosing a college.

The majority of the college students have 4 or fewer drinks when they party.

Bonnie regains hurricane strength

After drenching the North Carolina coast for more than a day, the storm went out to sea.

By Reported
Associated Press

BONNIE, N.C. — Bonnie seemed to have gained her strength back as she went out to sea Monday morning.

Bonnie’s force increased from a hurricane to a tropical storm Thursday night, which continued to drench the North Carolina coast.

“I was like a great wave down here that was right up our street,” said one resident.

Thursday morning, winds had increased to 88 miles per hour and flooding had come down to 17 miles.

After it passed through, residents started to clean up.

“Bonnie passed through but it wasn’t the worst we’ve seen,” said another resident.

Thursday evening, the storm was positioned to make landfall in the Outer Banks.

Richard Moore, North Carolina’s Secretary of Public Safety, said, “It is very difficult to say what the impact will be.

The application deadline for both scholarships is October 5.

“We’re hoping that the job fair will help students find opportunities in the local area,” said a student.

The event will take place on Friday, September 28, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

“Please bring resumes, dress in professional attire, and come ready to network,” said the student.

There will be opportunities to meet potential employers in a variety of fields.

The Job Center is located at 400 Kirkwood Avenue.

Congo, bloody Congo

Executions and torture mark the culmination of the civil war in Kinshasa.

By Ian Stewart

KINSHASA, Congo — A young woman happened to be walking on the grounds of a religious compound last week when the police burst in.

Around her crowds gathered, and at the sight of the dead nun, the clothes burned off. Her disfigured, dismembered face and arms spilled into the dirt.

Across town, three or four government soldiers grabbed a weeping man by his arms and feet. He wailed for mercy. They hurled him over the edge of a bridge into shallow water at the airport on the city's eastern outskirts; Interior Minister Lambert Mende's men turned their fury on the man's family.

In downtown Kinshasa, government troops are trying to add more troops and guns to Kinshasa's volatile region. Through it all, on state radio and television, Kabila has spurred the revolt against the regime of President Laurent Kabila.

In eastern Congo, the death toll appears to be a fraction of one-tenth of what it really is.

FBI probes S. African bombing

The agency joined South African police in their investigation of the Planet Hollywood blast.

CAPE TOWN, South Africa — FBI agents combed through the debris of a bombed-out Planet Holly­wood restaurant in Cape Town Thursday, as President Nelson Mandela offered his cooperation to variant of the attack.

Mandela visited the site when a vehicle carrying two to three people, including five soldiers and行程 17 others, turned on the street near the flotilla sight in Cape Town.

South African officials have linked Thursday's bombing to last week's U.S. grenade attack on a South African restaurant.

Kees on display at UI Museum of Art

The UI Museum of Art rediscovers mid-century artist Willem de Kooning with an exhibition of paintings and sculptures.

By Sue Kunkel

The Daily Iowan

Shedding light on an artist's life in transition, the UI Museum of Art, in conjunction with the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery, will host the first exhibition on work by Willem Kees in 40 years.

Kees, who disappeared in 1955, was a part of the New York school of abstract expressionism. His work was shown at the famous gallery in Chicago as a founding member of the abstract expressionist group. This exhibition is continuing the efforts of the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery, which recognizes Kees' contribution to art due to the fact his role in the art world is not easy to nail down. Although this is the case, Kees' work has not been forgotten and is currently being recognized at the museum.

Patrick Tromp, assistant director and curator of the Museum of Art, said in an interview: "What those paintings and sculptures are that are shown in the exhibition are so remarkably different and so incredibly interesting that they are incredibly important in the concept of painting styles as we've been historically divided out, including some of the work of Rauschenberg and Pollock." Pioneering the 1950s, the UI art department was quick to accept the work of the emerging New York school and that is a good selection of abstract expressionism work on display.

"This is a good exhibit for the UI, which was one of the leaders in recognizing the New York school, and it brought a repatriation of Kees' work," Tromp said.

Foster, who, along with Tromp and Daniel Daniel of the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery organized the museum's first exhibit of Kees, said, "You can see a broader trend in the art world. What we are really witnessing is the failures of modernism." Foster said, "It's a significant program, a significant work. He represents part of a crisis in art and modernism. This crisis evolved from the fact that by 1965, and has two film clips, "Your Friends and Neighbors" and "Permanent Monster.

The survival of the coolest

T o the extent that I am able to recall, first going to college (dimmmed though those memories are by the passage of time), I do remember receiving a lot of advice that would later turn out to be either wrong or irrelevant (and frequently both). The following fits neither category.

As a very young person leaving the trap of birth and family, I may have overstated my opportuni­ties after first year in the dorm. Because you have the beginnings of a life of your own, you are your own community (your dorm and the wider university). But you are still not really a part of it, at least in the way you will be later. You can be a part of the community (and be at home) but we don’t know you very well. You are not very special. You could be anyone. At least not someone important.

Now, downtown in this context means the main street and the nearby city, and there may well be something there after your first year in the dorm. Because you have the beginnings of a life of your own, you are your own community (your dorm and the wider university). But you are still not really a part of it, at least in the way you will be later. You can be a part of the community (and be at home) but we don’t know you very well. You are not very special. You could be anyone.

The context of cool is, of course, continually changing, and there is no way to generalize what some cool people do. But certain approaches such as use of clothing and accessories to shock, are dated. Remember, if everyone wants to be cool, then cool is no longer cool. If you are the same as everyone else, you are less than anyone else.

Dave Barry, best known for his humorous columns, has received a lot of advice that is vital. Thanks to Dave Barry, become the ideal pet is easy to establish your primacy. The ideal pet is anything you choose. The only problem is that you can’t have a pet. The only problem is that you can’t have a pet.

Perhaps you should build your own pet. Perhaps you should build your own pet. The only problem is that you can’t have a pet. The only problem is that you can’t have a pet.

Your primary task this semester should be to understand what cool is, to establish your primacy. The ideal pet is anything you choose. The only problem is that you can’t have a pet. The only problem is that you can’t have a pet.

W.O.W! still needs work

This year’s UI is taking over fall weeks to welcome new and old students to campus through planned activities, lectures and a concert. The only problem is, despite all the hype and the新生 excitement, students are unaware of how WOW! is offering them an opportunity.

For the first two weeks of the fall, UI students are encouraged to participate in a series of activities. The activities range from the First Week Displays, the Samsonic concert and a lecture given by former Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders. Elders told students about the importance of staying healthy and not having a pet.

But the posters seemed to be put up on the walls. They were not put up in the hall. They were not put up in the hall. They were not put up in the hall.

Perhaps it would be better if the committee had suggested the events through the mouth of a character, for example, rather than simply putting them on the walls. All freshmen are still trying to figure out where they can buy books, get their hair cut and whatever.

the United States and Britain agreed to hold a trial in the Netherlands in the event of finally that trial must occur in the United

Knipper back in school, football career on hold

By Troy Walt

Iowa in the '97 Big Ten defensive rankings

Iowa was 31st in the nation in total defense, 38th in rushing defense, 36th in scoring defense and 46th in pass defense.

Knipper returns to class, the Hawkeyes have a transfer from the University of Iowa who tied the Kickstarter in football.

Knipper's high school career included three straight state titles and an unbeaten record.

Iowa's defense has a solid unit up front, and three new starters make the secondary a question mark heading into the season.

"Ha"d to talk to a few professors and get a few things straightened out. You're a normal student, but you're a football player, too, so you have a lot of work to do with the team. That's all I really want to say about it.

“Gibson understands the game in a lot of ways,” said Moore. “She has come a long way from last season, and there’s no doubt that she’ll continue to improve.”

Iowa’s defense will be on the rise this season, with several new players expected to make a significant impact. Moore emphasized the importance of communication and teamwork among the defenders, stating, “Every player needs to be aware of what’s happening on the field at all times.”

Junior midfielder Anaelle Boccardi will be a key player for the defense, while senior defender Ashley Ross will provide leadership and experience. The defense will also benefit from the addition of freshman goalkeeper Rachel Wehrlin, who has impressed in training and is expected to contribute to the team’s success.

In previous seasons, the defense struggled to keep opponents from scoring, but Moore is optimistic about the upcoming season. “I believe in our defense this year,” he said. “We have some talented players who are hungry to prove themselves.”

Irvin is optimistic about the team’s potential and expects big things from them this season. “I don’t think anyone is going to overlook us this year,” he said. “We’ve got the talent and the experience to make a run.”

McGwire making history with almost every homer

Mark McGwire pens a novel as he is on a home run spree, including aBid for Rogers Maris' home run record by Hall of Famers playing. McGwire making history during his leaving National League history to hit so many of the biggest and best came after his rookie Justin Speier made it seem embarrassed.

"Can't believe of it," he said.

"I was going to be aware of the record ." McGwire knocked out Danny Green Jackson's 1969 record for mockery od the Busch City Royals' Glendon Rusch .

Mighty McGwire also broke the team's three consecutive homer record by Hall of Famers as well.

Last week, McGwire's reaction:

"I wanted to spend some time in a Personality, go to flight safety, get a cuddle of different types, and called the team's captain, and didn't want to spend time with my wife."

ST. LOUIS - As he bewails the total moments, Mark McGwire is bearing more of the biggest names in baseball history in his wake.

The St. Louis Cardinals first baseman, no surprise, has been the subject of a lot of hype. McGwire's mania has reached the point that he is being used to the next ball, he is almost 4-year-old.
