Plane crashes in I.C. back yard

Two men escape serious injury after the county's third plane crash in five weeks.

By Steven Cook
The Daily Iowan

A day promoting airplane safety quickly turned dangerous for two Iowa men Sunday when their plane crashed between two apple trees, narrowly missing two south side Iowa City houses.

Pilot Tim Emerson, of Albia, Iowa, and passenger Ron Singley, of Moulton, Iowa, had just taken off from the Iowa City Municipal Airport shortly after noon when their single-engine Piper Cherokee plane lost power and crashed. Emerson was able to keep enough control of the plane to crash-land in the back yard of Tom and Norma Abbott, of 1303 Ashley Drive — north of Highway 1, near Menards, 1375 Highway 1 W.

The first thing that went through his mind, Emerson said, was finding a safe place to land the plane.

"I just tried to find an open area and not hit any houses," Emerson said. "We just hit a couple of trees — that's something we can live with."

Emerson, 31, and Singley, 30, were taking part in a daylong, statewide airplane safety event, called a Poker Run, sponsored by the Federal Aviation Administration.

Pilots flew to five airports, picking up a playing card and viewing a 20-minute airplane safety video at each stop. The pilot with the best poker hand at the end would win a trip to Arizona.

Twelve airports state-wide were included in the activities, including the final destination of Boone, Iowa. Approximately 70 pilots from around the state participated in the event.

Emerson and Singley took off from Ottumwa and flew to Iowa City; they were on their way to Maquoketa, Monticello and Boone. Both had just finished watching a video on how to avoid stalling and spinning in the air at the Iowa City Airport.

The Abbotts were not home at the time of the crash, but neighbor Jean Kopf, 1313 Ashley Drive, was. She and friend Harold Manley, of Iowa City, were watching TV when they heard a loud noise that sounded like a "snow plow dragging its blade on pavement" from the back of their house, Manley said.

Kopf, who has lived in the house overlooking the airport for seven years, said she's often been afraid a plane would crash into her home.

Sunday's crash was the third in Johnson County in a span of five weeks. One crashed four miles east of Iowa City on Sept. 7, and another crashed just west of the Iowa City Airport on Aug. 23. No persons were hurt in either incident.

Three crashes, in so short a span, makes Kopf uneasy, she said.

"Now it's almost in my back yard — that's darn scary," she said. "I'm ready to move."

Another neighbor, Roger Kranston, 1300 Ashley Drive, said that in the two months since he and his family moved in, he's watched many planes pass over his house while sitting on his porch.

Cardiac Cubs have one last chance

Getting tickets for tonight's wild-card playoff proves to be an impossible dream for local fans.

By James Howe
The Daily Iowan

The Chicago Cubs got lucky Sunday, earning a chance to make the National League playoffs, but some of the team's local fans were not as fortunate.

The excitement of a second chance elated Iowa City fans when — 20 seconds after the Cubs' 4-3 loss to the Houston Astros — the San Francisco Giants lost, 9-8, to the Colorado Rockies.

"In one instant, the Cubs lost, and we felt like the season was over," said Greg Goldstein, manager at Micky's, 11 S. Dubuque St. "And then the Cubs lost, and it was jubilation. Everyone was jumping up and down. It's been the heart attack of a season."

But the thrill of a one-game playoff didn't last for long as some Cubs fans realized that getting tickets for tonight's unique game was nearly impossible late Sunday night. Tonight's game could be the last time they have the chance to see their

Local family angry over Twin Cities bridge incident

After their daughter was hit with a cement block, an Iowa City family says Minneapolis officials should take action.

By Anna Vorm
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa City family of a Macalester College crew member say they are angry at the city of Minneapolis for not preventing two men from heaving a five-pound block from the 80-foot Franklin Avenue bridge onto their daughter's head.

"We don't hold Macalester or any of the rowers responsible. They did everything right," said UI Art Professor Christopher Roy, father of rower Megan Roy. "But it is up to the Twin Cities to do something about this."

Megan Roy, 18, a freshman at the private college in St. Paul, Minn., was practicing with her crew team at night Sept. 22 on the Mississippi River when a ceramic block was hoisted over a bridge, grazing her forehead and hitting her arm and leg.

Robert Hawkinson, 17, confessed to dropping the block. Hawkinson said

Fall victim tries to laugh at adversity

A UI graduate student says recovery — not legal action — is the first thing on her mind.

By Kelly Wilson
The Daily Iowan

For a person that has been through "more than the average Joe," UI graduate student and teaching assistant Priscilla McKinley has only one request — she doesn't want to be remembered as "the blind woman who fell down the manhole."

At present, McKinley has no plans for legal action after falling 10 feet into a partially uncovered manhole on the north side of the UI Biology Building on Sept. 23. She sustained numerous injuries, including a broken left foot, a broken left elbow and other cuts, strains and bruises.

More important to her now, though, is to recover from the accident and continue her academic and personal life.

"There is more to me than just my blindness. I do have a life," McKinley said. See MCKINLEY, Page 8A

Hurricane Georges strikes Gulf Coast

Georges pounds coast with heavy rain.

By Jerry Schwartz
Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — Hurricane Georges pummeled the Gulf Coast on Sunday, bringing high wind and heavy rain to Mississippi and Alabama as New Orleans held its breath — hoping it had dodged a catastrophe.

Waves from the Gulf of Mexico leapt across beachfront roads along U.S. 90 in Mississippi, and thousands crowded into almost 250 shelters along the state's coast. Georges' 25-foot waves clipped off fishing piers along Alabama's coast, where there were reports of waves smashing over concrete walls to demolish a fishing pier.

There were no deaths or injuries reported from the storm, which earlier killed more than 300 in the Caribbean.

The Big Easy was decidedly uneasy. Authorities feared that Georges would sit overhead for days, driving sprawling Lake Pontchartrain over its levees and submerging New Orleans.

But its course wobbled a bit, giving hope that a slight deviation to the east could spare New Orleans the worst of the devastation. Forecasters said late Sunday that the hurricane's center was expected to reach the Gulf Coast today.

"I'm certain that this ranks as probably the largest evacuation we have ever achieved."

—Lt. Col. Ronnie Jones, Louisiana State Police

"On our current track, the core should arrive near the Mississippi coast Monday afternoon, but ... it could still easily hit southeast Louisiana or southwest Alabama," said Max Mayfield, deputy director of the National Hurricane Center. "The hurricane will affect the same area for another three days."

Thousands fled New Orleans, turning Interstates 10 and 55 into bumper-to-bumper processions. More than 1.5 million people were ordered or urged to vacate New Orleans and coastal areas, leaving the streets quiet and mostly empty.

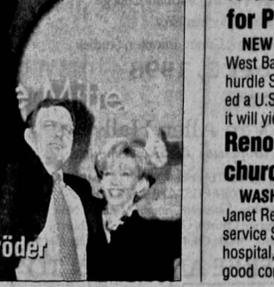

"I'm certain that this ranks as probably the largest evacuation we have ever achieved," said Lt. Col. Ronnie Jones of the Louisiana State Police.

While New Orleans prepared for the worst, its neighbors to the east were getting pounded. In Alabama, sheets of rain were driven by 65 mph wind gusts in Mobile and Baldwin counties, where several roads were closed because of flooding.

By Anita Chlipala
The Daily Iowan

The UI College of Medicine launched the UI's biggest capital venture with a ground-breaking ceremony on Sept. 25 and announced a $3.75 million dollar gift for the new facility.

This donation was given by the Sahai family of Webster City, Iowa, making them the second multi-million-dollar contributor to the UI Foundation in support of the College of Medicine's fund-raising campaign "Seeking Knowledge for Healing."

The Sahai gift includes $3.25 million for construction of the Medical Education and Biomedical Research Facility, the central component of the project.

"It's a way of paying back the university," said Prem Sahai, one of six members of his family to attend the UI.

"The College of Medicine was lacking a good teaching and research center," Sahai said. "This will be beneficial to the students in upgrading education."

Construction on the building, which will serve as the primary education facility for the College of Medicine, will begin in mid-November. The anticipated year of completion is 2001.

Help Me, Harlan

Dear Harlan,
I was interested in your take on suspicion of your partner. My boyfriend and I have been slowly drifting apart the past few months. He seems to have lost all interest in me and seems agitated when I try to discuss my feelings of loneliness and concerns about our relationship. Classic story, I know. However, he has changed quite a bit. He was more attentive and loving in the beginning of our relationship. Do you think there are telltale attitudes or actions that can give a partner "away" if they have been unfaithful? If so, what are they?

— A classic story

Dear Classic,
It's never a good sign when your partner spends a lot of time in the hallway leading to his private office with his personal intern, especially if his main office is oval. Ideally, it would be nice if you could trust your partner to speak with you if there is some kind of problem. Likewise, it would be nice if you could trust your partner to acknowledge your feelings when something is deeply bothering you. Living this guessing game is only going to tear you apart and destroy all that's good. If your partner can't communicate and can't love you the way you need to be loved, it might be time to close the book on this classic story. You can always find another story. Maybe this one will end with happily ever after.

and cancer research, student scholarships and medical-education professorships.

In July, the Carver Charitable Trust of Muscatine contributed $3 million.

In acknowledgement of the Sahai family's generosity to the project, two of the main floors in the new 203,000-square-foot facility will be named the Sahai Medical Education Center.

The center will include a 250-seat auditorium surrounding an atrium and a 125-seat seminar room. Both rooms will be endowed with advanced instructional technology.

In honor of the Carver Trust donation, the College of Medicine will name the top two floors of the facility's main wing the Roy J. Carver Molecular Science Research Center.

Iowa City a home of readers

Iowa City ranked No. 10 on a list of the most literate cities in the United States, according to a national ranking released on Sept. 25.

"I wasn't surprised," said John Hiett, a librarian at the Iowa City

Public Library. "We show up on a lot of lists like this."

The cities on the Top 10 list are either college towns or located near one. Hiett said rankings are demographically skewed because of the university life, with many students being well-read.

In conjunction with its 10th anniversary celebration this month, Longstreet Press, an Atlanta-based book publisher, produced the ranking. Longstreet researched per capita book sales at bookstores in U.S. cities to deduce which places read or purchased the most and fewest books.

To compute the list, Longstreet utilized data from the U.S. Department of Commerce and the American Booksellers Association.

Iowa City properties to be reappraised

A reappraisal project comprising door-to-door inspections of all residential, commercial and industrial properties is scheduled to take place next month in Iowa City.

The $460,000 program will use approximately 14,000 residential appraisals and $180,000 for 2,000 commercial and industrial properties, including apartment buildings. Vanguard Appraisals Inc. of Cedar Rapids will be responsible for the project.

Mayor Ernie Lehman said re-evaluations for property-tax purposes are usually done every 10 years, according to state law. However, the last door-to-door appraisal in Iowa City took place in 1983.

"It's a period to reassess property value," Lehman said. "It has nothing to do with property-tax rates."

The commercial and industrial appraisal stage is expected to be completed in January 2000. The residential stage is anticipated to wrap up in January 2001.

Residential inspections will commence on the far north side of Iowa City; data collectors will survey the interior and exterior of a property, checking for any additions to the buildings.

City Councilor Dee Norton said it cannot be determined how the reappraisals will affect property taxes.

"It depends on the evaluation of the properties and the tax rate," he said.

The conference board approved the reappraisal program in February. The board is composed of a city councilor, a county supervisor and school board members.

The value estimates will not be given at the time of inspection. Rather, notices will be mailed to commercial and industry property owners after January 2000. Residential property owners should expect notices the following year.

Rain forest to come alive at UI

■ At a free lecture, an artist plans to lecture on the collision of modernity and ancient cultures in the rain forest.

By Frauke Lohmann
The Daily Iowan

Artist and photographer Kevin Russell invites all interested people to follow his journey to the rain forest in a show with more than 200 slides and music.

Russell is scheduled to present "Out of the Shadows of Borneo: Voices of the Rain Forest" today at 7:30 p.m. in Buchanan Auditorium, W10 Pappajohn Business Administration Building.

In his presentation, Russell said, he does not only want to lecture about the rain forest's beauty and its destruction, but he wants to tell a colorful story about the collision between modern and cultures.

"I think it's fascinating for people to be exposed to the minds of others," Russell said. "Through others, we can learn about ourselves and about how we define our relationship with one another and the environment."

topic into a wider perspective by contrasting the Western world's consumer culture with the less-industrialized traditions in other parts of the globe.

With the lecture, the Rainforest Action Group wants to offer an opportunity for people to figure out what part the United States plays in the destruction of the environment that goes on in the rain forests, said the group's president Sara Siebert.

Siebert said she had heard that a lot of people were very impressed by Russell's past presentation at the UI a few years ago.

Russell went to Borneo for the first time in the late '80s and stayed for several months.

"It was just one of those things pulling at my imagination," Russell said of the island, which is shared by the countries of Malaysia, Indonesia and Brunei.

As an artist, Russell said he wanted to break with the familiar pattern by going to a totally different surrounding.

Since his first trip, Russell has returned to Borneo almost every year. He said he has learned Malay, the national language, and has married a woman from Borneo.

About 10 years ago, he founded the Rainforest Awareness Project, a coalition between artists and educators formed to inform people about environmental issues.

Admission to the event is free. It is sponsored by the UI Environmental Coalition, Rainforest Action Group and the University Lecture Committee.

'Urban Legend' won't make history

FILM ON REVIEW

By Phil Kennedy

FILM "Urban Legend"

Where: Coral Ridge 10
When: 1:15 & 4:15, 7:10 and 9:40 p.m.

★★★ out of ★★★★★

The 15 minutes of fame for horror films is up. "Scream" started it, and during the last two years, a line of wannabes has ended it. "Urban Legend" continues that line of failures.

Cheap thrills, cheap screams and cheap kills. "Urban Legend" is pretty cheap. It's more or less "Scream 2": A serial killer on a college campus taunts one female character by killing all of her friends. The killer wears the mandatory disguise — a hooded coat with an axe in hand — to conceal his or her identity. No one has a clue as to who the killer is, but when the killer is revealed at the end of the film, no one could be very astonished by who it is, either.

The whodunit plot works in "Urban Legend." The film kept the question running through my mind the entire movie, but like all other horror films, the build up was great and the closure was pure dung. "Urban Legend" has the classic horror-film syndrome. You know the main character is not going to die, so there's no reason to be scared. It's the biggest weakness of horror films.

The idea of a serial killer performing murders that are written in "urban legend" books worked, but the "no way that could happen" murders and pure stupidity of the characters ruin the whole idea. Call me a realist, but where are the cops? It's a killing fest on Pendleton College's campus, and only one rent-a-cop is trying to stop a mad serial killer. I guess her telephone and radio were broken. The students are even worse though. They never fight back.

The cast is a different group of hot young actors, but no one really stands out. The main character Natalie (Alicia Witt), a redhead with a dark past, is the victim who the urban-legend, copy-cat killer is picking on. Natalie witnesses the majority of the murders but can't get anyone to believe someone is killing all of her friends to get to her. Sounds realistic. Jared Leto (remember "My

Natalie (Alicia Witt) and Paul (Jared Leto) in "Urban Legend."

So Called Life") and Rebecca Gayheart (the Noxema girl) also back up Natalie in her quest to figure out who is felling the student body.

The similarities between "Urban Legend" and every other horror film that has come out in the last couple of years are all too similar.

The film offers a few good screams, but a sour ending and lame killer keep "Urban Legend" from horror film stardom.

Iowa City broadcasts of 'Springer' offer 'trash' viewers seem to love

■ Controversial talk show "The Jerry Springer Show" has begun broadcasting to Iowa City audiences.

By Peter Dirksen
The Daily Iowan

Iowa City nights have recently become infinitely more filthy. As of Sept. 21, the circus of trash that is the "Jerry Springer Show" can be seen six outrageous nights a week on KWWL Channel 7 (Waterloo's NBC affiliate). The show now airs Monday through Friday night at 1 a.m. and Saturday at midnight.

For any readers who may have been living under the proverbial rock for the past few years, the "Jerry Springer Show" is run in standard daytime talk-show format, in the vein of "Donahue" and "Sally Jesse Raphael," comprising a host and a panel of moronic guests as well as a rowdy and obnoxious studio audience.

Why is it that this popular trash talk show, which has been near the top of the Nielsen ratings for syndicated television and in other cable markets at points during the past few years, hasn't been broadcast in this region of Iowa?

The likely answer is that the show hasn't lived up to the programming values and standards promoted by the television stations in the area.

UI junior Jason Gann, who owns "Jerry Springer's Too Hot for TV!" video gives some insight:

"It's just the way TV works. The networks try to have all sorts of family stuff, but then they get this trash. TV is just trash."

But this may be what draws the viewers.

"People love trash," UI junior Carolyn Karkman explains. "I love trash."

The hook that makes this trash so different from other, less outlandish talk shows, is the attitude of the guests. The average guest comes from one of two schools of thinking. One group of guests believes nothing is sacred. The whole world is a bedroom. The other believes violence is the only solution. Talking is not an option.

"The show can provide people with a kind of unique carnival opportunity to move beyond any boundary," UI graduate student and television production instructor Chul Heo points out.

The only instance during the show when the guests have any semblance of sanity is within the first few moments. Then suddenly the guests explode into fist-fighting, hair-pulling, trash-talking machines who don't care who they assault, just as long as it's on national television.

"It's so ridiculous, you just can't watch it," UI junior Richard Garrison says.

It's only natural, due to its over-the-top nature, that the show has opponents. Obviously the show's content is not meant for everyone.

So did one of the stations, and its corporate owners, have a change of heart? Melanie Hubbard, program director at KGAN (another local television station) explains that possibly the decision may not have even been made by KWWL. Often syndication rights are purchased by the corporate owners of a number of stations who pass down the programming to each individual station.

■ The Iowa City Public Library plays host to a "Paeon to Forbidden Words."

Some spoke the words quietly others recited them loudly; some sang, still others chanted.

And even though it was a library, no one told them to be quiet.

As a kick-off event to its annual Intellectual Freedom Festival, the Iowa City Public Library on Sept. 26 was the site of "Paeon to Forbidden Words," a performance art piece co-organized by Deanne Warholtz Wortman and Darrell Taylor.

Described by Wortman as "an artistic expression with a political attachment," "Paeon to Forbidden Words" consisted of a public voicing and celebration of the text of banned books.

The event began at 9 a.m., an hour before the library opened. Participants were greeted by Wortman and Taylor, who distributed copies of the First Amendment and the American Library Association Bill of Rights.

Wortman and Taylor explained to the group of approximately 30 that everyone was to choose one or several books from which they would later read aloud.

Participants had their pick from a table piled high with a diverse collection of literature that has been banned or restricted from libraries and schools at some point in American history.

■ In the aftermath of Hurricane Georges, one man searches for the bodies of his brother's family.

By Niko Price

POLO, Dominican Republic — Carlos Feliz tossed aside a rock piled atop many others in his brother's front yard, leaned against an orange tree and cried.

For four days, he had been digging through the mud and picking through the rocks that Hurricane Georges washed through this small town, and he had found only four of the six bodies he said were his mission to uncover.

"We've been up and down the entire river, and we can't find them," he said. He pointed at his chest. "I have an emptiness that will never be filled."

It was Feliz, 39, who dug out the bodies of his older brother, Julio, Julio's wife, Antonia, and their children: Carolina, 7, and Paola, 3. Still missing are 18-year-old Brandy and 13-year-old Berenice.

"They're buried down there somewhere," Feliz said quietly, gesturing downstream. He held a white handkerchief to his eyes.

Polo, a coffee- and avocado-farming town 120 miles west of the capital, Santo Domingo, was devastated by flooding that Georges unleashed on Sept. 23. Instant rivers carried rocks from the mountainside that crushed dozens of houses and buried many more.

At least 24 people died in Polo, a town of 14,000, and seven more are missing.

But without phone service, no one from outside the town could know about the destruction before mund, chose William Golding's The Lord of the Flies.

"I read it in German," Ghafouri said. "In Germany, you can read everything. I have an idea why it was banned, but I don't understand why someone would want that done."

To find out why, when and where the books were challenged, Wortman and Taylor had compiled several resource materials that participants could consult.

Amber Johnson, a UI junior and book processor at the library, discovered that one of the books she had chosen, Dr. Seuss' The Lorax, was restricted because of its negative portrayal of the lumber industry.

"The ecological theme of the book is wonderful," Johnson said. "I find it sort of disturbing that someone would feel that the lumber industry and big business are more important than taking care of our earth."

Kathy Krueger, a law student from the University of Wisconsin-Madison, decided to read aloud from Flowers in the Attic, by V.C. Andrews. Krueger said that despite the book's explicit sexual content, she strongly opposes its restriction for more than just legal reasons.

"Last I knew, works of fiction were not taken for their factual content," Krueger said. "The Bill of Rights is a wonderful thing, and it had a meaning."

At 9:30 a.m., when participants scattered to random locations throughout the first floor of the library and began to recite from their chosen material, the text of these very different books combined to create what Wortman called "a hymn of praise to the right to speak and the right not to listen."

As participants read, chanted, even sang from their books, Wortman and Taylor welcomed library patrons beginning to trickle in by continuously chanting the text of the First Amendment and the American Library Association Bill of Rights. The event concluded at 10 a.m.

Wortman said she received positive feedback from the event; she thinks the format was an effective method to address the issue of banned books.

"If information is hidden, we become vulnerable to manipulation. The only way to change things is to discuss them," Wortman said. "We started a dialogue, and that's what's important."

It was Feliz, 39, who dug out the bodies of his older brother, Julio, Julio's wife, Antonia, and their children: Carolina, 7, and Paola, 3. Still missing are 18-year-old Brandy and 13-year-old Berenice.

"They're buried down there somewhere," Feliz said quietly, gesturing downstream. He held a white handkerchief to his eyes.

Polo, a coffee- and avocado-farming town 120 miles west of the capital, Santo Domingo, was devastated by flooding that Georges unleashed on Sept. 23. Instant rivers carried rocks from the mountainside that crushed dozens of houses and buried many more.

At least 24 people died in Polo, a town of 14,000, and seven more are missing.

But without phone service, no one from outside the town could know about the destruction before

Residents of the Santo Domingo neighborhood of Los Mina, Dominican Republic, queue for water Sept. 26.

Sept. 26, when officials patched downed bridges and bulldozers cleared mud and rocks from at least one lane of road.

The situation in Polo is now slightly better than that of hundreds of other towns; authorities have arrived with the first food, water and medicine. In many other towns, nobody has had contact with the rest of the world since Sept. 22.

Because of this, almost everyone in the Dominican Republic believes most of Georges' victims have yet to be counted. The U.S. Agency for International Development on Sept. 26 said the death toll in the Dominican Republic from Hurricane Georges, which at the time was officially 201, "is almost certain to exceed 500."

That will include the family of Jose Feliz, a distant relative of Carlos.

Jose Feliz; his wife, Lydia; their son, Rafi, and his wife, Drake; and Rafi and Drake's two children, 9-year-old Manguito and 4-year-old Joanna, all were washed away when mud and rocks poured through their humble wood-and-corrugated metal house.

Joselin Segura, Jose's 15-year-old nephew, waded through the muck on Sept. 26 to return to the house, and he picked through the records lying next to a smashed and overturned Wurlitzer jukebox.

Joselin would slip over to his cousin Rafi's house at night to listen to boleros and merengues by singers such as Los Reyes del Este, Julio Morales y su trio, and Fernando Villalona.

Villalona was their favorite. Joselin sang his favorite song, "Mi hermano, mi hermano," or "My Brother, My Brother," as he looked through the records he once listened to with the cousin he said treated him like a kid brother.

"I'm thinking about how it must have been for the family during the hurricane," he said. "Trying to feel what it must have been like."

Five of the bodies were found the day after the hurricane about a mile downstream; neighbors were still looking for the body of little Joanna.

The survivors face hardship as they look for the dead. Residents walk a mile up the road to a trickle of water from a mountain stream; they hope it's clean. There is little food in the stores, and what's there is too expensive for most.

"We haven't eaten since the day of the hurricane," said Joselin's mother, Dalma. Joselin looked down at the muddy floor, as if ashamed.

But the family continues to comb the riverbed for Joanna's body, which they concede may never turn up.

"I feel bad, but I have to take heart because I have my own family to protect," said Rafi's brother, Felipe. "I have to find them water and food."

As for the number of people Georges killed in the Dominican Republic, the best answer probably came from Victor Terrero, the country's undersecretary of health who lives 15 miles from Polo.

"I'll confess something to you," he said. "I have no idea."

A WORLD OF OPPORTUNITIES

Let Northwestern College of Chiropractic Help You Map Your Future At Career Day 1998.

Saturday, Oct. 17, 1998 • 10 a.m. - 2 p.m.

Northwestern College of Chiropractic has earned an international reputation as an innovative leader in chiropractic education. Our success is a cumulative process. It begins with our clinical education programs, designed to develop those skills required of a future chiropractic physician to successfully meet the challenges of a rapidly changing health care system. It continues with Northwestern's clinical research program, which is dedicated to the pursuit of new science related to chiropractic care. Finally, success is fostered by the rigorous interdisciplinary curriculum, balanced with clubs, organizations and many social opportunities.

Here's what you can expect:

- Learn about the chiropractic profession;
- Meet faculty, staff and students;
- Tour our campus and visit science and chiropractic methods laboratories and one of our four outpatient clinics;
- Receive admission and financial aid information;
- Enjoy a complimentary lunch.

Registration Deadline is Oct. 9, 1998.

Call the Northwestern College of Chiropractic Admissions Office at 1-800-888-4777 or 885-5409 for more information or to register. And be sure to tour our virtual world at www.nwchiro.edu.

Students need to speak up on proposed tuition hike

The 1960s and '70s, these days are not. Back then, UI students would battle the administration and the Iowa state Board of Regents over the day's big — and small — social issues.

Today, UI students can't even seem to get riled up over a proposed 5.2-percent hike in tuition that would bring in-state tuition over the $3,000 mark for the first time ever.

Instead of taking to the streets en masse or occupying a campus building to make their feelings known, UI students are instead filling out surveys and giving videotaped testimonials.

That's so very 1990s. Members of the UISG collected surveys from 2,500 students, 78.6 percent of whom were opposed to the proposed tuition increase. They also have gone around campus, videotaping students' reactions to the plan. While the results of this sort of polling — students don't want to have to pay more in tuition — are not unexpected, the lack of emotion in the responses is disappointing.

Maybe it's because parents are the ones who actually pay tuition. Maybe it's because students don't appreciate the value of a dollar — let alone the $300 or so that tuition could increase by. Maybe it's because neither has the appropriate forum in which to express their outrage.

One thing that is certain, however, is how the regents will shove the largest tuition increase in at least five years down the throats of UI students if the students — and their parents — don't start screaming and shouting.

Surveys, petitions and videotaped interviews are a nice start, and UISG should be praised for its swift response to the tuition plan.

But its response has been incomplete and unsatisfying.

UISG's responses to the plan have been safe and measured, not risky and volatile. They do not tap into the fire that is surely simmering beneath the surface. They keep the students from speaking directly to UI officials and the regents.

What UISG should be doing is holding a rally on the steps of the Old Capitol within sight of President Mary Sue Coleman's office in Jessup Hall. Set up a microphone and some speakers, and let the students speak for themselves about the proposed increase.

After all, rallies and speeches seemed to work in the 1960s and '70s. They just might work now, too.

Byron R. Brown is the DI's Viewpoints editor.

IWP an unknown jewel

Cultural diversity on the UI campus does not ensure cultural awareness. Contemporary times have brought political correctness and cautious speech that delivers watered-down versions of what ethnic appreciation is.

Part of the student experience should be to recognize an outlet such as the International Writers' Program and tap into it for a real sense of cross-cultural communication.

The IWP has been in existence for more than 30 years, providing a forum for international writers to come, present work, reach new audiences, participate in translation workshops and discuss writing, while satisfying their curiosities about American society. Yet this world-famous program is often overlooked by UI students.

For three months this semester, the eighth floor of Mayflower is home to 20 playwrights, poets, writers and essayists from 19 countries who use fiction, non-fiction and poetry to convey the realities of life in another country. The participants explore the politics of lifestyle, philosophy and human experience through the literary form. These personal accounts and fictional stories become modern-day textbooks for UI students as they chronicle the world and reveal the impact of government policies and global decisions on the people involved.

Some writers travel to the United States at great risk, having been denied expression or having met resistance in their homelands. These individuals can be teachers to the student population and take them beyond a regional or national view of the world. While everyone heralds cultural diversity as a positive, attempts to personalize it and draw from it often pale in contrast to the campaigns meant to promote it.

In the past, IWP operated as an independent program; however, this year the College of Liberal Arts has worked to integrate it as an academic initiative. Undergraduates can benefit from IWP writers and their work by incorporating certain courses into their curriculum. More students should take advantage of the "International Literature Today" and "Dialogues in International Literature" classes. Students have only a few opportunities to engage with the authors, and these classes are designed to be panel discussions and open sessions for students to have a direct exchange with writers who are internationally acclaimed and published.

By attending a Sunday night Prairie Lights reading by one of the authors or supporting their work, UI students are benefiting from the voices of other cultures and the perspectives that shouldn't be separated by geography.

Taking stock of U.S. economy

WHERE is the American economy headed? Should we be nervous? Will the stock market crash? Will we lose our jobs and our life savings and our homes? Will we ultimately have to ward off starvation by eating our household pets?

Hold it! Let's calm down! There is NO reason for that kind of thinking! Sure, the economy has been on a "roller coaster" as of late, but let's consider the reassuring words of Federal Reserve Board Chairman Alan Greenspan in his recent speech before the Association of People Before Whom Alan Greenspan Gives Speeches.

"This is merely a temporary economic slump," Greenspan stated, adding, "everybody should get some dogs."

So there is absolutely nothing to worry about, except for the eerie parallels between our current economic circumstances and those surrounding the big stock market crash that led to the Great Depression:

EERIE PARALLEL NO. 1: The big stock market crash occurred in 1929. The year that we are currently in, according to a majority of leading economists, is 1998. Both of these years start with exactly the same two digits, in exactly the same order. Coincidence?

EERIE PARALLEL NO. 2: Alan Greenspan gave exactly the same speech in 1929.

EERIE PARALLEL NO. 3: President Lincoln had a secretary named "Kennedy." President Kennedy had a secretary named "Lincoln." Incredibly, neither of these presidents had an intern named "Lewinsky."

So perhaps there is, indeed, cause for alarm. To help us better understand the situation, let's analyze the current economic picture by making up questions and then answering them:

Q. Why has the U.S. economy been so strong in recent years?

A. The key is the software industry, which employs many highly educated, well-paid workers to (a) design software and then (b) try to figure out how come it doesn't work.

Q. And that makes the economy strong?

A. No. Software actually HURTS the economy, because at any given time two-thirds of the American work force is on hold waiting for Technical Support. What makes the economy strong is that, while waiting, these workers drink billions of gallons of specialty coffees costing upwards of $3.49 per cup. Our LATTE industry alone dwarfs General Motors.

Q. So what's the problem?

A. The problem is Asia, a large land mass located near Hawaii. Asia is having a severe currency crisis caused by the fact that the Asians suddenly realized that a lot of their currency has funny names such as the "baht," the "kip," the "ringgit" and the "Vietnamese currency whose name we can't print in the newspaper, but you should look it up in the encyclopedia and then imagine the endless stream of hilarious jokes you'd be making if you were a tourist in Vietnam."

Q. Why does the Asian economic crisis pose such a serious threat to America?

A. Because Asia is where television sets come from.

Q. Can't we just make our own television sets?

A. Ha ha! The only person still alive who remembers anything about the era when Americans could actually build a working television is a 92-year-old retired Motorola employee named Horace M. Sneet, who, when asked recently how to make a television set, said, quote, "You need 12 foot of stout walnut."

Q. Are you going to get many letters from irate humor-impaired animal-lovers chastising you for making a joke about eating dogs?

A. Yes.

Q. What will these letters say?

A. They will say: "Mr. Barry, I, personally, am unusually intelligent and therefore capable of realizing you were attempting to be satirical, but many of your readers, particularly impressionable young people, will, as a direct result of your column, eat their dogs."

Q. What about this "Year 2000" computer problem that I keep hearing about? Is it going to cause worldwide economic collapse?

A. Don't worry! Our top minds are working on it day and night.

Q. Who are our top minds?

A. Gus and Bud. Their current thinking is that the problem is "somewhere in the carburetor."

Q. So what you're saying is, I should not be worried?

A. That is correct. We are a strong nation, and as long as we do not panic, and our leaders remain wise and vigilant and keep their Vietnamese currency units in their pants, there is every reason to believe our economy will remain robust until well into the latter part of next Thursday. After that, it would be wise for all of us, if we are looking for a safe place for our money, to remember Alan Greenspan's recent words of advice to investors.

Q. What were those words?

A. "Remove the collar first."

Clinton's lies, misdeeds show disrespect for our nation

I, too, have grown tired of the endless media coverage concerning our fallen-from-grace president. Unlike many of my peers, however, it is not the onslaught of embarrassing charges or graphic details that have me perturbed. It is the unsettlingly large number of people making weak attempts to de-emphasize President Clinton's actions and lies that I find disturbing.

By defending a man who not only lied to a grand jury but also lied in a broadcast to the American public, we are not only allowing this type of behavior, but we also seem to be endorsing it. Have we lost so much regard for others that we don't even respect the president of our country enough to demand that he be honest? In my opinion, the issue at hand isn't whether Clinton had sex with Monica Lewinsky or not. It is that he has shown a continuous lack of respect for all parties involved, and he has lied in the process.

It is true that adultery is not an impeachable crime. I have heard countless arguments stating that fact. But Clinton took sacred vows when he married his wife, the same way he took sacred vows when he became president of this country. If he is willing to sacrifice his integrity and disrespect his wife for a few moments of sexual gratification, then I do believe that is reason enough to doubt his character.

In addition, I think many have lost sight of the fact that the man lied under oath to a grand jury about his affair. (And, by the way, that is grounds for impeachment.)

Commentary suggesting that Clinton engaged in normal — and even acceptable — behavior by cheating on his wife and then lying about it is absurd and is a perfect example of the twisted mindset that allows people to treat marriage vows as meaningless dialogue. Didn't your mother ever tell you that just because everyone else seems to be doing it, doesn't mean that it's right?

Clinton not only lied in a court of law, under oath, he also managed to influence Lewinsky to do the same, which is obstruction of justice and also grounds for impeachment. People may say there is a difference between these violations and, for example, putting national security in danger. But the point is, he lied.

I wouldn't care if he lied about something smaller than this issue. But as a citizen of this country, he is obligated to tell the truth under oath in court, the same as we are. If no one takes this oath seriously, then we are disrespecting the legal system that was implemented to protect our rights. We all know the system is far from perfect, but it is still better than an entirely unregulated society.

Before I close, let me say this. As soon as Clinton admitted to lying about his affair with Lewinsky, all speculation on her motives should have been laid to rest. I, for one, do not care if she was in love with him, if she was trying to trap him, etc. Whatever her intentions, he has admitted to taking advantage of the situation. It simply boggles my mind, for lack of a better expression, that the public has so brutally attacked her morality, without also taking his into account and without being taken aback by the fact that he was engaging in sexual acts in the building we pay taxes to upkeep.

I should not have to point out that if the president were a woman, she would have been dismissed as a "slut" and booted out the door before the story even broke. I find the "boys will be boys" rationale pretty damn insulting, and I pity those who have been so conditioned by our male-dominated society that they would be moved to make such degrading declarations.

After 16 years of conservative rule, Germans vote in the Social Democrats and Gerhard Schröder.

By Tony Czuczka
Associated Press

BONN, Germany — Gerhard Schröder and his Social Democrats won the national elections Sunday, ushering in the first change of government Germany has seen after 16 years of conservative rule under Chancellor Helmut Kohl, the West's longest-serving leader.

The 54-year-old chancellor-elect will be the first of the "68 generation," rooted in the leftist movements of the 1960s, to lead Europe's biggest nation.

Throwing up his arms in a victory salute, Schröder promised cheering supporters he would keep pledges to fight unemployment — this year's major campaign issue — as well as achieve long-awaited tax and economic reforms.

"The Kohl era has come to an end," Schröder proclaimed to the cheering party faithful. "Our task will be to thoroughly modernize our country and to unblock the backlog of reform."

The defeated Kohl will be remembered best as the chancellor who unified communist East Germany with the West in 1990, after the fall of the Berlin Wall.

Schröder, too, will have his shot at history as he oversees two monumental changes next year: the government's return to Berlin, its pre-war capital, and the switch from the trusted German mark to the European common currency, the euro.

Kohl, 68, looked tired and sad as he conceded defeat.

"This is a hard evening for me and for us all," Kohl told his supporters. "... I wish Herr Schröder the best of luck and a successful time in office." He also announced he would not run for re-election as chief of his party, likely making way for his protégé, Wolfgang Schäuble, to succeed him.

After 16 years of conservative rule, Germans vote in the Social Democrats and Gerhard Schröder.

BONN, Germany — Gerhard Schröder and his Social Democrats won the national elections Sunday, ushering in the first change of government Germany has seen after 16 years of conservative rule under Chancellor Helmut Kohl, the West's longest-serving leader.

The 54-year-old chancellor-elect will be the first of the "68 generation," rooted in the leftist movements of the 1960s, to lead Europe's biggest nation.

Throwing up his arms in a victory salute, Schröder promised cheering supporters he would keep pledges to fight unemployment — this year's major campaign issue — as well as achieve long-awaited tax and economic reforms.

"The Kohl era has come to an end," Schröder proclaimed to the cheering party faithful. "Our task will be to thoroughly modernize our country and to unblock the backlog of reform."

The defeated Kohl will be remembered best as the chancellor who unified communist East Germany with the West in 1990, after the fall of the Berlin Wall.

Schröder, too, will have his shot at history as he oversees two monumental changes next year: the government's return to Berlin, its pre-war capital, and the switch from the trusted German mark to the European common currency, the euro.

Kohl, 68, looked tired and sad as he conceded defeat.

"This is a hard evening for me and for us all," Kohl told his supporters. "... I wish Herr Schröder the best of luck and a successful time in office." He also announced he would not run for re-election as chief of his party, likely making way for his protégé, Wolfgang Schäuble, to succeed him.

Schröder supporters streamed into the streets of Bonn, holding balloons and chanting "Kohl must go!" Many voters have known no other chancellor but Kohl, and the promise of change brought tears of joy at party headquarters.

"Finally, finally. I have rarely been so happy," said Uta Tiedtke, 51, dabbling her eyes as she stood among the revelers. "My two children have never known anything other than Kohl. This means the end of stagnation. We've been waiting for this so long."

Schröder, the popular governor of Lower Saxony, has tried to move his traditionally leftist party toward the political middle to appeal to the widest possible audience. His party's victory adds momentum to the wave of center-left governments across Europe, after Britain's Tony Blair and France's Lionel Jospin.

Schröder told the ARD television network that he would begin talks today on building a coalition. His party won 41 percent of the vote, according to early official results, giving it the right to form a government with Schröder at its head. The Christian Democrats won 35 percent.

Kohl's government will continue in a caretaker role until a new coalition is formed. There is no deadline under the Constitution.

The new chancellor has said he hopes to govern with the environmentalist Green party, which won 6.7 percent. It was unclear, though, whether the two were strong enough to form a stable majority in the Bundestag, the German Parliament.

Schröder would not say if coalition talks would start with the Greens, who would have their first shot at a role in government.

Together, the two parties would have 334 seats in the 656-seat parliament, a shaky six-vote majority that might not survive differences between the sometimes radical Greens and the more pragmatic Social Democrats.

Schröder reiterated that he would not consider including in his government the ex-communist Party of Democratic Socialism, which won enough votes to stay in the Bundestag. Many in the West view the party as a troubling remnant of "This is a hard evening for me and for us all. I wish Herr Schröder the best of luck and a successful time in office."

— Chancellor Helmut Kohl, the West's longest-serving leader

the former communist East German state.

The other option for Schröder is to share power with the Christian Democrats in a so-called "grand coalition" — something Germany hasn't seen in almost 30 years.

Kohl, however, saw no role for his party in the new government.

"There is nothing more to say about this defeat. The voters have fully and clearly decided for a Red-Green coalition," Kohl said, using the German shorthand for the Social Democrats and the Greens.

"This will carry us through the transition time into the new century," Kohl said.

Besides tackling grand projects as Germany enters the 21st century, Schröder has serious domestic problems to address during his four-year term.

Unemployment, running above 10 percent, was the main campaign issue this year; Schröder has pledged to combat it primarily by opening a dialogue between unions, industry and government officials.

He also has vowed to see through tax reforms that would relieve average wage earners, as well promising to restore modest social welfare programs cut by the Kohl government in an effort to trim the budget.

"We stand for inner security ... but also for continuity in foreign policy," Schröder said in his victory speech. "My most important job is the fight against the scourge of unemployment."

Kohl had sought an unprecedented fifth term on the strength of his image of stability and clout with world powers at a time of economic turmoil in Russia and ongoing conflict in the Balkans.

One of the first tests of the new government will be foreign policy, as NATO prepares for possible air strikes to quell fighting in the Yugoslav province of Kosovo.

The issue affects Germany, which would participate in any military action and where ethnic Albanian refugees from Kosovo are already seeking asylum.

West Bank plan clears hurdle

Israel, for the most part, OKs a U.S. proposal for ceding land to the Palestinians.

By Barry Schweid
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Secretary of State Madeleine Albright's push for at least a partial West Bank accord cleared a major hurdle Sunday as Israel largely accepted a U.S. proposal for how much land it will yield to Palestinians.

But Israel's ambassador to the United Nations, Dore Gold, said in an interview: "If there's no security, there is no deal."

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu said Sunday on CNN that Israel's agreement with the United States was "almost complete about the amount of land that we would hand over. It is territory that is uninhabited by Palestinians but is very important for our security."

Netanyahu said the remaining issue was "to make sure that the land that we hand over to the Palestinians does not become a base for continued terrorist attacks against Israel."

Gold said Yasser Arafat's Palestinian Authority must break up terrorist cells on land it already holds on the West Bank and in Gaza and confiscate weapons.

On the Palestinian side, Yasser Kidwa, who heads the Palestinian delegation to the United Nations, said reaching a final agreement was impossible at this stage. He said Albright and her team were trying to reach agreements on several issues, and "we are not against that."

However, Nabil Shaath, a senior Palestinian official and negotiator, said the Palestinians told Albright "that we are insisting on the package deal, and we are not ready to accept anything less than that."

Albright met with Arafat again, meanwhile, and planned to see Netanyahu Sunday night. She held back-to-back meetings with the two leaders on Sept. 26 as well.

Reporters were kept at a distance, and Albright has said only one word publicly since the series of meetings began. That was on Sept. 26, when in response to a reporter's shouted question how her meeting with Arafat had gone, she replied: "Good."

Albright is laying the groundwork for meetings President Clinton will hold at the White House with Netanyahu today and with Arafat Tuesday.

Questioning Arafat's commitment, Gold, one of Netanyahu's closest advisers, said Palestinian security officials were quoted in the Palestinian press on Sept. 24 as saying they "are protecting" 25 members of Hamas, the militant organization that claims responsibility for bloody attacks in Israel.

Gold said the 25 suspected terrorists had been freed from Palestinian detention.

Arafat, meanwhile, publicly repudiated a Palestinian television program in which schoolchildren were exhorted to prepare for Israel's overthrow. "This will not recur," he said in a speech to the Center for Middle East Peace and Economic Cooperation, a private group with many American Jewish members that supports Arab-Israeli peacemaking.

"We live in a moment of truth," Arafat said, suggesting that an agreement with Israel hangs in the balance as Albright and other U.S. mediators continued their efforts to narrow differences over further Israeli withdrawal from the West Bank.

He said the Palestinian Authority had a policy of "zero-tolerance for terrorism irrespective of the status of negotiations."

On a conciliatory note, Arafat reiterated his aspirations for a Palestinian state, but said he hoped it would be part of an international "celebration" of peace with Israel.

In the past, Arafat has declared his intention to establish a state whatever the outcome of peace talks. Albright and Netanyahu have condemned such "unilateral declarations" on issues that are supposed to be on the agenda for negotiating a final settlement.

Today, Arafat is due to address the U.N. General Assembly, in which support for the Palestinians is high and Israel is frequently denounced. Albright and Netanyahu are hopeful he will muffle his statehood stance, but asked if Arafat planned to raise the statehood issue, Shaath replied: "Sure."

On a tough note, Arafat said hopes for peace turned to despair after Netanyahu took office two years ago with "the intention to set the clock backward."

The Palestinian leader, who was accorded a standing ovation at the beginning and end of his speech, said the peace process was stalled. But he also said "our hopes remain very high."

NATION BRIEF

Reno in good condition after fainting in church

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Janet Reno fainted during a church service Sunday and was taken to a hospital, where she was reported in good condition.

Reno, 60, was expected to remain overnight for monitoring in the coronary unit at Georgetown University Medical Center, said Paul Katz, the center's chief operating officer. She canceled a trip to New York scheduled for today, during which she had planned to tour a school and give a speech during the early morning.

"This is just a fainting spell. Her condition is good," Katz said, adding that Reno was joking and in good spirits. Katz said her heart rhythm, EKG, heart rate, respiration and blood pressure were all good.

Reno told her staff she was feeling fine and looked forward to returning to work. She read work materials and spoke with family members Sunday afternoon.

She was disappointed that the hospital television did not receive cable, preventing her from watching some final games of the baseball regular season.

She asked if either Mark McGwire or Sammy Sosa had hit any home runs Sunday and was told that McGwire had hit his 69th, her spokesman, Bert Brandenburg, said.

McKinley adjusts after manhole incident ley said. She said it is often hard for people to see beyond a disability.

"I want to be seen as a good teacher, a good mother and a good citizen," she said. "Now, I am afraid that I will only be seen as the poor blind woman who fell into a manhole."

McKinley was diagnosed with diabetes at 11; she lost her sight giving birth at 22; she received a kidney transplant in 1989; she had a heart attack nearly a year ago; and she has lost both her parents and a sister. Through it all, she said she has stayed a survivor.

"I didn't need this. I have enough problems without having to fall in a manhole," McKinley said with a smile.

She was released on Sept. 26 from the UI Hospitals and Clinics and is now being cared for at home by fellow UI teaching assistant Brian Miller, who is also blind, and her 14-year-old son, John Whalen, who said he has become used to his mother's misfortune.

"The next day at school everybody was like, 'Did you hear about the blind woman who fell down the manhole?'" Whalen said. "I was like, 'She's my mom.' They all freaked out."

As an accelerated rhetoric teaching assistant and graduate student working toward her M.F.A. in non-fiction writing, McKinley said she doesn't know how long she will be away from her work. Because she uses a computer for class work, the cast that runs up the length of her left arm will be a hindrance to her studies, just as the cast on her leg makes it difficult to get around.

"I'm too sore to be angry. Right now, I am just concentrating on getting better," McKinley said.

UI freshman Jason Moeller climbed down into the manhole shortly after McKinley fell and stayed with her until the paramedics arrived about 10 minutes later. On Sunday, McKinley said she called Moeller to thank him. Moeller said he doesn't really consider himself a hero.

"Somebody needed my help, so I help them," he said, adding that the only thing McKinley was worried about at the bottom of the manhole was getting out in time to teach her class.

Although she is taking the fall with equanimity, McKinley said the accident was still a traumatic event.

"I've already had a nightmare about it," she said. "I just remember the feeling of falling and not knowing when it would end ... For all I knew, I could have fallen off the edge of the earth."

It will also take a little while for her to feel comfortable going around campus by herself again, saying she'll move "very cautiously and a little bit slower than I used to."

The silver lining in all of this may be the tremendous show of support, McKinley said, including a get-well card from UI President Mary Sue Coleman, food, flowers and candy that she can't eat because she's diabetic.

"I guess if it had to happen, it is probably best that it happened to me," she said. "I don't know who else could have survived the fall."

McKinley is currently president of the Old Capitol chapter of the National Federation of the Blind of Iowa, which she said gave her a chance to gain self-confidence and makes her feel like she can do anything.

The chapter works towards goals for the blind and informs the public about the disability, said Mickey Fixsen, vice president of the chapter.

He said McKinley's accident could have happened to anyone — blind or not — because proper precautions were not made to barricade the hole from all sides. McKinley is a very good cane traveler and is capable of getting around by herself, he added.

"Priscilla is an extremely strong individual, but this accident will be an immediate setback," Fixsen said. "Right now, she can't walk because her foot is in a cast, and can't do her work because her hand is also in a cast."

McKinley is "very respected among those in the English department. It is pretty sad that it happened," said UI senior and English major Kelly Donahue, one of McKinley's students.

McKinley said she feels lucky in a way because she fell the "right way," making her injuries less severe than they could have been. She said she's glad she landed on her elbow instead of her head, which could have made the accident more serious.

"I was lucky because I got caught on something on the way down and it slowed my fall," she said. "I don't remember it, but the back of my pants were all torn."

Besides trying to finish her thesis about losing her eyesight, her next project is an essay tentatively titled "My butt saved my ass," McKinley said, jokingly.

Back-yard plane crackup scares residents

"I'll have to stop sitting on my porch now," he said.

Rick Mascari, a member of the Iowa City Airport Commission, played down the recent incidents, saying the airport is doing everything it can to make it as safe as possible.

He emphasized the number of planes that take off and land safely without incident compared with the small number that crash.

"Things like this happen," Mascari said. "He (Emerson) did a magnificent job, that's what we're trained for. What did it hurt? Trees? There's houses here, and there's a Menards across the street."

The plane's right wing was completely sheared off by the impact, while the left wing was bent back. Each wing housed a gas tank. The right tank remained intact, while the left tank sustained minor damage with some fuel leakage, Iowa City police Sgt. Jim Linn said.

The plane's cockpit and tail sections remained intact, and both Emerson and Singley were able to leave the plane immediately after the crash.

Both Emerson and Singley were wearing their seat belts and escaped without serious injury. Singley received only a scratch on his right pinky, which was bandaged by paramedics on the scene.

"That landing hurt like hell," Emerson said. "I'm a firm believer in seat belts. I was in a car wreck a couple years back; my seat belt saved me then, and it did it again."

The Iowa City Police and Fire Departments responded to the incident, along with deputies from the Johnson County Sheriff's Office. The crash is under investigation by the FAA and National Transportation Safety Board.

Minneapolis bridge incident angers local family he and a 20-year-old friend were trying to scare the rowers by dropping the block as close to the boat as possible, according to a Minneapolis Police Department officer.

CEMENT BLOCK

"I was really shocked when it hit me. I had no idea that my head was hurt," Megan Roy said.

Christopher Roy said he will not take legal action if the city of Minneapolis does something to prevent this from happening again.

Megan Roy's mother, Nora Roy, who is president of the Old Capitol Rowers Club, said she has never seen an incident like this on the Iowa River.

"The only things they throw off the bridges in Iowa City are pieces of bread for the ducks," she said. "I know that on interstates they have big fences to prevent this sort of thing. Maybe they should do the same thing in the Twin Cities on their bridges."

Megan Roy, a former Iowa City West High soccer player, chose rowing over other collegiate sports because she thought it would be more of a "non-contact" sport, Christopher Roy said.

The teen-ager was hospitalized overnight in a Minneapolis hospital with 11 stitches on her forehead and bad bruises on her arm and knee.

"She could have been killed if it hit an inch or two lower on her head," her mother said.

Nora Roy, who works at the UI Hospital School, would have competed against her daughter last weekend at the "Head of Des Moines" regatta — a competition between rowing clubs. Instead, Megan Roy had to sit on the bank and cheer on her mother and her own teammates.

"When we saw (Megan Roy) in Des Moines, she was in good spirits and looked good," Nora Roy said. "My concern is if this man is released and does this again," she said. "That, in my view, would be really wrong."

Tickets for one-game playoff impossible to get locally team play this season.

When the Giants lost, "everyone hit the phones" at the Sports Column, 12 S. Dubuque St., said manager Scott Beller, but nobody was able to get through.

UI junior Colin Tubbs said he was devastated when he couldn't get tickets from his Mayflower Residence Hall room.

"I tried the phones, I tried the Internet. I was so excited when the Giants lost, I had to get tickets," he said. "I was crushed when I found out that Ticketmaster was selling tickets in person only in Chicago. But at least the Cubs still have a chance."

Worried Iowa City fans feared that the ticket window would be shut when the Giants' game ended. However, little did they know that closing time was going to be the least of their problems — Ticketmaster already had blocked out-of-state sales for the game.

Local fans could get tickets to the wild-card playoff only if they went to Chicago area Ticketmaster outlets in person.

"The minute that the Giants lost, our phones started ringing off the hook for 45 minutes straight," said Brad Schwab, an employee at the Union Box Office. "Basically, Cub fans in Iowa are ... out of luck."

The problems were not limited to the Union office. Vibe Records, 119 E. Washington St., reported that 20 people had come in and 30 had called — all disappointed over ending up without tickets.

"We've had 50 calls, and 50 people walk in for tickets," Suzanne Thalman, an employee of Hy-Vee, said. "People are pretty disappointed when we tell them that Ticketmaster is selling tickets only in Chicago."

Micky's Goldstein said one of his bartenders, a Cubs fan, left for Chicago immediately after the game, saying that even if he couldn't get tickets, he would celebrate outside Wrigley Field.

"It would be nice to be in the area. Even if he couldn't get tickets, he still wanted to be there for the spectacle," Goldstein said.

Hurricane Georges was the only thing that could keep many On the Line players from sweeping the card this week.

With few big matchups and many lopsided contests, a slew of players went down to the tie-breaker game (a 24-17 Fairfield win over Georgetown). The only borderline upset was Texas Tech's win over Iowa State: 81 players left the Cyclones on the pull off the win. The word is not one in which Iowa State should be counted on for victory, yet.

This week's On the Line winners are: Larry Mooney (9), Rick Allan (9), Dan Eppley (9), Brent Jerr (9), Dave Stec (9), C. J. Labor (9), Tom Tiv (9), Terry Buller (9), Dave Schwebel (9), Scott Thomson (9) and Lisa Johnston (9).

Iowa basketball player J.R. Koch finished with seven wins and two losses as this week's guest panelist. He was foiled by Michigan's win over Michigan State and Florida State's handling of USC.

For the Daily Iowan, Wayne Dehrs and Andy Hamilton swept the table in all games played, finishing 9-0. James Kramer managed to win eight dropping only the Purdue-Notre Dame game.

Chris Snider, who was obviously under the influence of heavy medication, guessed seven games correctly.

Cubs, Giants back their way into playoff

Both teams lost Sunday, meaning they will face each other in a one-game playoff for the NL wild-card today.

By Steven Wine
 Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Chicago Cubs walked off the Astrodome field Sunday with their heads down, stunned by an 11th-inning defeat and wondering whether their season was over.

Then they reached the clubhouse and began to celebrate.

"This," shortstop Jeff Blauser said, "has been a wild season for the Cubs."

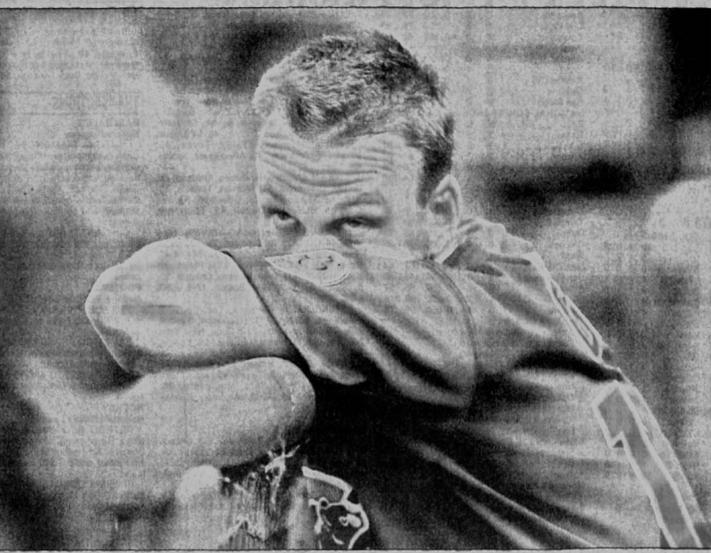

Moments after a heartbreaking 4-3 loss to the Houston Astros, the Cubs learned they were still alive in the NL wild-card race, thanks to San Francisco's 9-8 defeat at Colorado. The score in Denver couldn't have bolstered the Cubs' mood more if it had been announced by Harry Caray himself, because it means a one-game playoff with the Giants.

"I'm halfway up the stairs coming to the clubhouse, and people were in here celebrating," closer Rod Beck said. "I knew it wasn't because we did good. People were jumping up and down shouting, 'There's a tomorrow! There's a tomorrow!'"

Two hesitant defensive plays nearly eliminated the Cubs, who blew a 3-1 lead and failed to score an earned run in 11 innings. But they're still alive.

"Maybe somebody is looking out for us," Blauser mused. "What would somebody with a death-row reprieve say? Whoopee. We've got another chance."

The Cubs and Giants will meet Monday night at Wrigley Field, with

Highlights from the final day of the baseball season

Bernie Williams won the AL batting title over Mo Vaughn, barely. A rookie came within one out of a no-hitter. The New York Yankees finished with an AL record 114 victories.

Paul Molitor got his 3,319th — and perhaps last — hit in the big leagues. The Cincinnati Reds assembled the majors' first all-brother infield — a pair of Larkins, a pair of Boones. Ruben Amaro Jr. got the winning hit in his final major league game, then left to become the winner earning a playoff berth against the Atlanta Braves.

All three wild-card contenders lost Sunday. The New York Mets were eliminated at Atlanta.

With a victory, the long-suffering Cubs would have clinched their first playoff appearance since 1989. But Houston's Carl Everett tripled leading off the 11th when a retreating Sammy Sosa shied away from the ball as he reached the warning track, and Richard Hidalgo's sacrifice fly gave the Astros the win.

Philadelphia's assistant general manager.

Rookie Roy Halladay started the rush, nearly pitching a no-hitter in just his second major league game. The 21-year-old Toronto righty lost his bid when Detroit pinch-hitter Bobby Higginson homered with two outs in the ninth inning at SkyDome.

The Yankees won their seventh straight game for their 114th victory. Only the 1906 Cubs (116) won more.

The Florida Marlins finished at 54-108, the worst ever for a defending World Series champion.

The Giants and Cubs will meet in the NL's first one-game playoff since 1980, when Houston beat Los Angeles to win the West. In 1995, Seattle defeated the Angels in a one-game playoff for the AL West title.

Sosa's season overshadows the Cubs' success no longer.

"On Monday we'll have everyone in the stands rooting not only for Sammy, but for us, too," pitcher Terry Mulholland said.

ST. LOUIS — Life on the run finally slowed to a walk. By Monday, Mark McGwire plans to have it down to a crawl.

"It's over with, right?" the XXL-sized redhead said Sunday, likely facing a roomful of reporters for the last time this year. "I'm absolutely exhausted."

The hunted became the rested at exactly 3:45 p.m., CDT, with the final pitch of the Cardinals' 1998 season. McGwire didn't play the field in the top of the ninth, but in truth, he could have started chilling out a half-hour or so earlier. That's when he drove his second home run of the day over the wall in left, swinging no harder than a tennis player turning on a two-fisted backhand.

And after hitting 70, McGwire has learned to conserve energy discussing the home runs as well.

"The first was on a breaking ball," he said. "The second was a 96 mph fastball that was up. I wasn't sure it was out because it had a lot of top-

Hayden: We needed that

ANALYSIS/WAYNE DREHS

All is well in Iowa football land — for now

It's amazing how a good pasting of a Big Ten football team can make a loss to Iowa State seem like a distant memory.

But after the Hawkeyes 37-14 win over the Fighting Illini on Saturday, all seems well again in Iowa football land — at least until Michigan comes to town next Saturday.

The Hawkeyes proved that though they may not be a bona fide Big Ten contender, they certainly don't belong in a class with Illinois or any of the other Big Ten also-rans.

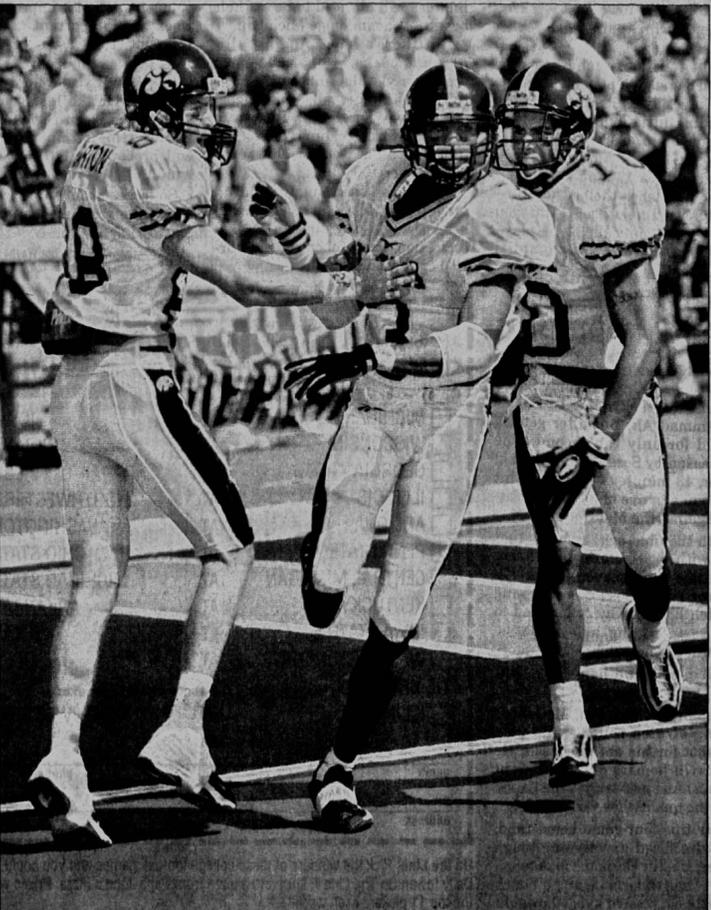

"This was the benchmark game," coach Hayden Fry said. "It is one of the more satisfying wins we've had since I've been here. We needed it bad. Imagine how it would have felt if we would have lost today. Oh my."

Excluding a pair of late touchdowns by the Illini, Iowa got the win in dominating fashion. With a solid offense, strong defense and stellar special teams, Iowa didn't allow Illinois much of a chance.

Thus, the Hawkeye pride that the Cyclones crushed three weeks ago was restored, no matter how sad Illinois looked.

Since the Iowa State game, Iowa's defense has healed up, quarterback Kyle McCann has gained confidence and the team as a whole has begun to mature. All the improvements were evident in Saturday's win.

"These kids have been driving me crazy," Fry said. "They are making an old man of me. That's why I'm

Record day for Douglas sparked win

By Andy Hamilton
 The Daily Iowan

For 15 minutes of football Saturday, Iowa looked like a different football team — a really good team.

Granted, the opponent wasn't Ohio State or Michigan, Iowa-Illinois game but it didn't seem like a matter to matter to Iowa.

coach Hayden Fry or any of the players after the game. After two consecutive losses, any win was acceptable.

All it took was a dominating second quarter to give Iowa a 37-14 win over Illinois and put some smiles back in the Hawkeye lockerroom.

"That was one of the more satisfying victories since I've been at Iowa," Fry said. "We needed that bad with this young group."

And no Iowa player had more reason to smile than walk-on kicker Tim Douglas, who became the third player in NCAA history to boot three field goals from 50 yards and beyond in one game.

"It's just an honor to be part of that," Douglas said of entering the record books. "I think the biggest thing was the Iowa Hawkeyes needed a big win. That's what I'm most happy about. I think we got a little respect back."

From Douglas' 51-yard field goal on the second play of the quarter until his school record breaking 58-yarder on the final play, the Hawkeyes dominated the Fighting Illini.

Everything went Iowa's way in second quarter Saturday

IOWA-ILLINOIS

Iowa (2-2, 1-0 Big Ten) outscored Illinois (1-3, 0-1) 27-0 in the second quarter and the Hawkeyes did it in every way possible.

Kittner was also sacked three times in the quarter and he completed one pass for one yard. "I don't know what happened out there," Kittner said of the quarter.

designed to be an out pattern, turned up field and McCann was on the same page. "Kyle threw a perfect ball," Hill said. "It would've been a shame to drop something like that."

Defense and special teams was key to Hawkeye win starting to wear a hat. But they are getting better. At least when they are making mistakes, they are doing it full-speed. "Though the offense still has a ways to go, the defense looked strong. Through the first three quarters, it held Illinois to just 103 yards of total offense, while tallying five quarterback sacks. At halftime, Illinois quarterback Kurt Kittner was just 2-of-9 passing for one yard.

with the improved health and emergence of the special teams, the Hawkeyes didn't need to rely on the inexperienced offense to lead the way to victory. But this Saturday, that's going to change. The defense, special teams and an offense that has yet to impress will all need to be at their best to even challenge Michigan.

Overall, Illinois wasn't much of a challenge for the Hawkeyes on either side of the ball, but that's a good thing. If Iowa would have come out and struggled against the lowly Illini, there would have been need to worry. Instead, we now know all isn't lost in the Iowa football season. With a young team that is improving by the week, it is important not to judge Iowa until the season is over.

So forget about the Cyclone fiasco — things are not that bad here. We will be Illinois. DI assistant sports editor Wayne Drehs can be reached at wdrehs@blue.weeg.uiowa.edu.

McGwire was, in a word, impressive spin. But it turned out to be enough. McGwire has been so locked in at differing junctures this season that he has done the unimaginable. He's made hitting home runs look almost easy, made the boasts of Reggie Jackson, another remarkable slugger, seem a little bit less fearsome. "In the building I live in on Park Avenue, there are 10 people who could buy the Yankees," Jackson loved to say, "but none of them can hit the ball out of Yankee Stadium."

end of the season, McGwire would have been Alydar to Sammy Sosa's Affirmed, Joe Frazier to Sosa's Muhammad Ali. But after getting passed for only the second time this season by Sosa — for a total of 1 hour, 43 minutes — McGwire hit home runs in five of his final 11 at-bats against the Montreal Expos. With the final one, he knew that even with a Secretariat-like finish in the one-game playoff for the NL wild card spot, Sosa was not going to catch him. McGwire planned to be so busy relaxing, in fact, that he might not even watch. "I'll be on the beach by that time," he said. "Sorry."

IOWA-ILLINOIS NOTEBOOK

DeVries breaks through for record sack

All-American Jared DeVries passed former Hawkeye Mike Wells for the school's all-time sack record Saturday.

By Wayne Drehs and Andy Hamilton
The Daily Iowan

Jared DeVries didn't plan on taking so long to become Iowa's career sack leader, but it wasn't really under his control.

Opponents have been double- and triple-teaming the preseason All-American throughout the season, making it even more difficult for the banged-up senior to get to the quarterback.

But Saturday, he busted through the Illinois offensive line twice, officially welcoming freshman quarterback Kurt Kittner to football in the Big Ten.

DeVries and Chicago Bear defensive tackle Mike Wells had previously shared the record with 33 sacks apiece.

"It's real nice to get that out of the way," DeVries said. "I expect to get about two or three sacks a game, and when I don't do that, I think I'm playing bad."

Though DeVries refused to rely on his ankle, foot and knee injuries as excuses for his slow start, he did admit things have been much tougher his senior year.

Neither DeVries nor coach Hayden Fry could remember the last time DeVries played with close to 100-percent health.

"He's just a really, really tough, big ol' Iowa boy," Fry said. "I wish, for just one game, he could be fully healthy and we could see what he can really do."

Fry scoffed at the notion that DeVries' slow start this season has hurt his stock for next spring's NFL Draft. Projections from this summer had DeVries listed as the No. 1 defensive tackle in the country.

"If anything, playing hurt and dealing with all this has helped

Brian Moore/The Daily Iowan

Joe Slattery of Iowa returns an interception 47 yards for a touchdown.

him," Fry said.

RECORD DAY: Tim Douglas' day got off to a rough start when he missed a 38-yard field goal into a 17-mph wind. But that was no indication of what kind of day the Plano, Texas, native would have.

Douglas became just the third player in NCAA history to make three field goals of 50 yards or longer in a game.

"I think it got in my head a little bit that I was kicking into the wind," Douglas said of his miss. "But when we got the wind behind us, most definitely, that builds your confidence."

Douglas also broke Tom Nichol's school record with his 58-yarder at the end of the first half.

SAIDAT, SAIDAT: DeVries' two-sack afternoon wasn't even the top performance for the Hawkeye defensive line Saturday.

Junior tackle Ed Saidat recorded 3½ sacks and five total tackles for loss Saturday in a breakout performance.

DeVries even gave Saidat the credit for his record-breaking sack No. 34.

"Eddie played a heck of a game and I just got lucky," DeVries said. "He chased their quarterback over to me and then pushed him into me. If I get double-teamed and Eddie gets the sack and we win, I really don't care."

SLATTERY SCORES: Junior defensive back Joe Slattery returned an interception 47 yards for a touchdown against the Illini, becoming the first non-freshman Hawkeye to enter the end zone in 1998.

It was Slattery's second career interception and his first touchdown.

Slattery recorded an interception in the end zone against Indiana last year, preserving a 62-0 shutout.

BOLLING BACKFIELD: Senior fullback Trevor Bollers started for the first time Saturday, replacing senior captain Michael Burger.

Burger had started 30 consecutive games.

Bollers carried the ball six times Saturday, rushing for 19 yards, and did a solid job protecting quarterback Kyle McCann.

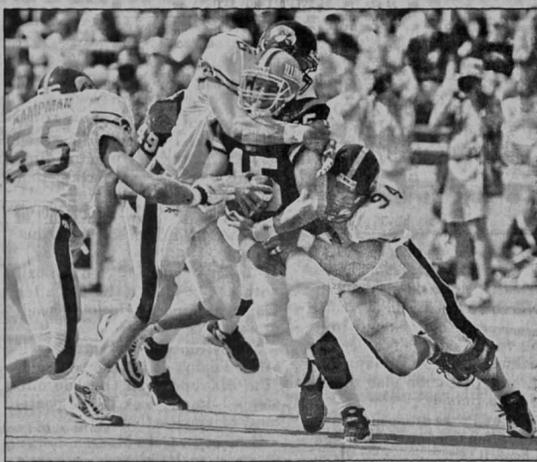

Junior Rob Thein also got the starting nod over Ladell Betts at tailback, due to an injury to Betts.

Fry said the freshman missed the entire week of practice, so he went with Thein, who carried the ball 12 times for 26 yards.

Betts gained 59 yards on 13 carries, including a spinning four-yard touchdown run in the second quarter.

THE WALL UP FRONT: The Hawkeye offensive line, which had given up 17 sacks in its first three games, didn't give up one to the Illini.

In addition, the Hawkeyes rushed for more than 100 yards for the first time this season, totaling 151 yards on the ground.

Still, the line made its mistakes, including three holding penalties.

"Those guys have really improved and it showed," Fry said. "They are getting better, but I still have to stay tough on them."

FRESHMAN EXPERIENCE: Jerry Montgomery became the fifth true freshman to play for the Hawkeyes this season when he entered the game Saturday.

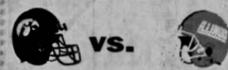

"He's a 300-pound defensive lineman and we haven't had that in years," Fry said. "We're gonna try to make an honest run at everything. If somebody can help us win, we're gonna try to do it."

Linebacker Aaron Kampman, who played in his first game at Arizona, had four tackles and forced a fumble when he sacked Kittner in the fourth quarter.

Hawkeyes-Illini quarter by quarter

First quarter

Iowa controlled the ball for 10:46 of the opening frame, but the Hawkeyes had nothing to show for it.

The Fighting Illini held the Hawkeyes to three runs and a punt on Iowa's opening possession, but Iowa's Travis Senters recovered Rob Majoy's fumble on the punt on the Illinois 33-yard line. Iowa failed to capitalize and Tim Douglas missed a 38-yard field goal.

While Illinois couldn't move the ball against the Iowa defense, the Hawkeyes put together a nine-play, 46-yard drive to end the quarter at the Illinois 34-yard line.

Although the Hawkeyes couldn't break the scoreless tie, they played Illini even going against the wind.

Second quarter

Everything imaginable went right for Iowa and wrong for Illinois.

Iowa scored 27 points on a combination of long-range field goals by kicker Tim Douglas, a 57-yard punt return by Kahill Hill, a 47-yard interception return by Joe Slattery and a four-yard run by Ladell Betts.

The Hawkeye defense kept the Illinois offense pinned to its own end, as Jared DeVries and Ed Saidat combined to sack Illinois freshman quarterback Kurt Kittner three times.

Illinois finished the half with just 40 yards and three first downs.

Kittner finished the half with just two completions for one yard and the interception.

Third quarter

Iowa put the game completely out of reach when Kyle McCann threw a perfect strike to Hill for a 51-yard touchdown.

Later, Douglas became the third player in NCAA history to kick three field goals of 50 yards or longer in a game.

Illinois finally moved into Iowa territory when Kittner completed his second pass of the day, a 26-yard throw to Larry Davis to the Iowa 23-yard line. The following play, Eric Thigpen intercepted Kittner.

After Iowa failed to move the ball out of its end, punter Jason Baker boomed a 79-yard punt to back the Illini up once again.

Fourth quarter

The final quarter started like the other three for Kittner. His first pass fell incomplete and he fumbled on the second play after getting sacked by Iowa freshman Aaron Kampman.

The Illini finally found a way to move the ball on the Iowa defense, as Kittner found success hitting Davis on fade patterns over the Iowa cornerbacks.

Illinois got on the board with a Russell Harvey 25-yard run and a Kittner 1-yard sneak.

Missed opportunities cost Iowa pair of wins

The Hawkeye soccer team lost to Northwestern and Wisconsin last weekend, dropping its record to 0-3 in the Big Ten.

By Roger Kuznia
The Daily Iowan

The two teams that defeated the Iowa women's soccer team this weekend used their heads — literally.

Northwestern and Wisconsin each scored their game-winning goals with headers off corner kicks. Northwestern won Friday's game, 1-0, and Wisconsin also shut out Iowa, 3-0, Sunday.

The two losses dropped Iowa to 0-3 in Big Ten Conference play and 5-3-1 overall.

Brooke Bell headed the ball into the net for Northwestern's lone goal 17:30 into the first half. The assist went to Kristen Palmer on the corner kick.

Iowa retaliated with a frenzied attack in the second half. The Hawkeyes had numerous opportunities to score, but could not connect on any of them.

Northwestern came into the game ranked 11th in the nation in the NSCAA coaches poll, but Wildcat head coach Marcia McDermott said Iowa outplayed her team.

"We survived today," McDermott said. "Sometimes good teams win games when they're not supposed to."

To prevent a corner kick goal by the Badgers, Gabbert said she used some of her team's practice time Saturday to work on defending that play.

However, the Hawkeyes failed to stop Wisconsin from scoring in that manner.

Allison Wagner directed the ball with her head into the net after teammate Lindsay Hoelter's header went wide.

"The situation presented itself and we didn't do it," Gabbert said. "I'm disappointed that no one stepped up and took the responsibility to organize that."

Goalkeeper Gabe Mauren, Iowa's starting goaltender, said there's only so much ground she can cover when defending corner kicks. The territory she can't cover has to be entrusted to other defenders.

"You just hope that people go up strong and win the ball," Mauren said. "Sometimes the other team jumps a little higher than you and wins it."

Instead of controlling the second half like the Hawkeyes did against Northwestern, Iowa controlled the first half against Wisconsin, yet still found itself down 1-0.

The Badgers had only one shot on goal in the first half and they scored on that opportunity.

Lance Shuey/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Michelle Mobily splits a pair of Wisconsin defenders in the Hawkeyes' 3-0 loss to the Badgers Sunday.

"It's really a heartbreaker for that to happen, especially when we had four or five chances of our own to finish," Gabbert said.

Midfielder Marcy Nelson had two of those opportunities to score early in the first half, but luck was not with her.

Nelson first kicked a 25-yard shot that hit the top of the crossbar. Later in the half, she attempted her own header, but it went just high and wide.

"It takes a lot mentally for players to keep going and going, especially when things aren't going your way," Gabbert said.

Iowa continues Big Ten play with two games in Michigan next weekend. The Hawkeyes play Michigan on Friday and Michigan State on Sunday.

Mauren said now that her team has played the three best teams in the Big Ten, getting into the win column may be easier for the remaining six conference games.

"The consolation we do have is that the six teams we play from now on will be more middle-of-the-pack," Mauren said. "We'll have a good chance of beating them hopefully."

In his last home meet ever, Englund captures 1st win

Iowa senior golfer Chris Englund won the Jack Moyers Cup this weekend, helping the Hawkeyes to a 4th place finish.

By Mike Kelly
The Daily Iowan

Iowa senior Chris Englund won the individual title at the Jack Moyers Cup this weekend at Finkbine Golf Course.

Englund, the Finley, Ohio native, won in a score-card playoff to capture the title.

Following his final round, Englund finished in a three-way tie for first place with Jeremy Langley from Kentucky and Willie Kent from Notre Dame. Because of Englund's low round score of 70 Saturday and his 35 on the front nine Sunday, he was declared the winner.

It was Englund's first collegiate victory in his final home tournament. He said afterwards he was proud of the way he handled the mental side of his game, especially on the final holes.

"During the final round I just took the 'whatever happens, happens' approach," Englund, who shot a 73-70-73 for a total of 216, said. "I had never been in this situation before, so I did not really know what to expect. I think I handled it pretty well."

As a team, Iowa finished in a tie for 4th place with Northern Illinois. The Hawkeyes shot a 301-289-299-889 over the two-day tournament.

Iowa junior Adam Turner also finished in the top 10 this weekend, placing eighth with a score of 219.

Overall, Hawkeye Coach Terry Anderson said he was pleased.

"I was very happy to see Chris get a win," Anderson said. "I was also happy with the way we remained in contention all three rounds. Our 289 in the 2nd round was very good."

HAWKEYE SPORTS ROUNDUP

Field hockey team starts Big Ten 0-2 for first time ever

For the first time in the history of the Iowa field hockey program, the Hawkeyes are looking at an 0-2 record in the Big Ten.

Iowa, 4-5, was steam rolled by No. 6 Penn State 6-1 on Friday, then received their second loss at the hands of Ohio State in a 1-0 overtime thriller Sunday.

Sunday's game was a defensive struggle, with each team keeping each other off the board after the first 70 minutes. Kelly Dolan had the two best scoring chances for the Hawkeyes, but each shot just missed.

"Lisa Cellucci played a great game for us in the cage," coach Beth Beglin said. "We tightened up our defense from the Penn State game, but just couldn't score."

Then, in overtime, the Buckeyes got a break-away on Hawkeye Cellucci. The senior came out to challenge the shooter and made the initial save, but one of the Buckeye forwards managed to recover and fed Diana Kuser for the game-winning goal.

The shooting stats were relatively even for the game, with Ohio State putting one more shot on goal (13-12), and penalty corners even at six apiece.

"We did manage to keep them under 15 shots for the first time," Beglin said. "We'd still like to get that number down, but we did improve."

In Friday's action, the Nittany Lions wasted no time in establishing their dominance, taking a 3-0 lead in the first half behind a natural hat trick from Traci Anselmo.

"We didn't play well at all," Beglin said. "We had spurts of good play, ten minutes here and there, but Penn State just outplayed us. They're a good team, and you have to give them credit, but we didn't help ourselves out at all."

The second half was more of the same, and Penn State scored three more times in a six minute stretch, taking the score to 6-0.

"Quan Nim tallied the Hawkeyes' only goal of the weekend, scoring with 6:27 left in the second half."

With Iowa hosting Michigan and Michigan State next weekend at Grant Field, the Hawkeyes are going to have to find a way to spark it's offense.

"Our forwards need to be more dangerous, but until they are, the midfielders and backs need to generate shots and join the attack," Beglin said. "Teams are doing just what I'd do against us now. They're taking away Kerry (Lessard) and making us beat them with someone else."

Volleyball

Iowa junior Julie Williams couldn't quite do enough to get her team a victory last weekend.

Williams twice registered double digits in kills in Iowa's first weekend of conference action, but even that effort couldn't help the Hawkeyes defeat Northwestern or Indiana.

"We had a lot of inconsistent players this weekend," Iowa coach Rita Crockett said. "The consistency we had come from Julie. She kept us going."

But Williams couldn't carry the load by herself, as Iowa fell to 6-5 on the season. The Hawkeyes led the Wildcats on Friday during the first and second sets, but lost the match, 15-11, 15-13, 15-7.

Senior setter Barb Zvonek collected only 29 assists, as Iowa's hitters struggled. Williams led the Hawkeyes with 13 kills and sophomore Katie Panhorst finished with eight.

"It's like we have a car with not all the wheels running at the same pace," Crockett said. "Once we figure that out, things will change."

(Northwestern) had three people in double digits for kills. We only have one that gives us those numbers every time. We need more consistent attackers."

It looked as if things may fall into place for the Hawkeyes on Saturday in Indiana, as they led during all three games. But the Hawkeyes committed 25 total hitting errors, 10 service errors and five blocking errors, leading to another three-set loss (15-10, 15-13, 15-12).

Williams collected 16 kills, while Panhorst finished with 11 digs and seven kills. Iowa held Indiana to a .175 attack percentage, but the Hoosiers kept the Hawkeyes at .083.

"We were always close to winning," Crockett said. "We saw a lot of positives this weekend, but we saw a lot of inconsistencies from players we depend on."

The Hawkeyes have yet to win a game on the road this season, and they dropped their 15th consecutive conference match away from home.

Indiana advanced to 8-3 overall, while Northwestern moved to 11-2.

"The thing is we know we can beat both of those teams, and they know we can beat them, too," Crockett said. "We just need to get more consistent attackers, and we can't have another breakdown with our primary passers like we did."

Rowing

Iowa's Varsity "A" crew took first place in the 8+ division at the Head of Des Moines on Saturday.

The "A" boat, consisting of Iowa's best rowers, finished the race in 17:09, 16 seconds ahead of 2nd place Kansas State. Both Iowa's "B" and "C" boats finished in the top 6.

Iowa's "B" team finished 4th with a time of 17:49 and the "C" team finished 6th. In rowing, the 8+ division means the boat carries 8 rowers and a coxain. For a 4+ race, the boat has 4 rowers and a coxain.

Iowa was strong in both events Saturday.

"This is the best Iowa has ever done at the Head of Des Moines," Kowal said. "To place in the top 6 in both events is really hard. The coxins did an incredible job steering. Each one had a goal to steer the course to the best of their ability and that's what they did."

In the 4+ division, all four Iowa boats finished in the top 6. The Hawkeyes took 2nd, 3rd, 5th and 6th. The Iowa "A" boat finished the race in 18:58, good enough for 2nd. Even Iowa's "D" team finished in the top 6, tying Kansas State's "A" team.

Up next for the Hawkeyes is the Head of the Charles on October 11, in Boston.

Women's golf

The Iowa Women's Golf team finished 9th at the Lady Northern Invitational Sunday.

Meghan Spero was the highest finisher for Iowa, tying for 14th with a 86-78-77-241.

M.C. Mullen's 77 and Katherine Mowat's 79 propelled Iowa to a final round total of 317.

"I was pretty happy with our performance in the final round," coach Diane Thomason said. "We just have to be more consistent, our first round was not very good."

The Hawkeyes battled harsh winds and a challenging layout at Purdue's Kampen Course. The winds exceeded 30 m.p.h Saturday and were near 20 m.p.h. Sunday. Throughout the weekend, only a handful of golfers were able to consistently break 80.

"The wind was the real story this weekend," Thomason said of Kampen, which will host the Big Ten/Big 12 Shootout in Indiana.

"We will just take some time to improve our weaknesses and maintain our strengths," Thomason said.

Women's tennis

Two sophomores won championships at the season-opening tournament for the Iowa women's tennis team in Greenville, S.C., last weekend.

The Hawkeyes opened their fall season at the Furman Fall Classic, where sophomore Megan Kearney won her second straight Furman championship with a 6-4, 6-2 victory over Tennessee's Catherine Hall.

Kearney competed in the No. 6 singles flight this year. In 1997, she won the No. 7 singles flight.

the No. 3 doubles title. Wisconsin and Iowa both fielded teams of seven players, so Landes was teamed with Gabler.

"I knew who she was, but I had never played with her before," Landes said. Gabler and Landes won their first-round match and drew Iowa's No. 3 doubles team of sophomore Erica Johnson and Kearney in the second round.

"We treated it just like another match," Landes said. Gabler-Landes defeated Johnson-Kearney, 8-5, and beat Furman's No. 3 doubles team of Holman-Connell, 8-0, in the final.

Iowa's No. 1 doubles team of junior Shera Wiegler and senior Erin Wolverson finished seventh, and senior Emily Bampton and junior Natalya Dawaf finished third.

"We're way ahead of where we were last year," coach Paul Wardlaw said. "We're off to a good start, but they know that there's still a lot of room for improvement."

—Todd Hefferman

Men's tennis

Sophomore Tyler Cleveland became the first Hawkeye ever to win the Class A singles championship at the Ball State Invitational on Sunday.

The Fairfield, Iowa, native didn't drop a set in the entire tournament, beating Shlomo Shemesh of Butler in the final, 6-3, 6-1.

"The last match was tough at the beginning, he was real quick," Cleveland said. "But once I settled down later, I was able to control most of the points."

Cleveland won five matches in all, beating Butler's Brandon Currie in the first round, Drake's Tim Miller in the second, Jonas Pilbor of Indiana State in the quarterfinals and Hendrik Toft of Arkansas in the semis before edging Shemesh in the finals.

Redshirt freshman Tom Buetikofer won the Class C singles championship with a win over Ball State's Rafael Domenech, 6-4, 7-6. Buetikofer rallied against Western Michigan's Victor Capota in the semifinals to win in three sets after losing the first. Buetikofer prevailed 3-6, 6-3, 7-6 (7-3) before his meeting with Domenech.

"I was real pleased with him, he really played well in the crunch," coach Steve Houghton said.

The Hawkeyes had focused on singles in their limited practice, and it showed at the Invitational. Iowa won 25 of 32 singles matches at the weekend tournament, but managed only a 4-4 doubles record.

"Doubles was kind of our Achilles' heel last year," Houghton said. "I'm very pleased, but the bottom line is that we have to do a lot of work in doubles."

This year, the baseball playoffs begin even earlier than expected.

Because of a tie for the wild-card spot, the San Francisco Giants and Chicago Cubs start off the fall fun Monday night at Wrigley Field.

The NL's first one-game playoff since 1980 will match Mark Gardner (13-5) of the Giants against Steve Trachsel (14-8), with the winner advancing to play Atlanta.

"I told you guys yesterday about my dream of a one-game playoff," Giants manager Dusty Baker said. "I knew it would be Chicago. I wish my dream hadn't come true. I can't remember how the dream turned out."

On Tuesday, the three best-of-5 matchups that are already set get underway.

In the NL, Randy Johnson will pitch the opener for the Houston Astros when Tony Gwynn and the San Diego Padres visit.

In the AL, the Boston Red Sox will try to break their streak of 13

(AP) — Prairie View A&M snapped its NCAA-record, 80 game losing streak, while Nebraska extended the nation's longest home winning streak to 45.

Prairie View won for the first time in nine years Saturday night, stopping a 2-point conversion in the final minute for a 14-12 victory over Langston in Oklahoma City.

"It was well overdue," said Prairie View coach Greg Johnson, who left Langston two years ago to rebuild the Panthers program. "There wasn't any doubt in my mind what we could do. We just had to believe and come through in the stretch."

The victory was the Panthers' first since Oct. 28, 1989, when they defeated Mississippi Valley 21-12. The streak started the following week with a 19-18 loss at Langston.

At Lincoln, Neb., DeAngelo Evans and Bobby Newcombe returned from injuries and scored three touchdowns apiece as second-ranked Nebraska routed No. 9 Washington 55-7.

"This stings, this hurts," Washington quarterback Brock Huard said "You just want to crawl into a hole. You can't believe this happened on national TV."

Nebraska (4-0) hasn't lost at home since a 36-21 defeat to Washington on Sept. 21, 1991. Evans and Newcombe made sure the Huskies (2-1) didn't pull off another upset in Lincoln.

At Manhattan, Kan., Michael Bishop threw for 441 yards and four touchdowns, including a school-record 97-yard to Aaron Lockett, as Kansas State won its 12th straight.

Bishop, who set a school record with 475 yards in total offense, completed 23 of 40 passes and was 48 yards away from Chad May's school record for passing yards in a game when he went to the bench with 11 minutes remaining and Kansas State (4-0) leading 48-7.

straight postseason losses when they play at Cleveland, while the New York Yankees are home to take on Texas.

The Yankees won a league-record 114 games, breaking the mark of 111 by Cleveland in 1954. Only the 1906 Chicago Cubs (116) won more.

"We're not interested in records," Yankees manager Joe Torre said. "That's not what we're all about."

"I remember the 1954 Indians. They set the record for wins in a season, but they lost the World Series to the Giants in four straight," he said. "Sure, there's pressure to win the World Series, but it isn't any more pressure than what we put on ourselves. The bottom line is that our goal every year is to win the World Series." David Wells, who pitched a perfect game this season, will start for New York. Todd Stottlemyre, whose father, Mel, is the Yankees pitching coach, will start for the Rangers.

"Our momentum is only as good as Todd Stottlemyre pitches Tuesday night," Texas manager Johnny Oates said.

The Yankees were 8-3 against the Rangers this year.

"You look at what they've done over the course of a 162-game season," Oates said. "The only thing more amazing is what Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa have done."

At Jacobs Field, the Red Sox feel confident with Pedro Martinez pitching against Cleveland's Jaret

Wright. But Martinez, who has never pitched in the postseason, has struggled in his last five starts. And the Red Sox haven't won in the postseason since Game 5 of the 1986 World Series against the Mets.

"Pressure? There's pressure on my shoulders every time I take the ball," Martinez said. "I don't normally get too excited about things. So far I don't feel anything, just one more game."

Wright, a postseason hero last year as a rookie, was 12-10 with a 4.72 ERA this season.

"Jaret's a young pitcher, an up-and-coming pitcher," Boston center fielder Darren Lewis said. "We know what Pedro can do."

off race, there was no split-screen finish in the home-run chase. Sosa remained at 66, while Mark McGwire hit two in his final game Sunday at St. Louis to finish with 70.

"I'm real happy for him because, hey, he's the man," Sosa said. "I'm not thinking about home runs. I have to sacrifice myself for the team."

Any homers hit by Sosa on Monday would count in his final total. Even if he remains at 66, he expects to go down in history.

"When they mention McGwire, they're going to mention me," he said.

McGwire said he wished Sosa good luck in pursuing a postseason berth.

"I wish I could be in that position. Maybe next year," McGwire said. "We've been going back and forth, and it's been a tremendous ride for he and I."

Sosa singled home Chicago's first run Sunday for his 158th RBI, fourth-best in NL history. He also struck out, flied out twice and singled in the eighth, finishing 2-for-5.

Scott Elarton (2-1) pitched two perfect innings. Beck (3-4) went the final 2½ innings — his longest outing of the season — but said he'll be available Monday. Steve Trachsel (14-8) will start for the Cubs, who remain alive despite losing six of their past eight games.

"There won't be any more scoreboard watching," Beck said. "Now it's up to us what we do."

The NL Central champion Astros played the role of spoilers well, winning for the 27th time in their final at-bat.

"You don't want anybody to win in your own park," said starting pitcher Mike Hampton, who held the Cubs to three unearned runs in six innings. "We didn't want to see them celebrate here. Plus we wanted to go into the playoffs coming off a win."

Randy Johnson will take the mound for the Astros when they face San Diego beginning Tuesday at Houston in the first round of the playoffs.

The Cubs were on the verge of postseason play until they squandered a 3-1 lead in the eighth. Jeff Bagwell tied the game by scoring from first base on Sean Berry's looping single, which dropped among three Cubs. Blausner caught the ball on one hop in shallow left but made a wild throw home.

Now the drama switches to Wrigley Field.

"One more day to put on the hard hat, get out the lunch pail and clock in," Cubs first baseman Mark Grace said. "I'm excited. I wish we could play right now."

Heisman winner Doak Walker dead at 71

By Robert Weller
Associated Press

DENVER — Doak Walker, the 1948 Heisman Trophy winner who starred on two NFL championship teams and was paralyzed in a skiing accident earlier this year, died Sunday at 71.

Walker died at Routh Hospital in Steamboat Springs, the ski resort about 100 miles from Denver where he had lived. The hospital said the cause of death was complications from the paralysis, which he had fought with the same determination he showed on the football field.

Walker was injured Jan. 30 when he hit a change of terrain, was thrown into the air and slammed to the ground. The injury made it difficult for him even to talk.

"Doak would not give up. He was tough until he died. His spirit, attitude, everything was incredible, very positive. He was a courageous individual," said John Nichols, a friend and skiing partner who was with Walker the day he was injured.

Walker had regained some of his ability to talk through rehabilitation, during which he received thousands of letters and faxes from well-wishers and fans worldwide. "His eyes would come alive, his expression was wonderful, he was able to talk in short phrases," said Rod Hanna, a family spokesman.

Shortly before he died his wife Skeeter had gotten him a dog trained to help him get around him. The accident that robbed him of the use of his arms and legs was especially tragic for a Hall of Fame football player known for his breathtaking scoring runs.

Walker, born and raised in Dallas, ended his football career in 1956 after a legendary four years at SMU and six years with the Detroit Lions. He is immortalized by the annual Doak Walker Award, which honors the nation's top college running back.

"I don't think he had any peers. He was the last of the great single wing tailbacks," said Jim Sid Wright, who also played at SMU in the '40s but not with Walker. "Doak was the best all-around tailback I ever saw."

Walker did everything, playing running back, wide receiver, quarterback and defensive back in college and the NFL. He also punned and returned punts and kicks.

TEXAS OPEN

Sutton wins after Leonard blows lead

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Hal Sutton has endured some bad times. He's finally getting to celebrate.

Sutton won a three-way battle on the back nine at the Texas Open on Sunday for his first PGA Tour victory since 1995 after Justin Leonard lost the lead by bogeying the final two holes.

"I've really worked hard this year," Sutton said. "I'd rather think about the past. I'd rather think about the future. Right now, I'm playing well enough I feel I can win again before the year is out."

The first prize of $306,000, the largest check of his career, moved Sutton from 31st on the money list to 15th, with $1,079,740.

Sutton, who led by one stroke entering the final round at LaCantera Golf Club, had six birdies and two bogeys in a 4-under-par 68. He held on to par the final two holes and finish with an 18-under 270 total, one stroke ahead of Leonard, who crumbled, and Jay Haas, who couldn't make a birdie down the stretch.

Leonard and Haas each shot a 68.

"It's disappointing to give myself that good a chance and not be able to pull through," Leonard said. "Right now, I'm pretty upset and not very pleased with the way I played the last two holes."

While Leonard's spirits sank, Sutton's soared.

The victory was Sutton's first since the B.C. Open in 1995 and his ninth on the PGA Tour. It also proves to the 40-year-old from Shreveport, La., that his comeback is real.

One of golf's stars in the early 1980s, Sutton won seven times in his first five years on tour. Then he went winless for eight years after 1986, and in 1992 his earnings dropped to $39,324.

NATIONAL FOOTBALL LEAGUE ROUNDUP

Packers rally for comeback victory

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Overcoming a first half in which his two interceptions helped Carolina take a 10-point lead, Brett Favre threw for 388 yards and five touchdowns to rally the Green Bay Packers to a 37-30 victory Sunday.

Green Bay limited Carolina to 13 first downs, including just five in the first 52 minutes, helping the Packers to their first 4-0 start since 1966, the year they won the inaugural Super Bowl.

Favre, throwing for five scores for the third time in his career, completed 27 of 45 passes. He linked up with Derrick Mayes on three of the TD passes.

The Panthers (0-3) lost their fifth in a row at home.

Saints 19, Colts 13, OT

INDIANAPOLIS — The boys from New Orleans came through, and we're not talking about Peyton Manning and Marshall Faulk. Danny Wuerffel passed for touchdowns of 15 yards to Andre Hastings with 41 seconds left in regulation and 33 yards to Cameron Cleland at 8:50 of overtime.

Manning and Faulk, both natives of New Orleans, appeared to have the game won for the Colts (0-4) with a 78-yard touchdown connection in the fourth quarter. But the Saints (3-0) got the ball back with 2:49 to go, converted a fourth-and-17 with a 44-yard completion to former Colt Sean Dawkins, and tied the game with the TD pass to Hastings.

Broncos 38, Redskins 16

LANDOVER, Md. — For the first time in nine years, the Broncos won a game without John Elway. Bubby Brister did the honors, even running the bootleg right — the play on which Elway injured his hamstring each of the last two weeks — to perfection for a touchdown pass. That started the unbeaten Super Bowl champions on their way to a 4-0 mark.

The Broncos have won nine straight and broke an 0-7 streak without Elway, who decided to rest his leg and did not suit up. The last time the Broncos won without him was in 1989 at Washington behind Gary Kubiak, now Denver's offensive coordinator.

The Redskins (0-4) have been outscored 83-26 at home.

Raiders 13, Cowboys 12

IRVING, Texas — A lucky bounce on a 75-yard touchdown pass and two field goals by Greg Davis gave Oakland all the scoring it needed. Cornerback Charles Woodson also intercepted a pass by Jason Garrett in the end zone to stop another Dallas drive.

On third-and-12 with time running down in the first half, Jeff George heaved a long pass downfield in the direction of James Jett. The ball hit cornerback Kevin Smith in the left shoulder pad and bounced into the arms of Jett, who ran 30 yards untouched to complete the 75-yard touchdown play, longest of the season for Oakland (2-2).

Dallas (2-2) closed in when Garrett beat a blitz to hit Billy Davis with a 55-yard pass and Emmitt Smith scored on the next play from the 1.

Jaguars 27, Oilers 22

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Mike Hollis kicked two field goals in the fourth quarter and rookie Fred Taylor rushed for 116 yards as the Jaguars came from behind for the best start in the team's short history.

On a day when Mark Brunell struggled and the Jaguars (4-0) turned the ball over three times, the defense led the way with four sacks and two interceptions against the Oilers (1-3). Eddie George was held to 25 yards on 14 carries.

Chiefs 24, Eagles 21

PHILADELPHIA — Philadelphia native Rich Gannon's 57-yard completion to Joe Horn in the fourth quarter set up Donnell Bennett's third touchdown run.

In the Chiefs' first visit to Philly, Gannon was 17-for-25 for 262 yards as Kansas City (4-0) won its ninth straight against NFC opponents.

The Eagles (0-4) are off to their worst start in 26 years. They made it close when Rodney Peete passed to Duce Staley for a 17-yard TD with 61 seconds left. Staley had all three touchdowns for Philadelphia.

Cardinals 20, Rams 17

ST. LOUIS — Arizona scored 14 points in a 50-second span of the second quarter and won its St. Louis homecoming.

Joe Nedney's 29-yard field goal with 4:04 to play gave Arizona (2-2) its second straight win. The score was set up by a 43-yard pass interference penalty on Dexter McCleon.

The game was the Cardinals' first regular-season contest in St. Louis since owner Bill Bidwill took the team to Arizona from St. Louis following the 1987 season.

The Rams (1-3) lost their eighth straight home game, wasting a strong showing by rookie running back Robert Holcombe, who rushed for 84 yards and scored twice.

Steelers 13, Seahawks 10

PITTSBURGH — Jerome Bettis got the Steelers (3-1) back to what they do best by running for 138 yards. Bettis went over 100 yards for the 33rd time in his six-year career and the 23rd time with Pittsburgh by early in the third quarter.

Seattle (3-1), one of the NFL's surprise teams so far, couldn't overcome Bettis' big day, four turnovers or a suddenly ineffective running game as it was denied the first 4-0 start in franchise history. The Seahawks, with the AFC's leading rushing offense (158.3 yards per game), were held to 61 yards.

Vikings 31, Bears 28

CHICAGO — Randall Cunningham connected on four TD passes to four receivers — Robert Smith, Cris Carter, Andrew Glover and Randy Moss — and cornerback Corey Fuller had a key interception.

Fuller intercepted what would have been a touchdown, and Moss and Carter had TD receptions in a second half comeback for the Vikings (4-0). Smith, a running back also had a 67-yard catch for a score.

Moss and Carter have four TD receptions each this year.

Cunningham finished 16-of-25 for 275 yards. Erik Kramer was 25-of-29 for 372 yards and four scores for Chicago (0-4), which has led at halftime in all its games.

49ers 31, Falcons 20

SAN FRANCISCO — It doesn't get any simpler than Steve Young to Jerry Rice and it doesn't get any more breathtaking.

The dynamic quarterback-receiver tandem led another offensive show by the 49ers. Young ended the first offensive series with his 200th career touchdown pass, a 66-yarder to Rice. They teamed again just before halftime on a 26-yard pass as the 49ers (3-0) bolted to a 31-7 lead over Atlanta (2-1) and then coasted through a rainy second-half.

It was the Falcons' seventh straight loss at San Francisco, during which they have been outscored 288-115.

Giants 34, Chargers 16

SAN DIEGO — One week after a disastrous performance in the Kansas City rain, Ryan Leaf flopped again under the San Diego sun.

The rookie threw four interceptions in less than three quarters. He was benched following the final one, which was returned 20 yards by Percy Ellsworth for a touchdown.

The Giants (2-2), coming off a 31-7 loss to Dallas on Monday night, had to travel cross-country on a short week. They played like the opportunistic Giants of 1997 in winning on the West Coast for the first time since beating San Francisco in the NFC championship game on Jan. 20, 1991.

Ravens 31, Bengals 24

BALTIMORE — The Cincinnati Bengals knew what Jermaine Lewis could do. They had no way of knowing Priest Holmes also would be difficult to corral.

Holmes, making his first NFL start, ran for 173 yards and two touchdowns and Lewis also scored twice as the Baltimore Ravens beat the Bengals.

The Ravens (2-2) scored on their first three possessions to go up 21-0, then held on after Cincinnati (1-3) twice cut the gap to four points. Holmes scored on runs of 3 and 15 yards, and Lewis caught a 73-yard pass from Eric Zeier and returned a punt 87 yards.

Baltimore secured the victory with an 11-play drive after the Bengals used a 67-yard touchdown pass from Jeff Blake to Carl Pickens to make it 28-24 with 11:18 left.

A 46-yard field goal by Matt Stover put the Ravens ahead 31-14 with 5:15 remaining, and the Bengals never got closer than the Baltimore 32.

Student concert bookers say the show could have put Iowa back on the map.

By Jerry Abejo
The Daily Iowan

If the UI student group that concerts could have had its wish, week would have been capped one big party starring the Matthews Band.

But the College of Liberal Arts show of its own in mind — comment. At 7:30 on the morning after concert, Carver-Hawkeye Art doors would have to open for the with the stage and the arena all set up.

Georges dumps deluge on Gulf Coast

PASCAGOULA, Miss. — Hurricane Georges plowed into the Gulf Coast on Monday and then parked there, pouring rain at an inch-an-hour pace before weakening to a tropical storm that could have a long and ruinous stay.
Winds dropped to 55 mph, 20 mph below hurricane strength and down from a high of 110. New Orleans was spared the catastrophic direct hit that many in the Big Easy had feared.
