Fry says goodbye

■ After 20 years and countless memories at the UI, the football legend is stepping down.

By Wayne Drehs
The Daily Iowan

Hayden Fry never thought saying goodbye would be so difficult. Yet there he was Monday, chin and lips quivering, tears running down his face, explaining that after 20 years as the coach at Iowa, this was the end.

It was a shocking display of emotion for a man who used a no-nonsense coaching style to help turn around the woeful UI football program in the 1980s.

"It's kind of hard to do," Fry said as he wiped the tears from his face with a white handkerchief. "In 47 years of coaching, I've never had to do this. I just can't put it into words.

"All the people that gave me an opportunity to spend 20 years as a member of the Hawkeye family, I could never repay them."

For a coach who outlasted 36 of his Big Ten counterparts during his tenure in Iowa City, it was his loyalty to the UI, ironically, that forced Fry out.

The 69-year-old cited "ideal timing" as his main reason for stepping down. On Nov. 21, his Hawkeyes finished the 1998 season at 3-8, Fry's worst record ever at Iowa. By leaving now, Fry knows Athletics Director Bob Bowsby has ample time to find a suitable replacement for the job.

"Selfishly, it's not the right time for me; I'd rather have gone out with a real good season and all that good stuff that coaches like to talk about," said Fry, Iowa's all-time winningest coach.

"But I truly love the University of Iowa, I truly love the state of Iowa. I'll always be a Hawk, and that's why I've decided to go ahead and retire now."

Fry said he still had some years left in him, but Bowsby stressed that the head coach was not forced out of his position due to the 3-8 record. Bowsby said it was purely Fry's choice and that he made it with the program's best interests in mind.

"This occurred not because we were 3-8, but because Hayden Fry thought it was the right time to work on his golf game a little bit and maybe have a little fun in the wake of what has been one of the most remarkable careers in all of college sports," Bowsby said.

The tall task of replacing Fry will begin immediately, and Bowsby said he will consult the former coach for

"I truly love the University of Iowa, I truly love the state of Iowa. I'll always be a Hawk, and that's why I've decided to go ahead and retire now."

"I've never had to do this. I just can't put it into words," Hayden Fry says, while wiping tears from his eyes. Athletics Director Bob Bowsby, left, joined him at the Monday press conference.

Coaching legend leaves behind a gamut of emotions

■ Most Iowa fans will miss Hayden Fry, while some speculate on who will be his successor.

By Mike Kelly
The Daily Iowan

After 20 years as the UI head football coach, the 69-year-old Fry will be remembered in many ways by UI students young enough to be his grandchildren.

"It is happy and sad at the same time," UI senior Jason Hall said. "I am happy for Hayden that he will get to enjoy his retirement, but I hate to see him go out with the type of season that he did."

Hall was one of several dozen students who watched Fry's Monday press conference on television sets at the Union.

Like many of those fans, UI senior Jamie Paton wondered about the future of Iowa football, saying Fry will be a hard act to follow.

"How can the next person live up to Hayden?" Paton said. "He has meant so much to the state of Iowa."

UI senior Steven Wargo agreed. "He is a hero in this state," Wargo said. "He built the program up so well, and his name is synonymous with Iowa football. He will be missed."

Of course, Fry has had his share of critics over the years, and the team's 3-8 record this season amplified those views.

UI junior Andy Stevenson was one of the less sentimental fans after hearing the news.

"I am glad he finally quit," he said. "It is time for a new start and a new coach; having a younger coach will help both in recruiting and creativity."

The question of who the next coach will be was raised immediately following the press conference — University of Florida defensive coordinator Bob Stoops, a former Iowa player, was most fans' best guess.

"I hope we get Bob Stoops," UI sophomore Curtis Carruthers said. "I am glad Hayden retired when he did, so we have the opportunity to get Stoops or another big-time coach."

UI junior Mike Spratt said no matter who the new coach is, the replacement will be stepping into a situation similar

"He was going around the locker room (after Saturday's game), hugging all the players. And when he got to me, he looked me in the eye and shed a couple of tears and just embraced me for a long time."

— Eric Thigpen, senior safety

"She showed interest and showed he loved me as a person, too. He worried about my family and what I was going through. That's the thing I'm going to remember most about the guy."

Going cold turkey on Thanksgiving

■ Some UI students will not be crying fowl on the traditional holiday Thursday.

By Crissy McMartin
The Daily Iowan

Whether it's an ocean between family members, job priorities or an aversion to turkey, some UI students will spend this Thanksgiving in a decidedly untraditional fashion.

Although UI freshman Katie Tinder will be sharing Thanksgiving Day in Des Moines with her family, the rest of the break will be spent in her dorm room in Mayflower Residence Hall.

"I have a seasonal job, so I have to be here," she said. "We don't do that much for Thanksgiving anyway, and I'd rather be doing something than sitting around my house."

Manuela Serban, a UI graduate stu-

You say turkey, I say tuka

• The red, fleshy thing that hangs from a turkey's beak is called a snood.
• Turkeys typically have such high blood pressure that spooking them could literally scare them to death.

• The turkey was apparently a name Christopher Columbus tagged the bird with by mistake. In addition to mistaking America for the West Indies, Columbus thought the turkey was a peacock and called it "tuka," the Indian word for peacock.

dent from Romania, will be doing even less to celebrate the American holiday.

"It's not my holiday," Serban said. "It's too far to go home, and I'm not going to be doing anything special, probably just working."

The two will have little company.

I.C. bucks violent-crime increase

■ According to an FBI report, 1,070 more violent crimes were reported in Iowa in 1997.

By Zack Kucharski
The Daily Iowan

Iowa had the largest increase in violent crimes in the United States last year, and the third-largest increase in total crime, according to an FBI report released Sunday.

But Iowa City is not part of the state trend.

Violent crime in Iowa City decreased by 9.3 percent in 1997, while overall crime dropped by 7.5 percent, according to Iowa City Police Department records.

"There really isn't anything that you can attribute the crime cycle to, maybe just luck," Iowa City police Lt. Ron Fort said. "The rate tends to go in cycles, so you can say it's luck or you hope that we have a better group of people. There's nothing to guarantee it will stay stable."

The majority of states around Iowa and in the nation as a whole saw a decrease in crime, but Iowa's total crime rate increased 4.6 percent, according to the FBI report. The violent crime rate jumped 13.8 percent.

New enforcement programs, such as Special Crimes Action Team, have helped keep local crime rates stable, Fort said.

"Programs like SCAT help to prevent future crime, but they also result in more arrests, which means an increase in reportable statistics," he said.

The team was instituted earlier this year as a response unit to combat drug- and gang-related crimes in the Iowa City area. The program consists of seven officers and averages 24

IT'S THANKSGIVING: TIME FOR TURKEY JOKES

Why did the turkey cross the road? It was the chicken's day off.

Gobbler said, "Doc-tor, help me! I can't stop acting like a turkey!"
"I see," said the doctor. "How long have you had this problem?"
"Let me think a second. Mom laid the egg in 1954..."

What did the mother turkey say to her disobedient children?
If your father could see you now, he'd turn over in his gravy!

Asked to write a composition titled, "What I'm thankful for on Thanksgiving," little Timothy wrote, "I am thankful that I'm not a turkey."

What key has legs and can't open doors?
A Turkey.

What sound does a space turkey make?
Hubble, hubble, hubble.

Keep your eye off the turkey dressing! It makes him blush!!!!

Why do turkeys always go, "gobble, gobble"?
Because they never learned good table manners!

Y2K is the voice of God, Falwell warns

LYNCHBURG, Va. (AP) — Jerry Falwell says the Y2K problem may be a warning from God.

"Y2K may be God's instrument to shake this nation, to humble this nation," the Christian broadcaster said in a video. The $28 video has sold more than 1,900 copies since August, a Falwell spokeswoman said.

Falwell

Falwell said on the tape he intends to stock up on food, sugar, gasoline and ammunition in case the computer bug causes a catastrophe.

Such a catastrophe could start a worldwide religious revival leading to Christ's return to carry believers up to heaven, Falwell said.

MBA program extends classes to Des Moines

In January, Des Moines-area professionals working toward a Masters of Business Administration degree from the UI can hit the books closer to home.

The UI's School of Management, ranked among the nation's top 50 MBA programs, will offer evening MBA classes at the Junior Achievement of Central Iowa's W.A. Krause Center for Entrepreneurial Education in Des Moines — extending the program from its Newton center, where many of the students taking classes are from the capital city.

According to Colleen Downie, director of the UI Evening MBA Program, Des Moines residents account for 60 percent of the students in the Newton evening MBA program and 70 percent of newly admitted students at Newton.

The addition of MBA classes to Des Moines is possible through the cooperation of Junior Achievement and Krause Gentle Corp., which last February donated $500,000 for the purchase of the center — the largest single gift in Junior Achievement's 43-year history. The center (formerly an IMT Insurance claims office) at 6100 Grand Ave. will hold spring classes from Jan. 20 in a new addition to the building, also funded by the Krause Gentle Corp. Courses will include corporate financial reporting, corporate finance and staffing organizations.

Study shows correlation between amoebae and eye infection

There are pesky, microscopic organisms lurking in lakes and ponds, just waiting for unsuspecting persons on whom to latch. As a result, it should come as no surprise that a UI study showed the higher the concentration of amoebae in surface water, the more likely one might be to develop an eye infection.

However, the correlation does not necessarily mean that the people will catch the infection by coming into contact with contaminated water. Only 17 percent of the study patients noted exposure to such water. The precise link between the amoeba levels in surface water and the onset of amoeba infections remains obscure.

From January 1993 through December 1996, UI researchers diagnosed 137 cases of amoeba-like keratitis, or inflammation of the cornea, in Iowa. Over the four years, researchers found the onset of infection symptoms varied significantly from month to month.

Three R's no trouble for UI freshmen, faculty say

Faculty members say the UI is doing just fine.

By Shirin Sadeghi
 The Daily Iowan

According to a recent article in the Wall Street Journal, around 30 percent of first-time college students in the United States take remedial education courses because they cannot adequately read, write or do math.

However, some UI faculty members who see first-year students on a daily basis say the Journal's numbers don't seem to accurately reflect the UI's situation.

"I don't see the UI as having a big remedial education problem," said Carol Severino, director of the Writing Lab and a professor of rhetoric.

Rachel Broek, a UI freshman in a rhetoric class this semester, said she doesn't think students in her section have less of an ability to read or write when compared with those in higher rhetoric levels.

"I think they just have less experience in doing speeches and writing papers," she said.

For those who do not meet the standard UI freshman entrance requirements — although they may meet such knowledge-based requirements as having a good GPA and a sufficient ACT score — the IowaLink recruitment program offers a remedial education program, Severino said.

The program involves two semesters of an academic seminar and a list of necessary electives.

"IowaLink gives students an opportunity to use reading and writing skills in a context that has some bearing on their daily lives," said Mike Evces, an instructor and a UI graduate student.

Evces cautioned against the use of the word, "remedial," adding that "the alternative term I would use is 'academic literacy.'"

"IowaLink students are brilliant, with great ideas, talents and minds," Evces said. "We don't consider ourselves remedial or deficient."

He said articles such as the one in the Wall Street Journal should be taken with a grain of salt and some perspective of history.

"The history of literacy in the United States is very clearly one of constantly changing standards," he said.

"I think they just have less experience in doing speeches and writing papers."

— Rachel Broek,
 UI freshman

Severino, who taught a remedial education course at the University of Illinois-Chicago for 12 years before she came to the UI, said exterior problems can be a factor in limiting education.

"Some Chicago public schools don't prepare their students as well (as in Iowa) in terms of course selection, and the magnitude of the social problems is much different," she said.

But Severino added that sometimes not gaining knowledge is based on students themselves.

"For some students (learning) is developmental; they don't show an interest in reading or writing until later in their high school education," she said.

Evces also sees a potential problem among students that has nothing to do with the quality of education they are offered.

"If there's a problem at this university, it's student apathy," he said.

FTC drops case against Joe Camel

The five biggest tobacco producers in the U.S. will pay $206 billion over 25 years.

By Kalpana Srinivasan
 Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal regulators said Monday they plan to drop their case against R.J. Reynolds Tobacco Co., which they had accused of harming children with the popular Joe Camel advertising campaign.

Lawyers for the Federal Trade Commission said they will file a motion to dismiss the case because the recently brokered tobacco deal between 46 states and the tobacco industry — including R.J. Reynolds — would achieve the same objectives: banning cartoon characters in tobacco ads and funding anti-tobacco campaigns targeted at youths.

"We believe that continuing this litigation in light of the state settlement would serve no public purpose and would be merely a waste of resources," FTC attorney Joel Winston told an administrative law judge.

The nation's five biggest tobacco makers — including R.J. Reynolds — signed the settlement Monday with 46 states, including Iowa, the District of Columbia and five U.S. territories. Under it, they will pay $206 billion over 25 years to resolve states' claims for reimbursement for providing health care to sick smokers.

The deal also calls for the tobacco companies to help finance anti-smoking research and education programs. They will give up billboard advertising, cartoons in ads, branded merchandise sales and other marketing tactics that critics say make smoking more appealing to children. The tobacco billboards will come down by April.

Reynolds attorney John B. Williams called the government's intention to dismiss the action "eight years overdue," but he argued in court that the real reason for dropping the case was a lack of evidence that Joe Camel impacted teen-age smoking.

"I think Joe has been unjustly accused. I think what they are doing here by referring to the state settlement is simply to draw attention away from their failure to show that Joe has had any effect whatsoever on youth smoking. He has been a scapegoat," Williams told Administrative Law Judge James T. Timony.

Hayden Fry lets go of the reins

FRY

input on potential replacements. Both Fry and Bowsby said it would be a "bonus" if the new coach had Iowa ties.

A decision on a replacement is expected in the next three weeks — University of Florida defensive coordinator Bob Stoops, who played for the Hawkeyes and was an assistant under Fry, is widely rumored to be the leading candidate.

Though on Monday Fry scoffed at comparisons with legendary college coaches Amos Alonzo Stagg and Pop Warner, his numbers beg otherwise. He is fourth all-time in NCAA Division I games coached, behind Stagg, Warner and Bear Bryant, and is 10th in wins.

"You can probably count the number of coaching legends in this game on one hand," Hawkeye quarterbacks coach Chuck Long said. "And I had the privilege to coach and play under him."

Fry's voice quivered during the opening moments of the announcement, and at numerous times early on he had to stop speaking to gather his emotions.

He came to his decision around 11 p.m. Sunday, notified his assistants Monday morning, and told the team just before he entered the 2 p.m. press conference.

"He tried to be unemotional about it, but how can he be?" Long said. "It wasn't an easy thing for him. He's been involved, and coaching has been his life for 47 years — it just isn't an easy thing. It was very heartfelt and emotional."

Fry said that he strongly considered retiring after the 1996 Alamo Bowl but decided not to after pleas from former Hawkeyes Tim Dwight and Tavian Banks. A trip to the Sun Bowl last year again threw the timing for a departure off.

This year, though, Fry thought everything fit into place. Injuries, academic problems and off-the-field tragedies all contributed to the Hawkeyes' poor season and his departure.

"We've only had this one bad year in recent years; we've been to three straight bowl games; it's not time to pull the cork," Fry said. "I really felt like we could have a good year this year."

"I've always been an optimist, but I never dreamed that we would experience all the problems we had. But I'm very proud of this team this year, even in defeat."

The goodbye was a difficult one for Fry because he defined Iowa football.

He arrived in Iowa City in 1978 and inherited a Hawkeye team that had not had a winning season in 17 years — then, in just three seasons, he took the team to the Rose Bowl.

He added two more Big Ten titles in 1985 and 1990, becoming perhaps the most widely recognized person in the state.

"There's no way we can calculate what he gave to the University of Iowa," said Ann Rhodes, vice president for University Relations. "He came at a difficult time in the state's history and gave us something to be proud of."

Since 1990, though, the program has often struggled to hang with the Big Ten's best.

"I've just been lucky, I've been extremely lucky as a coach," Fry said. "How many coaches go through life and pick the time when they get out? It doesn't happen to very many fellows, so, like I say, this is Thanksgiving week, and I've got so much to be grateful for, and I thank all of you."

to the one Fry entered when he started at Iowa.

"The program has slipped a little bit in the past few years," he said. "The next coach has a chance to build up the program again, just like Hayden did when he first came here."

One emotion that was not expressed by viewers of the press conference was surprise. Fans cited extensive news coverage and Fry's age as reasons they thought he would call it quits.

Wargo said he had been expecting a retirement announcement since the end of the 1996 season.

"I knew his time was coming," Wargo said. "I only wish he would have retired after last year. We were good then, and it would have been nice to see him go out a winner."

Spratt said he was not surprised by the announcement, either.

"Even though Hayden has traditionally been hard to predict, I knew he would be announcing his retirement very soon," he said. "I am not really surprised, because I have been reading about it every day for two weeks."

Total crime rates increased in 15 states

arrests a week.

Violent crimes include murder, manslaughter, forcible rape, robbery, aggravated assault, burglary, larceny-theft, motor-vehicle theft and arson.

According to the Iowa City police, the percentage decrease in the town's violent crime statistics is based on a difference of 239 fewer violent offenses in 1997 from the previous year.

John Stratton, a UI sociology professor, said the increase in crime statewide is not something to be concerned about.

"We have always been a low-crime state. We are still a low-crime state," he said. "That's a substantial increase statewide, but we have such a low base to begin with. We would have to have a trend in order for it to have any big effect. One robin does not make a spring."

Iowa City's low unemployment rate has made the town unique in the state for several years. Stratton said low unemployment rates often correlate with crime rate statistics.

"Stable employment statistics mean there are fewer people with nothing to do," he said. "Politicians running for office have used the crime statistics, but the crime statistics probably won't affect most others."

According to FBI figures, there were 8,841 violent crimes in Iowa last year, up from 7,771 in 1996.

Iowa was one of 15 states to see its total crime rate increase — 2.8 million residents reported 3,815 crimes per 100,000 in population. In Iowa City and Coralville, an average of 41 people per 1,000 reported a crime in 1997.

The numbers differ widely from a report released by the Iowa Department of Public Safety last month that showed a much smaller increase in crime statewide. That report said Iowa's total crime in 1997 increased less than 1 percent, while violent crime was up 1.6 percent.

Both reports do not cover all Iowa cities, but the FBI's figures are more widely available and will be broadly disseminated.

The state figures represent about 80 percent of Iowa's population. Not included are totals from several towns, including Cedar Rapids, Grinnell and Johnston.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Some students looking at a birdless holiday

THANKSGIVING

Cheryl Hoogerwerf Reardon, manager of Residence Life, said approximately 10 percent of the 5,400 students living in the dorms will be staying in Iowa City over the break.

"Several factors can keep a student here, including proximity to where they're going, jobs, studying for finals and athletic activities," she said.

Although many resident assistants are also among those departing, Reardon said the lack of adult supervision has never been a problem; 24-hour desks in each dorm will remain open, and a staff will be on call for emergencies.

"It's a pretty quiet time for us," she said. "Mostly they spend their time just being students: studying, catching up on sleep and going downtown."

Students living in the dorms, however, will have to fend for themselves for meals, including the big one Thursday night.

The preparation of Thanksgiving meals can prove even trickier for some UI students, regardless of where their dinner table is. The emphasis on food, particularly the consumption of a certain bird, can make the holiday a trying time for vegetarians.

Laura Henningsen, a UI senior and a vegetarian for four years, said the winter holidays are one of the hardest times of the year for vegetarians.

Because Henningsen refuses to handle meat, she is limited in how much she can help prepare the family's meal, which includes a vegetarian dish for her.

"The whole season — Thanksgiving and Christmas — is tough," she said. "The only time of the year that's worse is the summer, when everyone is barbecuing."

UI freshman Natalie Janssen said her vegetarianism has not prevented her from enjoying the traditional holiday dinner.

"I've learned just to grin and bear it," Janssen said. "It used to bother my family that I wouldn't eat meat, but over the years they've gotten better about it."

Janssen, who became a vegetarian four years ago for moral reasons, said she also plans to prepare a meatless alternative for herself when dining with her family this Thanksgiving.

"I'm looking into this vegetarian meatloaf," she said, adding that the transition was made with little difficulty. "I never really liked the taste of meat, period."

Henningsen and Janssen aren't the only ones going turkey-less this year. Maren Himmelwright, a cashier at New Pioneer Coop, 22 S. Van Buren St., said the store's free vegetarian recipes have been in high demand.

"We're pretty much the only store in this area that offers this kind of service," Himmelwright said. "It's very popular."

Rodman annuls marriage to Electra

ORANGE, Calif. (AP) — Basketball bad boy Dennis Rodman filed annulment papers Monday to end his nine-day marriage to television actress and ex-playboy model Carmen Electra, a spokeswoman for Electra said.

"Carmen and Dennis spoke several days ago and mutually agreed (to end the marriage)," said Electra's publicist, Cindy Guagengli.

Details on the filing in Orange County family court were not available after business hours Monday. Rodman has a home in nearby Newport Beach.

The couple married on Nov. 14 in Las Vegas, but Rodman's agent, Dwight Manley, immediately expressed misgivings.

"Obviously, anyone that would marry somebody that was intoxicated to the point that they couldn't speak or stand had ulterior motives of some sort," Manley said two days after the wedding.

But the Chicago Bulls star said afterward he was indeed in love and apologized "for any false statements given on my behalf regarding my marriage to Carmen Electra."

Neither Rodman nor his agent could be reached for comment Monday.

Rodman and Electra, 26, have been dating since the spring.

Kevorkian tape draws official scrutiny

■ The prosecutor delays making a decision because he doesn't want to be "baited into" a premature charge.

By Jim Suhr
Associated Press

DETROIT — The tape of a man's death at the hands of Jack Kevorkian that was played on CBS' "60 Minutes" appears to be a homicide, but further study is needed, a prosecutor said Monday.

Kevorkian, who has acknowledged helping about 120 people take their own lives, calls Thomas Youk's death his first euthanasia. He took the tape to "60 Minutes" to show to a national audience and to challenge prosecutors to settle the debate over assisted suicide.

In the tape aired Sunday, Youk's chin rests on his chest as the drug flows into his arm. Asked if he's awake, he doesn't respond.

Seconds later, Youk's head tilts back during two more injections, one of them meant to stop his heart. Then Kevorkian is heard saying the 52-year-old patient with Lou Gehrig's disease is a "straight line."

Kevorkian, a retired pathologist, was defiant in his challenge to prosecutors: "They must charge me. Because if they do not, that means they don't think it was a crime."

Oakland County Prosecutor David Gorcyca said Monday his office is still investigating the case and has subpoenaed "60 Minutes" for an unedited copy of the videotape, which he wants to review before making any decisions on whether anyone should be charged.

Based on what he saw on "60 Minutes," he said, "it appeared a homicide was committed."

But he said he "will not be baited into making a premature charging decision."

"It would be irresponsible for any prosecutor to level charges against any individual based solely on media reports and an edited version of the tape on '60 Minutes,'" Gorcyca said.

Earlier, police Lt. John Dean said he believed the broadcast showed probable cause that a crime was committed.

"He killed a human being. I won't use the term murder," Dean said in Monday's Detroit Free Press.

Youk's story attracted additional viewers to "60 Minutes" on the last Sunday of broadcasting's November "sweeps" period, when TV ratings are watched closely to set local advertising rates. The show drew a preliminary 15.7 rating and 25 share Sunday night, with an estimated 15.6 million households watching. This fall, the newsmagazine has averaged a 12.8 rating and 21 share.

Amy E. Powers/Associated Press

Dr. Jack Kevorkian and his attorney David Gorosh watch the newsmagazine "60 Minutes" Sunday, which aired a videotape of Kevorkian, who appeared to inject a terminally ill man with a lethal dose of drugs.

"It would be irresponsible for any prosecutor to level charges ... based solely on media reports."

— David Gorcyca,
Oakland County prosecutor

Attention deficit disorder, or ADD, also known as attention deficit hyperactivity disorder, usually is diagnosed in school-age children. The diagnosis is usually based on observed behavior, and some experts believe it is highly subjective, essentially just an educated judgment.

NATION BRIEFS

The AOL, Microsoft and Yahoo! sites are the other three most popular.

In addition, AOL would acquire Netscape's pioneering Navigator browser software, which was introduced in 1994 and helped to popularize the Internet. The software is now used by millions of people to view information on the Web.

Brain scan could help diagnose Attention Deficit Disorder

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers say a new test using a special brain scan can identify children who have attention deficit disorder, the behavior syndrome that causes millions of kids to be placed on powerful drugs.

Just as importantly, the finding of a biological "signature" in the brains of those with ADD could help determine a child does not have the disorder, according to the Stanford University researchers.

Their announcement, to be published Tuesday in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, comes just days after a government panel concluded that doctors have no consistent, physical way to identify ADD or diagnose who has it.

The brain scan technique needs further testing, however, and could prove expensive. Insurance companies generally do not pay for the special type of brain scan, called a "functional MRI," that is required. A regular MRI can cost more than $1,500, and a functional MRI, available at just a few hospitals, can cost even more.

Georgia court overturns anti-sodomy law

ATLANTA (AP) — Twelve years after the U.S. Supreme Court upheld Georgia's law against sodomy, the state's high court struck it down Monday as a violation of the right to privacy.

Gay rights activists opposed to anti-sodomy laws in 18 other states welcomed the ruling, which overturned the conviction of a man who sodomized his teenage niece, and were especially pleased that it took place in Georgia.

"This is a symbolic victory," said David Smith, spokesman for the gay advocacy group, the Human Rights Alliance. "It sends a message — the demise of the Georgia sodomy law that was upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court will hopefully be a precursor to the U.S. Supreme Court invalidating all the nation's sodomy laws."

The state court voted 6-1 to overturn the conviction of Anthony Powell, found guilty of sodomizing his 17-year-old niece in 1996. He had been charged with rape, but his lawyers argued that the sex was consensual and the jury acquitted him on that charge.

Under the sodomy law, any oral or anal sex — heterosexual or homosexual, even if consensual — was illegal.

The court's majority opinion, by Chief Justice Robert Benham, said the law violates the state Constitution's provision that citizens are entitled to privacy.

The checks were not in Seattle mail

SEATTLE (AP) — Thousands of blue streetside mailboxes are being replaced after thieves duplicated the master key and embarked on a months-long check-and-credit card-stealing spree.

Postal Service officials have put padlocks on the area's 3,500 mailboxes as a temporary measure while they install the new, reinforced boxes with high-security locks in Seattle, Tacoma and other nearby cities. The last of the new boxes should be in place by Christmas.

In the meantime, many people are afraid to drop their letters in the mail. Homemade signs warning of thieves were put on blue collection boxes in two Seattle neighborhoods.

Seattle Postal Inspector Jim Bordenet said the agency has learned a lesson. From now on, one key won't open all of the new boxes anymore.

The extent of the problem is not yet clear to authorities. One man recently convicted of possessing checks he stole from Seattle mailboxes told authorities he was part of a ring of 30 bandits who used the keys to conduct nightly box raids.

Seattle police, who investigate forged-check cases that most often stem from mail theft, said their caseload has skyrocketed from 96 cases last year to about 1,000 so far this year.

AOL, Netscape seek cyber marriage

WASHINGTON (AP) — The planned marriage of America Online and Netscape would create a single Internet company with remarkable reach across the high-tech world — and the power to challenge giant Microsoft's dominance in key areas.

America Online Inc., the world's largest Internet provider with more than 14 million subscribers, confirmed Monday it is negotiating an all-stock deal to buy Netscape Communications Corp., whose "Netcenter" Web site is among the four most popular on the Internet with more than 20 million visitors each month.

Dow leaps through the ceiling

■ The Dow sets a record with its nearly 2,000-point rebound.

By Bruce Meyerson
Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Dow surged to a new high Monday, capping a nearly 2,000-point rebound from the summer's scary slide as merger fever returned to the stock market.

Extending a nearly nonstop rally that began less than two months ago, the Dow Jones industrial average rose 214.72 points to 9,374.27, topping the July 17 record of 9,337.97.

The Standard & Poor's 500 index also set its first record since July. But most broad-market indexes remained shy of new highs, as smaller-company stocks continued to lag behind the blue chips that dominate the Dow and S&P 500.

The rally came as a series of billion-dollar takeovers and negotiations for two blockbusters deals signaled a return to the merger frenzy that energized the market back in the spring and early summer.

Financial shares rose as Germany's Deutsche Bank said it is discussing the final details of $9 billion deal to take over New York-based Bankers Trust, and Internet shares led the technology group higher as America Online said it may buy Netscape Communications in a $4 billion deal.

While the sudden spurt of merger activity helped spark Monday's rally, analysts said it was the renewed confidence in the stock market that had hatched the current dealings.

"It spells real faith in the long-term strength of the marketplace," said Arthur Hogan, chief market analyst at Jeffries & Co., noting that most of Monday's deals would be paid for with stock rather than cash.

"If you're taking over for stock, it means you believe your stock is as good as currency, that the value of your stock is going to be at or near that price for some time," Hogan said.

The return to record terrain follows a volatile four-month journey that took the Dow, an index of 30 major companies, as low as 7,400 on Sept. 1 and to 7,467 on Oct. 8, the day the market's recovery began.

But the rebound has been so continuous and so rapid — the Dow hasn't fallen as much as 100 points since Oct. 1 — that many analysts are growing fearful of another sharp sell-off.

"We've got a mania for stocks right now, and you can't really make a rational explanation for what we have witnessed over the last six weeks," said Richard A.

Dickson, a technical analyst at Scott & Stringfellow in Richmond, Va., noting that economic and financial instability overseas still pose a big risk.

Before the rebound began, it had seemed that the spread of financial turmoil around the world would send Wall Street to its first losing year since 1990. Now, several major indexes are poised to extend an unprecedented streak of three straight years with gains of 20 percent or more.

A typical play-by-play in the never ending duel between the Audi A4 with quattro® and winter: Game begins. Quattro scores. Fat lady sings. It's really that simple. There's scarcely a snowdrift our legendary full-time, all-wheel drive can't handle. Hardly a blizzard quattro can't dominate. Rarely a slippery road quattro can't stick to. You see, quattro feels the road, senses where the traction is, and sends power to the wheels that need it. So when the game is on the line, quattro pulls through. Put it to the test today.

An obvious solution to our hurried times

With Thanksgiving break just hours away, many students are left wishing they could be thankful for one more thing: a longer vacation. While the current five-day break is a welcome departure from the stresses of a quickly ending school year, students can't help but feel a little shortchanged.

The Monday and Tuesday before Thanksgiving could very well be the least productive days of the fall semester. A sizable portion of the student body chooses not to attend classes, leaving professors to lecture classes filled to less than half of capacity.

These professors, knowing better than to waste their time talking to empty chairs, frequently cancel classes or water them down by either covering little material or showing films.

This leaves the students in attendance to ponder why they bothered showing up. Few come away with an acceptable answer.

Many schools recognize this problem and choose to officially begin the vacation the weekend before. For an example of this, one must look no further than Iowa State University.

Instead of requiring students to attend classes the Monday and Tuesday before Thanksgiving, these schools rightly give students those days off. The students suffer no considerable consequences from having their course material condensed to free up the extra days of vacation.

These extra days come in especially handy for students who travel long distances from home to go to school. In fact, an official Thanksgiving week holiday would also satisfy those people who want a dead week, or simply more free time, to prepare for finals.

For a school that takes pride in its geographically diverse student body, the UI hardly caters to the needs of out-of-state students by providing them with little time to make it home before the holiday.

Instead of rushing in the door just in time to pass the yams, most students would appreciate at least a little time to settle in and say hi to their relatives.

If the UI really wants to require students to sit through half-full classes, listening to professors who know that the day is a waste, then it is more than welcome to maintain the current arrangement.

But that's hardly the Thanksgiving spirit, is it?

Day of reckoning for Fry, Hawk fans

Pete Thompson/The Daily Iowan

Monday's press conference, in which Hayden Fry announced his retirement after 20 years as Iowa's head football coach, was painful to watch. As an emotional Fry coming to grips with his own football mortality, he retained his ability to crack jokes and take on the media. Fry was a coaching legend, and even a dismal final season will not diminish that.

Starr appearance plays like soaps

THE conservatives got their day in court last week, when they trotted Kenneth Starr out under the bright lights. And don't be deluded by archaic notions — the big trials these days, the ones that matter, are held under the buzz of klieg lights and video cameras.

The legacy of the late 20th century will be, if you didn't see it on CNN or MSNBC — and see it at least 649 times on replay after replay — it didn't happen.

The hope on the right was that Starr's testimony before the Judiciary Committee would rise to the level of Oliver North's during the Iran-contra hearings — a riveting performance, one that would finally nail that so-elusive Bre'er Fox, Bill Clinton.

And what did we get to see? Well, Starr was like a rivet. Unfortunately, watching a rivet turns out to be about as exciting as watching a knitting contest: a whole lot of yarn going no place in particular.

The big three networks definitely thought so; affiliates in big cities all over the country were yanking their coverage of Starr's testimony in favor of such things as "Sally Jessy Raphael," that touchstone of American cultural achievement.

The high point, as my friend Rick noted, was watching the closed-caption system try to keep up with what the players were actually saying. John Sirica, for instance; when the Watergate judge's name was mentioned, closed captioning had it as "John is a Rick car."

When your best moment turns out to be laughing at the pitfalls of technology, you know you've got a dog of a show.

Part of the problem was Starr himself, next to whom a tiddlywinks match would seem riveting. As he plodded along through the long afternoon, it became less and less like watching the fate of the Republic being decided and more and more like observing mashed potatoes cool down.

The Republicans on the committee didn't help. They kept lobbing up softball questions to Starr so that he could rehash things that had already been so hashed they were thin gruel.

The American people had already heard all this, about nine months' worth of already hearing, and they've rendered their verdict: yawn.

Yeah, Bill had a sexual something or other with a young woman in the White House. For a sexual affair, it was remarkably unconsummated, leading you to wonder just exactly how sexual it was. I mean, 14-year-old kids could do better than this, and, from all reports, they are.

And yeah, Bill lied about the "affair." Everybody, women and men, lie about extra-marital affairs, though theirs usually contain something more like sex. Just ask Henry Hyde or Dan Burton or Helen Chenoweth, to pick out just three of the leading Republican lights.

The biggest problem facing the Republicans, outside of having a dog of a show, is that the people who are judging Clinton's ethics have themselves some huge lapses, to use the polite word.

As detailed by The Nation, they go something like this: There's Hyde, Burton and Chenoweth, of course, who've already admitted to having affairs. Hyde, along with Speaker-to-be Bob Livingston, is also in the uncomfortable position of having been named in Oliver North's diaries of being informed by Robert McFarlane of the illegal contra funding. Making them accessories? Is The Nation's question.

Then there's Bob Barr, the Republican of Georgia and one of Clinton's most vociferous critics. One of the main sponsors of the Defense of Marriage Act, he's been divorced two times. And, at a fund-raiser in '92, he supposedly licked whipped cream from the breasts of two women. That's the kind of man I want as a morals judge.

There's Burton and J.C. Watts, with their children born out-of-wedlock manning the morals watch tower. There's Dick Arme of Texas and John Peterson of Pennsylvania, with allegations of sexual harassment, Arme while he was an economics professor, Peterson with six different women ("I may have been an excessive hugger," The Nation quotes him as saying).

There's Ken Calvert of California, who said, "We can't forgive what occurred between the president and Lewinsky." He allegedly was caught by police receiving oral sex from a prostitute and tried to skip the scene.

And there's my favorite, Jay Kim of California, who admitted in a plea bargain that he took $230,000 in illegal campaign contributions.

He now wears one of those electronic ankle bracelets. Presumably, if he votes on impeachment, he'll be wearing the bracelet.

The list in The Nation goes on and on. These are the people who would sit in judgment of Bill Clinton.

They should move the impeachment process to "Sally Jessy Raphael," where it belongs, and leave us to mull over the really important questions in life. Such as, is there life after Hayden Fry?

Deer-management plan is 'unjustifiable slaying'

To the Editor:

Hard-core killers are soon to be on the loose. According to Ellen Nicholson's editorial about deer hunting (DI/Oct. 28), the Iowa City/Coralville Deer Management Committee planned the premeditated slaughter of 240 deer.

Sharpshooters will begin the blood-bath on Jan. 1, 1999 and continue through Feb. 28.

Concerns have been raised about the community's safety and the occurrence of 28 deer collisions this year. However, fewer than 4 percent of automobile and deer collisions prove fatal for motorists or passengers.

In most cases, vehicle operators use excessive speeds and, therefore, do not possess adequate time for effective reaction. Many accidents occur after dark or early in the morning, when the driver's visibility is reduced.

Deer are attracted to roads for migration purposes. These roads run through the deer's natural habitat connecting rivers to parks.

The deer have developed tolerance for busy highways as a result of society's urbanization.

Animal crossing signs must be posted to warn drivers of the deer frequency in the area. Deer whistles caution deer against oncoming cars. In addition, electric fencing should be installed in possible deer attraction sites.

Nicholson's statement, "Nature does not always solve its own problems," defends the bloody massacre of 240 beautiful creatures.

The deer had a fighting chance before the human race tampered with landscape plants. USDA recommended chemicals and garlic capsules all instigated migration.

The butchering of deer is unjustifiable. The massive slaying could cause genetic damage and far worse, extinction. We need not protect the community from the deer but the deer from the community.

Column about money made no sense

To the Editor:

Columnist Jesse Ammerman recently wrote a very long piece attacking and complaining about the new $20 bills. ("Andrew Jackson never looked worse," DI/Nov. 4.)

Are they that big of a deal that a quarter of the page is needed for this topic? The new $20 bills will still buy the same thing as the old bills.

So what if they resemble Monopoly money? Were you planning to decorate with them? There are more important things to put in a newspaper than, "My money's ugly!"

Cambus woes extend beyond Hawkeye court

To the Editor:

The Daily Iowan recently ran an article about the Hawkeye Court/family housing problem with the Cambuses. ("Parents decry Cambus crunch on Hawkeye routes," Nov. 10.)

I am an undergraduate student living at Mayflower Hall and have also experienced problems with the Cambus system.

On the weekends buses do not run to Mayflower until after 11 a.m. Mayflower residents, who are separated from the main campus, are left stranded or forced to walk to their destinations.

Another mind-boggling curiosity is that there is no Hancher to Mayflower transit. This only occurs on weekends or after 9 p.m. Both the Blue and Red routes run across the Park Bridge that is less than two minutes away from Mayflower.

What would the harm be in traveling two more minutes to Mayflower?

This might, on the other hand, cause schedule issues with the bus timing. My solution to this problem is to add another bus or two to that route, or adjust the schedule by five minutes.

The last thing that really seems odd is when three or four buses all end up in the same place one after another.

This causes problems when they leave close together because if you miss the bus you have to wait a long time for the next one.

The two places I've noticed this especially are outside Macbride Hall and Mayflower during the busy hours.

Soup kitchens mark Moscow winter

The number of needy has increased dramatically.

By Mitchell Landsberg
Associated Press

MOSCOW — Inside a bright little cafe one snowy morning, respectable members of Russia's fading intelligentsia are chatting over soup and tea.

Suddenly, a tall, white-haired woman in a full-length, cream-colored fur coat begins to sob.

"We're not bums!" she wails. The others quickly reassure her. Of course they aren't. Over there — that man was a prominent screenwriter. That woman — once a leading engineer at a radar-making plant.

Now, however, they are among Moscow's swelling underclass, eating free meals in an off-hours soup kitchen.

With winter approaching, alarms are being raised in Russia about people going hungry. The United States, the European Union and the International Red Cross have agreed to help, even as Russian officials insist the country has plenty of food.

It might, but that doesn't mean people can afford it. Since Aug. 17, when Russia devalued the ruble and defaulted on its foreign loans, the typical Russian's meager income has fallen by two-thirds, and many people continue to go without any pay at all.

In post-Soviet Russia, Moscow was the one place that clearly benefited from the country's patchy economic reforms; it rapidly became a boom town. But it also took the main blow when the economy collapsed last summer.

Ivan Sekretarev/Associated Press

Two unidentified Moscovites eat a free meal in Moscow on Nov. 20 provided by The Center for Humanitarian Aid.

Although a person of means can still splurge and pay the equivalent of $5 a pound for German sausage, $1 a pound for Spanish oranges and $10 for a bottle of French wine, many older and poorer Muscovites now face the hunger and other problems fellow Russians have suffered for years.

The city offers free meals to retirees at cafeterias in each of its 28 districts, but their capacity falls far short of the growing need.

The Salvation Army and hundreds of Russian Orthodox parishes have stepped in to fill the gap. Neither the city nor the charitable organizations can say how many people may be homeless or hungry, but all concede they cannot meet the demand for free food.

"It's a big problem in Moscow right now," says Nemerud Negash, an Ethiopian immigrant who helped found the Center for Humanitarian Aid, a non-profit agency dedicated to helping the homeless.

The number of needy in Moscow has been growing rapidly, especially since the economic collapse, Negash says. A few months ago, his organization was serving 130 to 150 free meals a day. Now, he says, it serves 200 — a number that is fixed only by the limit of the center's resources. Every day, he says, he turns people away.

Iraq accuses arms inspector of fabricating crisis

Richard Butler's request for documents takes us back to square one, Iraqi officials say.

By Anthony Shadid
Associated Press

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Iraq accused the chief U.N. weapons inspector Monday of fabricating a new crisis over its weapons programs. Meanwhile, Iraqi television reported that a powerful official had escaped an assassination attempt.

Deputy Foreign Minister Riyadh al-Qaisi said Richard Butler's request for weapons-related documents takes Iraq back to "square one" in its effort to end crippling sanctions imposed by the U.N. Security Council after Iraq invaded Kuwait in 1990.

"Why is it that now Mr. Butler is requesting all over again the same requests that were made in the past?" al-Qaisi said.

"All we have, we gave. All we don't have, we stated we don't have," he told a news conference.

Butler asked last week for documents on Iraq's arms program and information on its biological weapons program — the field U.N. inspectors say they have the most questions about. Iraq has balked at the request, calling it an attempt to reignite a crisis.

"What do we see? No light at the end of the tunnel. What we see is the light of a locomotive coming head on at Iraq," al-Qaisi said.

His comments were the latest in a dispute that has raised again the specter of an attack on Iraq, days after Iraq narrowly averted airstrikes by allowing U.N. weapons experts to resume their inspections.

Iraqi TV said Monday that assailants had lobbed two grenades at Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's deputy as he got out of his car to attend a religious festival Sunday in southern Iraq.

Izzat Ibrahim, Saddam's deputy on the powerful Revolutionary Command Council, escaped the attack without injury, Iraqi TV reported. Several bodyguards and bystanders were wounded, it said.

In Washington, Defense Secretary William Cohen said the United States could still attack Iraq if it did not fully cooperate with the inspectors. There are about 24,000 U.S. troops, about 210 aircraft and one aircraft carrier still in the Persian Gulf region.

Iraq reversed its two-week ban on the work of U.N. inspectors on Nov. 14, when it faced imminent airstrikes by U.S. and British forces.

The inspectors returned last week, and, with the cooperation of the Iraqi government, they have since made daily visits to sites that could be used to build weapons of mass destruction.

Inspectors must certify that Iraq has eliminated its nuclear, chemical and biological weapons, long-range missiles and the programs to build them before the Security Council can lift the sanctions, which have caused widespread malnutrition, hunger and poverty in the once-prosperous Arab country.

Al-Qaisi insisted that, since inspections began in 1991, Iraq has provided all the documents inspectors need; others that Butler requested were destroyed or irrelevant, he said.

U.S. lags in high school graduation rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — As more and more students graduate from high school in other industrialized countries, the United States seems to be running in place.

In its annual study of international education statistics, the Paris-based Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development found that over the past six years, 11 countries have overtaken the United States in high school graduation rates.

NATION BRIEF

"The U.S. has lost its supremacy as the premier educator," said Andreas Schleicher, principal administrator of the European organization. He said that has occurred "not because the United States is doing worse, but because there are so many countries who have become better."

Economic troubles, including high unemployment, have motivated young people in many countries to seek higher education so they can compete in the work force. "There are clear monetary incentives for people to study longer," Schleicher said.

The report also found that American eighth-graders continue to lag behind their counterparts in many countries when it comes to mathematics achievement.

Poor math skills among American children seem to develop over time: The report found that between fourth and eighth grades, math test scores for American students get progressively lower compared with other countries. By eighth grade, the lowest-scoring quarter of Japanese and Korean eighth-graders still score above the average American eighth-grader in math.

Jury acquits McDougal on all embezzlement charges

■ Susan McDougal became famous for refusing to testify against the president.

By Linda Deutsch
Associated Press

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Whitewater figure Susan McDougal was acquitted Monday of embezzling from conductor Zubin Mehta and his wife, Nancy, — a case McDougal said was trumped up to pressure her to testify against President Clinton. "Everything that's happened to me in recent years has been about Bill Clinton," she exulted after the jury acquitted her on all nine counts, including forgery and failure to pay state income taxes. The jury deliberated for parts of four days.

"They want me to say things against Bill and Hillary Clinton ... People say to me, 'Are you scared of Ken Starr?' He'd better be scared of me, because I'm on my way back." McDougal, 44, was accused of stealing $50,000 from Zubin and Nancy Mehta when she worked as a bookkeeper and personal assistant to Nancy Mehta from 1989 to 1992. She could have gotten up to four years in prison.

The case took five years to get to trial. By that time, McDougal had become famous, hailed by many as a hero for her steadfast refusal to testify against her friend Clinton before the Whitewater grand jury. It was a decision that cost her 18 months in jail for contempt.

In addition, McDougal served 3½ months of a two-year sentence in a Whitewater-related loan fraud case. She was released because of a painful back condition.

Also convicted were her late ex-husband, James McDougal, and former Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker. Susan McDougal still faces prosecution in Arkansas for her refusal to testify in the Whitewater case.

The California case played out as a Hollywood-style subplot of the scandal in Washington, even though the jurors were warned by the judge not to consider her Whitewater involvement or any possible ulterior motives on the prosecution's part.

Outside the jury's presence, defense attorney Mark Geragos said Starr had promised to make the embezzlement charges go away if McDougal would testify. When she refused, he alleged, Starr "propped up" the case and urged prosecutors to move on the defendant.

"Of course it's related to Whitewater," Geragos said after the verdict. "You think if her name was Susan McDonald they would try this case?"

Starr's office said in a statement that the California charges were brought before the appointment of any Whitewater independent counsel and were unrelated.

Juror Kathleen Spain, 71, said at a news conference that the jury followed instructions and "washed Whitewater out of our minds."

Hyde looks to wind up inquiry

■ The committee chairman hopes to finish work by the first week of December.

By David Espo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Henry Hyde, the chairman of the Judiciary Committee, hopes that the panel can complete its work on impeachment the week of Dec. 7 and the House can convene the following week to vote if necessary on President Clinton's fate, Republican sources said Monday.

But Hyde's timetable, as virtually everything else in the final stages of the nation's third presidential impeachment inquiry, is subject to numerous unsettled issues, ranging from constitutional matters to logistics.

As an example, before adjourning last month for the elections, lawmakers gave Speaker Newt Gingrich the authority to call the House back into session "whenever, in his opinion, the public interest shall warrant it."

That provision was crafted with impeachment proceedings in mind. Now, though, Gingrich is a lame duck, and as a practical matter, has ceded power to Rep. Bob Livingston, tapped by Republicans to succeed him.

Christina Martin, Gingrich's press secretary, declined to say how the outgoing speaker would respond. Other officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he probably would yield to Livingston's wishes. At the same time, Gingrich could also appoint Livingston to preside over the House for any such proceedings.

Nor is it clear whether House approval of censure — an alternative to impeachment suggested by many lawmakers — would advance to the Senate for a vote there. That depends on how the measure is drafted.

That is not the only perceived problem with censure. "I don't think there is any constitutional authority for us to do anything other than impeachment," Rep. Bill McCollum, R-Fla., a Judiciary Committee member, said recently on CNN.

Several lawmakers have said recently that while the GOP-controlled committee is likely to approve at least one article of impeachment on a party-line vote, the House would reject it.

Livingston has said he, like Hyde, is eager to have the entire issue resolved by the end of the year. "If it requires a vote in the House of Representatives, I'd be prepared to ask Newt Gingrich, as the current speaker of the House, to call us in," he said in an appearance Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press."

But apart from the committee, little effort has gone into planning the final stages of the impeachment drama.

Livingston says he has not discussed the issue with Hyde. Nor has House Democratic leader Dick Gephardt had any discussions with Livingston on the subject, according to Democratic officials. Nor did the issue come up on Nov. 19, when Livingston presided over the first formal meeting of the newly elected GOP House leadership.

The White House has been checking the impeachment landscape in the wake of an expected gain of seats by Democrats in the Nov. 3 election.

Bob Bowsby doesn't have much time to waste in his search for a new football coach, and he said he will move quickly.

Bowsby, the UI's men's athletics director, said he expects a new coach to be named within 2-3 weeks. With potential recruits nearing decisions about where to go to college, time is of the essence.

"We've begun the planning process and we will get started as soon as possible," Bowsby said Monday. "Coach (Fry) and I have to talk a little bit. We want to move as efficiently as we can."

Fry said 16 high school players are scheduled to visit the UI campus during the first weekend of December, and 25 more are slated for the following weekend.

Seeing Hayden go emotional for every Hawkeye

Before the Ohio State game, I thought Coach Fry's retirement was a sure thing.

After Saturday's game at Minnesota, I had no idea what to expect. And I was being as honest as I could be.

I knew Coach Fry had a press conference scheduled for Tuesday afternoon, which baffled me even more. Considering that most of my teammates would be out of town for the Thanksgiving break, I didn't think Coach would announce his retirement before telling the team.

I was sitting around my apartment at about 1:00 p.m. when the phone rang. Matt Stockdale asked me why I wasn't over at the football complex. He told me Coach Fry had called a meeting at 1:30. At this point my mind started swimming as every thought flew through my head.

But then I knew what was going to

Hayden Fry, this is your life

■ For the 47 years he spent in the sport of football, Hayden Fry has touched almost everyone he has come in contact with.

At the time, the state of Iowa needed something to take its mind off everyday life.

The year was 1985 and Iowans were facing one of the worst eras in state history. Banks were closing, grain prices were slipping, land values dropped considerably and farmers who had outstanding loans were watching the lending agencies take away their farms.

But for three hours every fall Saturday, Hayden Fry and his Iowa football team were a remedy for the blues.

Fry understood what Iowans were going through and he showed how much he cared for their hard work by putting an "ANF" decal on the Hawkeye helmets, which stood for "America Needs Farmers."

Iowa football fans responded with an undying loyalty to the coach and his team throughout Fry's 20 years at Iowa. They stood by the coach from the day he took the Iowa job in 1978, until his final season, by sending him numerous messages of thanks.

The fans remember how Fry stood by them during the tough times of the 1980s.

"(The A.N.F. logo) said, 'Hey, pay attention. Where's your food coming from?'" said Don Williams, a Hawkeye football follower who farms in North Central Iowa. "That was definitely a big plus because in the Big Ten, you're dealing with big cities in the most cases. Unless you came from the farm happen — Hayden Fry was going to announce his decision to retire. I have heard the talk all season about Coach Fry leaving, Coach Fry staying, Bobby Stoops coming in, but all that just basically comes down to coffee shop talk. As a player, you can't help but listen to all the talk during the season. But until it finally happens, I guess you just take everything for granted. Well, reality set in for all of us Monday. I will never forget sitting in our team meeting room that day. Coach Fry came in with his huge smile that he always seems to carry with him everywhere he goes. He had on a coat and tie, just like he always does, but you could tell that something wasn't right. I turned around right before he started to speak and looked at all of my teammates. A lot of them were looking straight into the ground. A lot of them had a blank stare on their faces. As for me, I couldn't swallow. Coach started to speak and told us he was going to retire and his reasons for it, which are very understandable. But more importantly was what I took home with me in my heart after Coach Fry spoke. I had never seen Coach Fry cry until Monday. I think all of my teammates were sharing the same thoughts as me at this moment. We never realized how much football meant to coach Fry personally. We realized that Coach Fry was much more than a football coach. He is a great person who cares for us as much as a father would for his own son. Shock is probably the best word that could describe all of our feelings at this point and time. There is an old saying that goes "You never know what you've got until it's gone." Well he's not exactly "gone" yet. But from our everyday lives, he really is. After Coach Fry got done talking, he asked if anyone wanted to ask questions about the future. Anthony Herron was the only one who asked him a question. He simply said "Are you still going to be around?" At that point I think all of my teammates were eager to hear what Coach Fry was going to say. He responded and said his home is in Iowa and he will always be around. Those are the words everyone wanted to hear. We lost our coach

Monday, but we didn't lose a dear friend, and that is all that really matters. Coach Hayden Fry is Iowa football. There probably isn't a conversation about football in this state that doesn't include Coach Fry's name. To call him a legend would be an understatement. I say that with all of my heart. Many of my teammates share my feelings. They will never forget the first time they met Hayden Fry and the day he said goodbye to all of us. He finished by wishing us the best of luck and quietly exiting the room, leaving us with all of our memories and a lifetime to tell them. We all have been privileged to be coached, watched over and taken care of by Coach Fry. I wouldn't trade that for anything else in life.

area, most people thought milk came from the store and so forth. That was great attention." In 1985, the Hawkeye team spent five weeks as the No. 1 team in the nation, quarterback Chuck Long finished second in the Heisman Trophy balloting and Iowa football brought the state attention for reasons other than the farm crisis. "The farmers right now, bless their hearts, haven't had one bad day, they've had three years worth of bad days," Fry said at the time. "But they can watch on television or listen on the radio and say, 'How 'bout them Hawks?' We're like a push and pull doctor. You may go to the doctor because one leg's shorter than the other, and he'll push and pull on it. When you leave, that leg is still going to be shorter than the other. But you're going to feel better for six or seven hours. You'll feel good while it lasts." The winning, caring and joking times weren't just a feel-good solution, however. Fry left the Iowa program in much better shape than when he entered the doctor's office. Prior to his arrival, Iowa football had its loyal fans who showed up in droves of 50,000 for each home game, although the Hawkeyes went 17 consecutive seasons without a winning record. After announcing his retirement Tuesday, Fry said he has no specific plans for his future, but he wants to continue to help. "I've always really enjoyed helping people," he said. "And anything I can do to help people makes me feel good. I have no idea what that will be, but I'm sure I'll find something." Helping is something Fry has proved to be good at during his 47 years of coaching and 69 years of life. Fry's father died when Hayden was 14, so he took it upon himself to start working in the oil fields of West Texas to support his mother and sister. "I've been a poor boy all my life," he once said. "And I guess I fit into a poor situation better than a lot of people." Fry called himself a survivor at his retirement press conference, which explains his coaching history. He was an All-State quarterback at Odessa High School after leading his team to a 14-0 record and the Texas state title in 1946. Fry then attended Baylor, where he graduated with a degree in psychology and eventually became an assistant coach for the Bears in 1960. Fry took his first head coaching job at SMU when he was just 33, but he refused to be intimidated by the higher powers in the Southwest Conference and those within the Mustang athletics department. After coaching just three seasons, Fry created a stir in 1965 when he signed Jerry LeVias, making him the first black athlete to receive a scholarship in Southwest Conference history. LeVias said he heard rumors that there was a "gentleman's agreement" among the coaches in the conference that they would not offer a scholarship to a black athlete. But Fry felt he was doing the right thing in his heart. "I grew up with black people," said Fry, who once called signing LeVias the best thing he ever did. "I played with them when I was a kid. I used to fight with them, too, but I had a lot of good friends who were black. I always vowed that if I ever got to a place where I could help the black people, I'd do it." LeVias received death threats, and SMU boosters withheld contributions to the athletic department, but Fry and his player grew close through the situation. "He was like a father, a brother and a best friend to me," said LeVias, who still calls the coach at least four times per year. In 1966, Fry led the Mustangs to what would be their only conference title in a 33-year span. But six years later, he was fired after a 7-4 season. To this day, he still does not know why. LeVias' theory is that Fry did what was best for his players instead of catering to the boosters and members of the athletic department. Fry resurfaced the following year at North Texas, where he went 5-5-1 in his first season with a team that went 1-10 the previous year. North Texas went 19-3 in Fry's final two seasons, but the fans were not showing up and neither were the bowl invitations. "We couldn't even get our games on the radio at North Texas State," Fry once said. "I always wanted to be the head coach at 'The University of Something.' I'd coached against a lot of those teams: Alabama, Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma and I wanted my own 'University of.' It happened to be Iowa that called. I would've gone to the University of Iwo-Jima." Bump Elliott, who was the Iowa athletics director at the time, sought out Fry because of his past history of rebuilding struggling programs. At the time, Fry had offers from Oklahoma State and Mississippi, but he conferred with his staff and the possibility of playing in for the Rose Bowl was appealing. "I didn't know much about Hayden at that time," said Elliott's son, Bob, who served the past three seasons as the Hawkeye defensive coordinator. "I'd heard about Hayden Fry, but Bump was so thrilled to have him. He was so sure that this was the guy, so obviously in my mind, it was a great hire even before he proved he could win here." From the moment Fry signed on as the Hawkeye coach on Dec. 9, 1978, he demanded changes. He made the uniforms look similar to those of the Pittsburgh Steelers. He designed the Tiger Hawk logo, demanded better facilities and an attitude change. Looking respectable was no longer good enough, winning was the bottom line. And within three seasons, the results changed as well. In 1981, the Hawkeyes upset Nebraska, UCLA and Michigan and made the trip back to the Rose Bowl for the first time since 1959. Iowa's berth in the 1982 Rose Bowl marked the first time since 1968 that the Big Ten was represented in Pasadena by a school other than Michigan or Ohio State. "He made football fun," said Long, who served four seasons as an assistant under Fry. "He made it fun in every way, shape and form. It got to the point where you could not wait to come over here.

You never knew what to expect." Fry leaves Iowa with a 143-89-6 record, 14 bowl invitations and nearly every school coaching record. He would have passed fellow legend Bear Bryant next season and moved into third-place on the all-time games coached list. Fry could have passed Bo Schembechler and Woody Hayes and moved into eighth on the all-time list in Division I wins, but he modestly said he was not in their class and didn't want to break their records. Although Fry does not own a .600 career winning percentage, which is a prerequisite for the College Football Coaching Hall of Fame, there have been exceptions and one could be made for Fry. Through 37 seasons as a head coach, the game has changed, Fry's coaching staff has changed, but his love for the players and coaches remained the same. "He's a very compassionate, very caring person," said Don Patterson, who spent the past 21 seasons as an assistant to Fry. "I'll give you one thing to give you an indication of that — we were coming back from the Purdue game (Oct. 31) and I was sitting next to him and he said, 'Remember about three years ago when you told me I had to keep coaching until your daughter got out of high school?' "Yeah, I remember that coach," Patterson replied. "He said, 'Well, we made it.' And that says a lot about him. He's been working for much more than himself, he's been working for all of us and to make sure everything is right for all of us." And the players ranging from LeVias to Tim Dwight vouch for his affection for his players. "That's the best thing about him," Dwight said. "No one gets to see what he does inside the program and during practices when he's making jokes. If something bothered us as players, he'd change things. "He always used to say, 'It won't cost you anything to be nice to someone, but it might if you're mean.'" That's a slogan Hayden Fry has followed for 69 years. Fry confident that Bowsby will choose adequate replacement

THE NEXT COACH

Fry and Bowsby both expressed confidence that a quality successor will be found. However, it is difficult to know just how big the talent pool will be, Bowsby said. "You never know what's available until you go out into the marketplace," Bowsby said. "But the fact that a lot of hard work has gone into (the football program) makes my job a lot easier." The UI's tradition of success on the field, the team's facilities and the school's academic programs make the head coaching job an impressive position. For that reason, Bowsby said, the search committee will be able to "compete for the best coaches in the United States." The 69-year-old Fry has said repeatedly that he would like to see his successor be a current Iowa assistant coach or someone with Iowa ties. Bowsby said he feels similarly, and he will consult with Fry about filling the position.

"Hayden Fry is the foremost authority on football that we have on this campus," Bowsby said. "I expect to draw upon his years of experience." Still, the list of top-notch candidates with Iowa ties is a short one, and Bowsby may decide to do what his predecessor, Bump Elliott, did when he hired Fry from North Texas State in 1978. Fry said he would be comfortable with whatever decision Bowsby makes. "I have complete confidence that Bob and the committee will select someone outstanding, regardless of their previous affiliation," Fry said. The price tag on a new coach is also an issue, but one that will be dealt with later. Bowsby would not comment on how much the UI would have to pay for a replacement. Fry's base salary this year is $172,741. When shoe contracts and other endorsements are factored in, Fry's yearly income is in the $400,000-$500,000 range. "It's safe to say we will do what we need to do," Bowsby said.

"We're gonna go out and shop the marketplace and I guess probably have to pay what the marketplace will bear." A screening committee will begin work immediately, Bowsby said. The group would be a small, mobile one capable of interviewing candidates at remote locations away from Iowa City. At least two coaches from Fry's staff — offensive coordinator Don Patterson and quarterbacks coach Chuck Long — will apply for the job. Defensive coordinator Bob Elliott, who has been diagnosed with a potentially fatal blood disease, said he will not be a candidate. "If I have to do the bone marrow transplant, I will be out of commission for quite awhile," Elliott said. "With that hanging over my head, I can't ask anyone to hire me at this point." "It just wasn't meant to be. Some people get opportunities, some don't. And I'm at peace with that." Another top candidate is Florida defensive coordinator Bob Stoops, a former defensive back under Fry.

Repeated attempts to reach Stoops were unsuccessful, but he has said in the past that he is interested in the Iowa job. "I personally would like to see Bob come here," said Fry's son, Randy. "He could do one thing that some of these other coaches may not be able to do, and that's get a pipeline to Florida to get some of these athletes." Some observers have argued that offensive-minded coaches make better head coaches than their defensive-minded counterparts. That might also be a factor Bowsby ponders. "Athletic directors first look at offensive-minded people, but I don't think they're opposed to defensive coaches," Long said. "Offense has been a staple here for the last 20 years, and I'm sure Bob Bowsby wants to keep that going." "But there are obviously very good defensive coaches that are head coaches right now at all levels." DI assistant sports editor James Kramer can be reached at jkramer@blue.weeg.uiowa.edu

20 YEARS OF HAYDEN FRY

Iowa placekicker Tim Douglas sits teary-eyed Monday as Hayden Fry discusses his decision to retire.

Iowa players sad to see their coach depart

■ Freshman Siaka Massaquoi said he wishes he could have played under Hayden Fry.

By Megan Manfull
The Daily Iowan

True freshman Siaka Massaquoi couldn't find a reason to smile after Monday's press conference.

That wasn't how things were supposed to be.

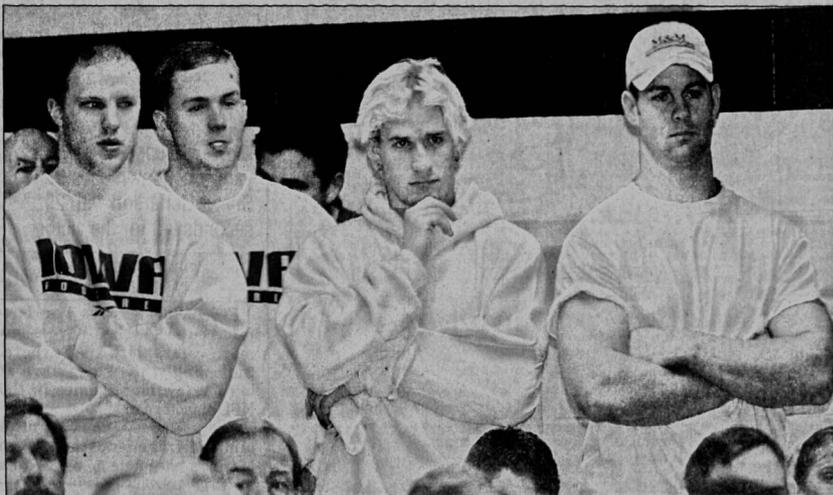

The 18-year-old came to Iowa from Evanston, Ill., after falling in love with Hayden Fry's charisma. Now, after only five months on campus, Massaquoi is saying goodbye to the man who brought him here.

"He'll always be in the back of my mind," Massaquoi said. "I wanted to do things and be like, 'That's for you, Coach Fry.' No matter how long I play here or who the coach is, in the back of my mind things I do are always going to be for Coach Fry."

"I'm still going to look to him for advice. I just want to be his friend. I just want to keep in contact with such a great man."

Massaquoi visualized a future of playing under Fry.

The running back was going to take command of the field next year, and after big plays Fry was going to be on the sidelines shaking his hand. Massaquoi had always imagined that scenario.

"Now, I really wish I'd had a chance to play for him this year," Massaquoi said. "I watched him over the years on film and stuff, and I thought, 'Man I can't wait till I'm making him smile.' I was very fortunate just to have a chance to be around him."

Aaron Kampman, another true freshman, was able to break into Fry's starting lineup during the course of the season.

"I can always tell my grandchildren that I played for a year under coach Hayden Fry," the Kesley, Iowa, native said. "That's something no one can ever take away from me."

Iowa's underclassmen received phone calls Monday morning from Fry's assistant coaches about a team meeting scheduled for 1:30 p.m. That was the first the team heard of their coach's intentions.

Those who couldn't be reached in time for the meeting were surprised to see Fry on the live local telecasts.

"I was at the Airliner eating lunch and it came over the TV," senior Zach Bromert said. "I saw him come out, and I just thought he was going to say he was coming back for a year or two. When he said he retired, it was a big surprise. I had to come over here."

Bromert and the outgoing seniors were able to finish their careers with Fry, and Massaquoi looks at them with slight jealousy. But he said the team is on the rise. He just wishes Fry was going to be a part of it.

Massaquoi said he doesn't detect any signs of a player exodus. Everyone wants to return for what's ahead, he said.

"Everyone understands there are bumps in the road and that the easiest way is never to run, so you just have to face your fear and what you're up against," Massaquoi said.

For many of the Hawkeyes, new coaching candidates are the least of their worries. As the search gets underway for a replacement, it's Fry the players are thinking about.

After Monday's team meeting and press conference, Fry walked alone to his office and players didn't have time to talk to him. But as soon as Thanksgiving is over, Kampman plans to visit Fry.

"I want to talk to him, but I'm going to have to make sure I have tissues with me," Kampman said. "I just want to tell him, 'Thank you.' That's all you can really say."

Fry's successor will be faced with a difficult task

■ The Hawkeyes have a lot of holes to fill, and the competition is getting better.

By James Kramer
The Daily Iowan

Hayden Fry often made winning look easy as Iowa's football coach, even though it wasn't.

Fry was the exception to the rule that said coaches could not be successful at Iowa. Building a consistent winner is a foreboding task for whoever replaces Fry, and nobody knows that better than Fry himself.

"We spoiled people (by winning) and that's what I wanted," Fry said. "To be great every year — we're just not that kind of program."

Fourteen of Fry's 20 Iowa teams qualified for bowl game berths. His most recent team, however, was his worst with a 3-8 record.

The new coach will have a lot more to work with than Fry did when he came in the late 1970s. Still, turning the program around will be a challenge.

"I don't know if we can find anyone quite as good as Hayden," offensive coordinator Don Patterson said. "But the good news is we don't have to because we have less distance to travel."

Fry's successor will have to rebuild a defense that was dominated by seniors this season. There are solid offensive skill players coming back, but the offensive line could again be a major problem area.

"I'm optimistic about the guys coming back, but there are some holes to fill," Fry said.

When the new coach is hired, he will have to move quickly to ensure a solid recruiting class. A few junior college offensive linemen are also needed.

A program's success is totally dependent on its ability to recruit. Fry said Iowa has to recruit a special type of player.

"It starts with recruitment of fine, young men," Fry said. "If you have quality people, you can bring in discipline. You can't win with a bunch of bums."

The Big Ten Conference in which Iowa competes has changed over the years, as well. It's harder to win now, with the addition of Penn State and the emergence of teams like Wisconsin and Purdue.

"We have some natural disadvantages here, with population and other things," Iowa defensive coordinator Bob Elliott said. "I don't know if we can be a champion every year. You just can't expect, with 85 scholarships, to stay at the top all the time."

Lives of former players influenced by Fry

■ Fry's retirement saddened a "couple thousand" of his sons.

By Roger Kuznia
The Daily Iowan

The good ones touch everybody. Whether shaking hands with fans in Kinnick Stadium's north end zone or shaping the lives of his many players and rival coaches, Hayden Fry touched them all.

One of those players greatly helped by Fry was Keith Hunter, a Hawkeye cornerback from 1980-84. Hunter attributes most of his success as an account executive American Corrugated in Columbus, Ohio, to Fry and his coaching staff.

"One thing Hayden Fry always used to talk about was keeping your priorities straight," Hunter said. "In the business world, I can still hear Hayden Fry talking."

Hunter was one of the players who helped Fry turn around the Iowa football program in the 1980s. He served as one of the team captains for the 1984 season.

"When I first got to Iowa in 1980, the Big 10 was called the Big Two and the Little Eight," Hunter said in reference to the dominance of Ohio State and Michigan. "He reversed the thinking of the players. He took us from the bottom to the top."

"He got the losing thought out of our minds and made us believe we could win. He made us believe and we went out and did it."

Former offensive right tackle Mike Haight (1981-85), who now lives in Iowa City, attended Monday's press conference. Haight likes the fact that Fry is able to go out on his own terms.

"He's doing it for no other reason than he loves the University of Iowa," he said. "He's sorely going to be missed."

Haight is one more of Fry's success stories. He was a first round NFL draft pick by the New York Jets in 1986 and now works as a real estate agent for Coldwell Banker.

Haight especially appreciated Fry giving him the opportunity to be not only a good football player, but also a good person.

"I'm one of a couple thousand sons that are going to be sad to see him go," Haight said.

Haight's younger brother, Dave, who also played for Iowa (1985-88), wasn't sure how to put Fry's retirement into words.

"It's hard to say," Dave Haight said. "Hayden is still a great coach. He's been great to all of the players."

The younger Haight readily remembers when Fry would come around during defensive linemen drills. Fry always knew the right thing to say at the right time.

"He'd always crack a joke to keep things light, but if you did something wrong, he would tell you about it," Dave Haight said. "And he'd tell you in a way where you would learn from your mistake."

Not only did Fry touch his players, he touched other coaches as well, including Wisconsin's Barry Alvarez, one of Fry's former assistant coaches during the 1980s.

"Hayden Fry has meant an awful lot to me," he said. "He gave me a chance when I was a high school coach. I always be indebted to him for giving me an opportunity to be at this level."

With Fry retiring, there's one less old-school coach remaining in Division I-A. One of those coaches, 71-year old Penn State coach Joe Paterno said he will cherish the memories.

"We've had so many good times together and I've enjoyed him," Paterno said. "He's such a good friend and he has no problem needing me. I'm going to miss him. I thoroughly like Hayden Fry. I think he's one of the finest we've had in this game."

As Fry has been loyal to Iowa, his players remain as loyal to the University. Though Hunter lives in Columbus, home of the Ohio State Buckeyes, his Hawkeye ties remain strong.

"Everybody puts their (Ohio State) flag out front," Hunter said. "But I still have my Iowa flag. They're trying to make me change, but I never will. They know where my heart lies."

Patriots take down Dolphins

■ Drew Bledsoe threw a 25-yard touchdown pass to Shawn Jefferson with 29 seconds left for the victory.

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FOXBORO, Mass. — The Hartford-bound Patriots have a few more years left in Foxboro. Surprisingly, they also have at least a few more games in the NFL playoff race.

Drew Bledsoe, shaking off a jammed finger, upstaged Dan Marino's late-game heroics with a 25-yard touchdown pass to Shawn Jefferson with 29 seconds left, giving New England a 26-23 win over the Miami Dolphins.

The crowd, supportive despite the prospect of being abandoned in 2001, went wild. "It was a very emotional win for us with all the controversy about us moving. Hopefully, this will give us some momentum."

New England (6-5) won for just the second time in six games. Miami (7-4), lost for the second time in six games and fell into a three-way tie for the AFC East lead with Buffalo and the New York Jets.

"Every time we have an opportunity to separate ourselves from the rest of the division, we just haven't been able to do it," Marino said.

"It was a very emotional win for us with all the controversy about us moving. Hopefully, this will give us some momentum."

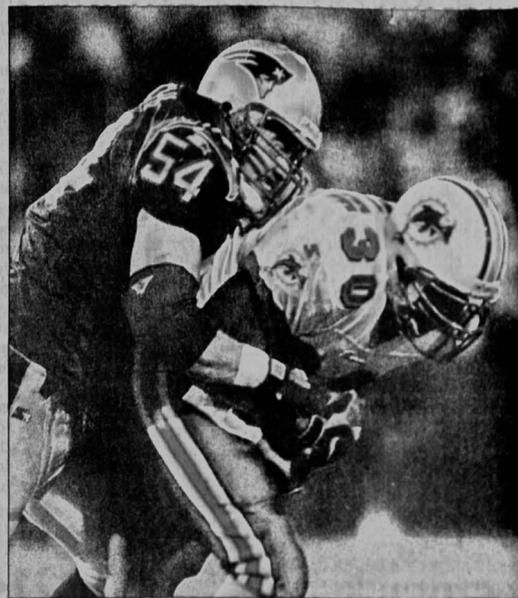

— New England quarterback Drew Bledsoe

The winning touchdown capped a 15-play, 80-yard drive in which Bledsoe hurt his finger when he hit a Miami helmet midway through the march. But he continued to throw and eventually found Jefferson in the end zone. He also converted two fourth and 10s during the drive.

Bledsoe said he was "trying to make a decision whether I'd help the team or help the team by staying in" after jamming his finger on an incompleteness from the Miami 46 with just under two minutes left.

"He called a timeout, then came back and said, 'I got to stick it out,'" Jefferson said.

Karim Abdul-Jabbar had scored on a 4-yard run with 3:22 left, giving Miami a 23-19 lead. Marino, who holds the NFL record with 44 game-winning drives in the fourth quarter and overtime, sparked the comeback with a 24-yard completion to Stanley Pritchett that put the ball at the 4.

Patriots linebacker Tedy Bruschi, left, takes down Dolphins running back Bernie Parmalee after a short completion during the first quarter of their game.

Yet the Patriots ended a distracting four days with a dramatic finish. The stretch began with last Thursday's tentative agreement to move the team from its bare-bones suburban stadium to Connecticut's capital city.

The crowd cheered the Patriots and some fans held signs. "If you build it, we won't come," one said. "It's not too late to save the Patriots. Call your representative," said another.

Adam Vinatieri appeared to have saved the Patriots, with his fourth field goal, a 24-yarder that gave them their first lead, 19-17 with 9:01 left.

But that role was left to Bledsoe

Broncos quarterback John Elway warms up before the team's 40-14 victory over the Oakland Raiders in Denver's Mile High Stadium on Sunday, Nov. 22.

Broncos in search of NFL record

■ With an 11-0 record, the Denver Broncos say they are beatable but statistics disagree.

By Aaron J. Lopez
Associated Press

DENVER — Records are falling, the Hall of Fame is repeatedly calling, and the Denver Broncos are just getting warmed up.

"I don't think we've played as well as we can play," defensive end Alfred Williams said Monday. "That day hopefully will come later in the year when we actually need to play our best game."

The Broncos (11-0) displayed some minor flaws Sunday but still were able to defeat Oakland 40-14 and surpass the 1990 San Francisco 49ers for the best start by a defending Super Bowl champion.

The Raiders were within six points in the fourth quarter before three interceptions led directly to three Denver touchdowns. The calm efficiency in the face of a challenge raised questions about whether the Broncos will lose anytime soon.

"Everybody wants me to say how to beat the Broncos. I have no solution how to beat the Broncos," Denver defensive end Neil Smith said. "We as a team don't feel like we cannot be beat. ... We are beatable. We're human."

It's hard to tell from the statistics. The Broncos, averaging a league-leading 33.6 points, have won 22 straight regular-season home games and 16 games overall — including last year's Super Bowl run.

The NFL record of 18 consecutive wins is shared by four teams, and the Broncos can join them with a win Sunday at San Diego (5-6) and a victory at home Dec. 6 against Kansas City (4-7).

"I don't know if anybody ever thought we'd be in this situation," said Shannon. "We knew we'd have a chance to be somebody special, but I don't really think that was in anyone's mind, going back to San Diego (site of last year's Super Bowl) undefeated."

The same could be said for Denver's individual superlatives.

Quarterback John Elway reached 50,000 career yards passing Sunday; Jason Elam kicked a record-tying 63-yard field goal Oct. 25; and Terrell Davis became only the third running back to rush for 1,000 yards in the season's first seven games.

Vikings unmoved by new success, want championship

■ After sweeping the Green Bay Packers Sunday, the Vikings search for a title.

By Ron Lesko
Associated Press

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — First team to make the playoffs. First sweep of the Green Bay Packers in five years. First division title in four years virtually guaranteed.

Ho hum. The Minnesota Vikings aren't making a big deal out of anything they've accomplished with their 10-1 start, which matches their best in 23 years. It's all just stuff to take care of along the way.

Talk to them in January — late January.

"The idea that we are in the playoffs, that's nice, but that means we've made the first step to try to be champions," coach Dennis Green said Monday. "That was our goal right from the start, and you can't be champions unless you get in the playoffs."

The Vikings locked that up with their 28-14 victory over the Packers (7-4) on Sunday and New Orleans' loss to San Francisco. Even unbeaten Denver still hasn't clinched a playoff spot, even though that's a foregone conclusion and talk has started about a Broncos-Vikings date in Miami on Jan. 31.

Two more wins by the Vikings, or one win and one more loss by Green Bay, officially will end the Packers' three-year reign in the NFC Central and give Minnesota its first title since 1994.

Packers coach Mike Holmgren wasn't impressed after losing to the Vikings for the second time. Although the Packers conceded the division race to their interstate rivals, Holmgren refused to acknowledge the Vikings are better than his two-time defending NFC champions.

Even that didn't get a rise out of the Vikings.

"It doesn't matter. It's irrelevant," Green said. "The bottom line is that playing Green Bay is just one step in the direction we want to go this year. We've played them twice, we've beat them twice. We'll probably play them again. ... The only thing that really counts is who's going to be champions."

"We don't need any label. We don't need any compliments. To be honest with you, we don't need any praise. It's just part of what we're trying to do."

Randall Cunningham, who has burned the Packers for 706 yards and six TDs with one interception this season, agreed.

"A lot of people don't believe that we are playing the caliber football as one of the top teams in the league, but we don't mind," Cunningham said. "I believe that Green Bay is one of the top teams, if not the best team in the league. We've beaten them twice."

The Packers have been everybody's measuring stick in the NFC since Dallas' reign ended in 1996, and that's been especially true for the Vikings.

Green and Holmgren were former assistants together in San Francisco. Both were hired in 1992 and share the distinction of being the NFC's longest-tenured coaches. Green started fast, going 11-5 in his first season and winning the Central. Holmgren passed him by 1995 and now Green is starting to regain ground.

The Packers had the Cowboys to shoot for when they were on the way up. Now they have become the Vikings' measuring stick, the biggest obstacle on the way to what they hope will be the first Super

Rice 'not selfish'

■ 49er's Jerry Rice vents anger at media for blowing recent statements out of proportion.

By Dennis Georgatos
Associated Press

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — It's not about the numbers. It's not about the catches. It's not about the records.

Jerry Rice said Monday that his frustrations, which continue to have him consider retiring after this season, stem from the San Francisco 49ers' erratic offensive play and not a downturn in passes being thrown his way.

"All I'm trying to say, guys, is I'm not a selfish individual," Rice said. "I've always been a team player but you guys made this into a situation where I'm seen as selfish. All I said is, I want this offense to be running on all cylinders. If we can do that, I feel like we can win the entire thing."

The furor surrounding Rice stemmed from his remarks after Sunday night's 31-20 win over New Orleans.

Rice, the NFL's career leader in touchdowns, receptions and yards receiving, was a non-factor during much of the game and at times was relegated to the sidelines while fellow wideouts Terrell Owens and J.J. Stokes were on the field.

He was held without a reception in the first half for the first time in six years and finished with three catches for 27 yards, including an 8-yard touchdown pass from Steve Young.

Afterward, the 36-year-old Rice fumed about his lack of involvement and suggested perhaps the time had come for him to quit.

"Maybe I've been spoiled over the years, but this is not 49ers football," he said. "Or maybe the Man's giving me a sign."

"If you ask me if I'm having a good time, no. Is this something that might want to make you retire, hell yes. All I know is I'm not having a good time. Maybe it's time for me to move on."

On Monday, Rice insisted his post-game remarks were blown out of proportion. He said he was wrongly portrayed as a self-absorbed player and reporters ignored his main point, which was to call attention to San Francisco's sluggish starts in recent games.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Hawkeyes to face a pair of Tigers

Iowa hosts the Hawkeye Classic Friday and Saturday.

By Eric Petersen
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa women's basketball team will look to tame a pair of Tigers this weekend, as the Hawkeyes square off against Missouri and Princeton in the Hawkeye Classic Friday and Saturday at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

After coming off a tough 68-65 loss Sunday against Western Kentucky, the Hawkeyes (1-3) will look to even their record, finishing off a five-game homestand and getting ready to take to the road for their next four.

Iowa will face off against Missouri (1-0) Friday afternoon and Princeton (0-2) on Saturday. Tip-off for both games are scheduled for 1 p.m.

Missouri is coming off a subpar season in which the Lady Tigers finished 11-16 overall and finished last in the Big 12 Conference. However, Missouri has since ushered in coach Cindy Stein, who built a 65-23 record in three years at Emporia State.

"I know (head coach) Cindy Stein personally and she will have that team playing a tenacious man-to-man defense," said Iowa coach Angie Lee. "It's a good matchup for us."

The game against Princeton will likely be Iowa's toughest test this weekend. Although the Tigers come into Carver-Hawkeye without a victory as of Monday, Lee knows they have traditionally been a difficult team to battle.

Saturday's game will mark the first meeting between the two schools.

"The one thing I know about Princeton is that they are fundamentally sound and their players really understand the game," Lee said.

The Ivy Leaguers are led this season by junior guard Kate Thirolf, who is averaging 12 points and four rebounds per contest.

The Hawkeyes defense, which has been a trouble spot so far this season, improved greatly against the experienced Western Kentucky squad. Although now it is the offense that is giving Lee fits.

"I don't like our execution right now, I think we are being too impatient," Lee said. "We've got to get our offense to the point where we are executing better."

"That kind of stuff is what is going to be important for us this weekend," she said.

Iowa has averaged 70.8 points per game on offense so far this season, right on average with last year's 70.3 average after four games.

Amy Herrig leads the team with an average of 17.5 points per game, including three double-double performances.

Lee said Monday that freshman guard Myesha Bledsoe is expected to see her first action of the season this weekend after being held out of Iowa's first four games because of hamstring and ankle injuries.

MEN'S BASKETBALL

Creighton should give Hawkeyes good test

Iowa hosts the Blue Jays Wednesday night at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

By Megan Manfull
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's basketball team will face its toughest opponent to date Wednesday night, but coach Tom Davis isn't worried.

Creighton has received votes in the top-25 since the beginning of the season, and the Bluejays return seven of their top nine players.

Iowa has yet to receive a vote in the Associated Press poll and the Hawkeyes are trying to fill the holes left by the loss of three statistical leaders from last season.

But at 7:05 p.m. in Carver-Hawkeye Arena, the Hawkeyes will put their young squad against veterans.

"The fact that they are outrebounding people by like 16 a game and shooting 80-percent from the free throw line, is a good combination," Davis said. "They are a real good ball club. It will be a good stiff test for us and we recognize it coming in."

Iowa is expected to go with the same starting lineup it has used in the past two games with Ryan Luehrsmann, Kent McCausland and Dean Oliver at guard and J.R. Koch and Guy Rucker in the front court. Davis also plans to keep with the same rotation off the bench.

With emphasis on its 74-63 win over Western Illinois, Iowa has been ranked No. 26 in Sagarin's recent rankings. After 28 years of coaching, Davis assures people his Hawkeyes are not a top-30 caliber team, yet.

"We'd like to be there, but realistically we're not," he said. "We're too raw. We show some real good signs and we have some nice dimensions, but it just needs a lot of work."

The Hawkeyes are still looking to adjust to the return of Jess Settles and Davis has not established an eight-man rotation. During Iowa's game against UNI last week, the Hawkeye coach played 16 members of his team.

Rucker and Koch will be crucial in the middle with Creighton outrebounding teams in double figures and Iowa struggling on the boards in recent weeks. Davis will look to his depth in the front court to keep the numbers close.

"Our rebounding is getting better. It's better (Monday) than it was (Sunday)," Davis said. "We don't have any natural rebounders. We don't have guys that are naturally aggressive going to the boards. Some guys just have the will, but these guys really have to concentrate on it."

IOWA VOLLEYBALL

Hawkeyes to finish season with two home matches

The Iowa volleyball team will look to end its season with two wins this weekend when it takes on Michigan (4-12 Big Ten) and No. 14 Michigan State (13-3).

The Hawkeyes will challenge the Wolverines on Friday night and the Spartans during Saturday's Senior Night. Both nights of action are scheduled to begin at 7 p.m.

Saturday night, the Hawkeyes will honor seniors Barb Zvonek, Jordan Schultz and Katie O'Brien. O'Brien is Iowa's only fifth-year senior.

Iowa will look for junior Julie Williams to lead the young squad. Last weekend, Williams led Iowa with 32 kills and 19 digs.

The Hawkeyes are coming off two Big Ten losses. On Nov. 13-14, Iowa won its first two Big Ten matches with sweeps against Indiana and Northwestern.

But the Hawkeyes couldn't continue racking up the wins last weekend when they lost to Illinois and Purdue. The Hawkeyes extended their losing streak on the road to 23 consecutive conference matches.

During Iowa's last meeting with Michigan, Iowa won one game, but was swept by Michigan State.

Coach Rita Crockett's Hawkeyes are 2-16 in the conference and 8-19 overall.

MEN'S CROSS COUNTRY

Wieczorek's team finishes 21st at NAAs

Twelfth-year coach said the season was "a terrific year in all phases."

By Eric Petersen
The Daily Iowan

The Iowa men's cross country team finished 21st at Monday's NCAA Championships, capping off its best season in Larry Wieczorek's 12 years as coach.

"I am very happy with the season," Wieczorek said. "It was a terrific year in all phases. If you asked me if I would have taken (a No. 21 finish in the country) at the beginning of the season — no doubt."

Senior Stetson Steele was the Hawkeyes top finisher, placing 44th overall (31:18) on the challenging course of the University of Kansas.

Although their goal was to be in the top half of the 31-team field, Wieczorek said his team is far from feeling sorry for themselves.

"I think there's always the feeling that you could have run a little bit better," Wieczorek said. "But they fought hard and did the best they could. I'm not disappointed at all."

Iowa's next finisher, junior Paul Sarris, finished in 127th place despite coming in a mere 1:08 after Steele.

Big Ten Freshman of the Year Reed Steele came in next, with senior Chad Schwitters, sophomores Nick Nordheim and Michael Layne and freshman Shaun Allen rounding out the Iowa contingent.

Arkansas won the team title, followed by last year's national champion Stanford, Colorado, Michigan and Oregon. Colorado's Adam Goucher won the individual title with a time of 29:26.

After Iowa's first appearance in the championships since 1966, Wieczorek and his stable of young runners believe they are simply scratching the surface of success.

The Hawkeyes lose only two runners (Steele and Schwitters) from this year's team which finished fifth in the Big Ten and second at the NCAA Midwest Regional.

"That group is certainly going to make a run at it next year," Wieczorek said.

FRY'S FUTURE

What's next for the man known simply as 'Hayden?'

■ Fishing, golf and "exploring Mother Nature" are just a few of the things Hayden Fry would like to tackle in life after coaching.

By Tony Wirt
The Daily Iowan

As a head football coach, Hayden Fry virtually lived at the Jacobson Athletic Building.

There were meetings with players, game film viewing sessions, strategy discussions, conversations with assistants — the work never ended.

With the hectic lifestyle now out of the picture and retirement looming, Fry is going to have a lot of time on his hands.

"I'm just going to go out and explore Mother Nature," Fry said. "Now I have a chance to go out and see what the good Lord has built that I haven't seen yet."

Not only will he get to spend a lot of time getting reacquainted with the great outdoors, but Fry will also get to revive his role as family man.

"I know that it means a lot, to him to spend time with his family," senior Eric Thigpen said. "With the long hours he put into coaching, that was something that he had been deprived of all his life. He never got the opportunity to see his kids grow up because he'd been coaching all his life. Now he can sit back, have some time to himself and not stress about everything — be a family man."

One thing is certain: The Fry family will be a firm fixture in the Iowa City area. Fry said at his press conference that he and his wife, Shirley, love it in Iowa City and would always keep a home here, but joked about what kind of house it would be.

"We'll probably keep the big house we've got now," Fry said. "But I would imagine that after a year or so, that social security check will make me take something smaller."

Three coaches that have retired from the UI in recent years — Dan Gable, Glenn Patton and Duane Banks — have taken positions in the administration.

Hayden Fry and the 1998 Hawkeyes await the beginning of Fry's last game at Minnesota Nov. 21.

Brian Ray/The Daily Iowan

There is no such job waiting for Fry, but it doesn't mean that he won't be involved with the athletic department.

"I told (Athletics Director Bob Bowsby) that I'd make myself available for any situation that will move the university forward, whether it is the university itself or the athletic department," Fry said. "I've done this all my life, so I don't want to divorce myself from it completely."

There will be no shortage of work for Fry to do if he is so inclined. Bowsby plans on getting his input on an eventual successor, and Fry plans on helping his former assistant coaches find new jobs.

Fry said he would be willing to make phone calls or even meet with individual athletic directors if it would help one of his assistants land a job.

"I've always enjoyed helping people," Fry said. "Anything I can do to help people makes me feel good."

Some people are not so sure they want to see Fry continue giving his time away. Derek Rose, a senior co-captain, spoke very highly of Fry during the press conference, and had an idea of what he wants to see his former coach do in his retirement years.

"He really deserves this rest," Rose said. "He deserves the time to himself to enjoy the things that he hasn't had time to do over his coaching career." As for the man himself, he isn't sure what the future holds. In fact, he still doesn't know how he's going to handle life after football.

"I don't know what the outside world is like — I may go crazy," Fry said. "So after I go out and let my beard grow and my hair grow and go down the Grand Canyon on a mule or jackass, I might show up someplace like (legendary college coaches) Pop Warner and Alonzo Stagg and add to my record."

"I'm just kiddin' about that."

In his own words

"I have no regrets, but I still find it all hard to understand. I tell you one thing, if I go 9-2 at Iowa, I won't be sitting at home watching the bowl games on television."

"I'm a Texas boy, I grew up here. But I've got a new start up at Iowa and I'm making my home up there, I'll miss Texas, miss the people. But I'm at Iowa to stay."

—Fry on his decision to leave North Texas and come to the UI

"Losing is losing. These kids have been babied and petted and pampered so much when they lose that it makes me sick."

—Fry's explanation of the existing conditions of the Iowa program upon his arrival in Iowa City

"We may run the Statue of Liberty out of our end zone. We may line up with only one player behind the center. But don't get me wrong, I'm not overlooking the main objective here, which is winning."

—Fry, on the offensive philosophy he planned on bringing to Iowa

"Man, you could usher me to the Toilet Bowl. What else are you going to do at Christmas when it's cold and snowing outside?"

—Fry's thoughts on the Hawkeyes' slim chances of going to a bowl after starting the season 3-6 in 1992

"That was a complete nightmare. I looked up at the sky and when I looked up, it started raining harder. I think the Lord's trying to tell me something. He's trying to tell the whole football team something. I hope it's a learning lesson that positive, but right now it's very difficult to find something positive."

—Fry after a 38-15 loss to Ohio State on Nov. 2, 1992.

"It really looks like we have one of the better programs in the nation. We can compete with anybody in the country. I'm happy here at Iowa, but I haven't done the job I came here to do, which is to win a national championship."

—Fry on the direction of his football program while the team was ranked No. 1 in 1985

"People do not know me. My wife doesn't know me. The world I live in will not permit me to establish a consistency in personal behavior. I'm not an easy guy to figure out, a guy you can just put a finger on."

—Fry on his personal life

"When you talk to him, you feel like you're out in the fields, chewing on a stick of wheat and shooting the breeze, talking about the weather or cattle or poker."

—Bob Condon, USOC publicist in an Oct. 28, 1985 article regarding Fry's demeanor

"He's just like Buford T. Pusser or something. He's an old redneck, a loud, gruff sweetheart. He drinks a lot of Budweiser and tells a lot of stories. He's got a lot of little quips; he must come up with them off the wall."

—Bill Bock, former Fry bodyguard addressing the Texan's personality

"We still haven't accomplished what we want to accomplish. It is possible I will coach until 70, but there is so much of the world out there I haven't been able to investigate."

—Fry in a Nov. 13, 1992 article Assembled by Chuck Blount

A part of Iowa died Monday

It took all of 19 words for Hayden Fry to break into tears as he made the public aware that his 20th season would be his last as head coach of the Iowa Hawkeyes.

It wasn't an easy thing for him to do. It wasn't an easy thing to listen to, either.

At least 15 of the players in attendance wept with their coach. The sound of sniffly noses and the sight of watery eyes said it all. They will miss their coach, and everything associated with him that was good.

"Hayden Fry was not only like a father to us all, but he was the best coach we could have ever asked for," senior co-captain Derek Rose said. "This is a sad, sad day to see him leave, but he deserves to enjoy himself."

A part of Iowa died Monday afternoon. Fry, a man that gave Iowans hope in desperate times during the Farm Crisis of the 1980s, was the state's chief ambassador to the nation. For a time, he put Iowans on top. Iowans were No. 1.

He was and will always be "The Coach," and will not easily be replaced.

"There's never a good time, but this was the best time to do this," Fry said.

"Selfishly, this is not the right time for me (coming off his worst season as Iowa's coach), but I truly love the state of Iowa and the university. I'll always be a Hawk."

The next coach to sit in the office of the head coach will feel like he is in the presence of a ghost. It will take some time before Iowans will be able to identify with him like they could with Fry.

"He truly put together one of the most remarkable careers of all time," Iowa athletics director Bob Bowsby said. "We're daunted by the task of having to move forward and find a guy to move into the cold shadow of Hayden Fry."

But move forward Bowsby must. The world of college football is an unforgiving one. Recruits must be signed. Coaching staffs need to be assembled. Somehow, some way, Bowsby needs to find a man that can do the job. If the next coach can do even half as much as Fry has been able to do in his tenure here, Bowsby's search would be considered a success.

It is a process that will begin immediately. Bowsby announced Monday that the search process would begin as early as that night.

"All you scoopers need to get your motor going, trying to find out who the next coach will be," Fry said to reporters.

Who will the next man be? The answer was the last thing on the minds of the players. They couldn't help but continue to feel the sting of what was the most stunning announcement the state of Iowa has seen in a number of years.

"I'm sad I didn't get to play for him," true freshman Siaka Massaquoi said. "We're gonna get better and I feel bad he won't be around with us to see it."

The ingredient known as "Iowa Ties" was brought up by Fry, Bowsby and some of the players. Being a former Iowa player or coach appears to be an advantageous quality to have for future candidates.

Florida assistant Bob Stoops, who was a former assistant and player for Iowa, seems to be the early favorite to get the job. When a reporter asked Bowsby if the next coach has games to play over the next couple of weeks (referring to Stoops), the Iowa A.D. broke into a grin that resembled that of a poor poker player.

"That's certainly possible," Bowsby said.

Still, it is too early to tell. "He would be a defensive guy and that would be great," freshman linebacker Aaron Kampman said of Stoops' reported interest in the position.

Bob Elliott, who has basically been groomed for the job for the past three years, is likely out of the picture. He is currently fighting a life threatening blood disease, and may need a bone marrow transplant.

"Everybody has got to fight something and this is my battle," Elliott said. "This job just isn't in the good Lord's plan for me."

Whoever gets the job will be hard pressed to do the things as well as the man before him.

Iowa fans are proud people. They have a fundamental attachment to football and the coach that leads it. They need a leader, and they need somebody to be the fatherly figure that Fry was in his years as coach.

Steinbrenner will retain control of Yankees

Steinbrenner will not lose his shares as managing general partner.

By Ronald Blum
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Even if George Steinbrenner sells a major share of the New York Yankees, he won't be giving up control of baseball's most famous team.

Any sale to Cablevision Systems Corp. would involve only Steinbrenner's limited partner shares. He would retain his shares as managing general partner, a source familiar with Steinbrenner's negotiations, speaking on the condition he not be identified, told The Associated Press on Sunday night.

The managing general partner has control of a team's operations. Limited partners have no decision-making power.

NBC Sports had reported a deal was agreed to Thursday and said it called for Steinbrenner to turn over full ownership of the team to the cable giant for $600 million.

The Daily News reported today that Cablevision will pay about $525 million for 70 percent of the team. Earlier, the newspaper said the sale would be completed after Jan. 1 for tax reasons.

"If it is done, the Steinbrenners will be in control," Steinbrenner was quoted as saying in today's editions of The New York Times. "That's what sets Cablevision apart from others. There are those who would pay a lot of money and take control, but that won't happen. We've been in control for too long."

Cablevision president James Dolan, whose father is chairman of the company, said Sunday he would not comment on "rumors or speculation." He said Cablevision "maintains an active interest in the future of our relationship with Mr. Steinbrenner and the Yankees."

Cablevision also controls the NBA's New York Knicks and the NHL's New York Rangers, and Steinbrenner wouldn't address reports Dolan would give him operating control of those franchises, too.

Blake bids farewell at Oklahoma

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — All who know him agree that John Blake made a difference in the lives of his players. But that doesn't carry much weight when you lose too many football games at Oklahoma.

Blake was fired Sunday after compiling a 12-22 record, the worst three-year stretch in school history. He held a 2 1/2-minute news conference Monday to thank his players, coaches and supporters.

"This program is headed in the right direction," he said, occasionally choking up before leaving without taking questions. "We came here for a purpose, to get the foundation established to be a winner."

Actually, his charge when he replaced Howard Schnellenberger in December 1995 was to do more than lay a foundation. It was to restore Oklahoma as a national power, and he didn't come close.

The Sooners were 3-8 in his first year and 4-8 the next — Oklahoma had never had even one eight-loss season before those. The Sooners won three of their final four games this year to finish 5-6.

"We worked hard. We didn't win enough games," offensive coordinator Joe Dickinson said. "The bottom line, you've got to win games at the University of Oklahoma."

"The tradition of this program is large. The only thing on John Blake, he didn't win enough games."

The university's regents voted to fire Blake based on the recommendation of athletic director Joe Castiglione, who has been on the job since April 30. Castiglione apparently has the full authority to hire a replacement — no search committee will be formed, as was done when Blake was hired.

Son of former Iowa coach Stringer faces criminal charges

RALEIGH, N.C. (AP) — Six North Carolina State students face criminal charges in connection with the slaying of a gunman who was killed with his own gun.

Among the three reserve football players charged was David Stringer, the son of Rutgers women's basketball coach C. Vivian Stringer. His cousin, Corey Stringer, plays for the Minnesota Vikings.

C. Vivian Stringer was Iowa's women's basketball coach from 1983-95.

Police say Neil Davis Jr., 21, an N.C. State student from Fayetteville, was shot about 2:30 a.m. Sunday. He died about six hours later at Wake Medical Center, hospital spokeswoman Marilyn Eddinger said.

Police Capt. Mike Longmire said Davis was shot with a 9 mm semiautomatic pistol after a struggle with the six students. The six had been attending an off-campus party a few doors down from Davis' home.

"There were a bunch of drunk people pouring out of that house," a neighbor said.

Clyde Blunt faces the most serious charges. The 20-year-old sophomore wrestler, the ACC heavyweight champion, was charged with involuntary manslaughter because investigators say his aggressive behavior resulted in Davis' death. Blunt also faces charges of misdemeanor breaking and entering.

The three reserve football players — Harold Jackson, Willie Wright and Stringer — were charged with misdemeanor breaking and entering and misdemeanor assault. Wright, 19, also was charged with larceny of a firearm. Jackson, 20, and Stringer, 19, also were charged with accessory to a felony for helping Wright take the weapon, Longmire said.

Michael Mordarski, a 20-year-old wrestler, and Daniel Scott Campenella, 21, an N.C. State student and former wrestler, were charged with misdemeanor breaking and entering.

Mordarski and Campenella were released on their own recognizance Sunday night. The three football players secured bonds ranging from $1,000 to $2,500. Blunt was in the Wake County Jail on a $5,000 bond.

Of the three football players, only Jackson, the Wolfpack's backup fullback, has seen any significant playing time. Hours before the shooting, he scored his first college touchdown in a 35-21 win over Maryland.

Stringer is a wide receiver from North Brunswick, N.J. Jackson is from Wilkes-Barre, Pa. Wright is a receiver from Greensboro.

Tennessee stays in first place in BCS standings

(AP) — Kansas State is running out of time in its bid to get into the Fiesta Bowl.

Tennessee remained in first place in the latest Bowl Championship Series standings, while UCLA increased its lead over the Wildcats for the second spot in the Fiesta, where the national title will be on the line.

K-State (11-0), which has the weekend off, completes its regular season on Dec. 5, when it plays Texas A&M in the Big 12 title game. UCLA (10-0) also is off this weekend before its season finale against Miami.

"Tennessee (10-0), it appears, can clinch a berth in the Fiesta Bowl by winning its final two games — against Vanderbilt (2-8) on Saturday and either Arkansas or Mississippi State in the SEC title game on Dec. 5.

If the top three teams continue to win, the Wildcats would need lots of help in the strength-of-schedule department, which is part of the BCS formula for determining the top teams. K-State's schedule is ranked 62nd, while UCLA's is rated eighth and Tennessee's 14th.

This weekend, the Wildcats will be rooting for Syracuse to beat Miami (which would weaken UCLA's schedule) and Texas A&M to beat Texas (which would strengthen K-State's).

The BCS standings are calculated by using The Associated Press' media poll and the coaches' poll, three computer rankings, strength-of-schedule and number of losses.

Dealing with life's imperfections

"Emma's Child" opens this Friday at Riverside Theatre.

By Stacy Atchison
The Daily Iowan

In tune with the holiday spirit of togetherness, Riverside Theatre is scheduled to present "Emma's Child," a play that tries to rediscover the true meaning of family and friends.

"This work is a seasonal piece because it is a play about family and love. It is an uplifting kind of drama," said director Michael Sokoloff.

"Emma's Child" centers on a happily married middle-aged couple, Jean and Henry Farrell, who have been trying unsuccessfully to have a child for 16 years.

When the couple finally looks into adoption, the baby boy they are presented with is not at all what they had expected their infant to be like.

"The child was born with a (birth defect) in which the cerebral spinal fluid does not properly drain from the head. My character immediately sees imperfection in the child and is disappointed," said actor Ron Clark, who performs the part of Henry.

"But my wife (Jean) is much more open-minded. She is instantly captivated by the child and, in the words of our director, she begins 'an exquisite love affair with him,'" he said.

The part of Jean is performed by Clark's real-life wife and actor Jody Hovland. She thinks the play shows that some decisions in life have to be matters of the heart, not of the mind.

"I find that playing characters like this is an uplifting experience for me. Jean is someone who makes decisions with her heart and never looks back," Hovland said.

"She sees that the child is just waiting for someone to take care of him, and she thinks she is just the person to do it," she said.

The play has also sparked sentimental feelings in Clark toward his family.

"I'm very close to my sons, and this show has made me look at them and feel lucky that I was able to have them in pretty uncomplicated ways," he said.

Throughout the past several weeks that he has been directing "Emma's Child," Sokoloff said the play has made him examine the expectations that people tend to have about their children.

"We live in a consumer age, where people can manipulate genes to create the specific kinds of offspring they want," he said.

Having the option to create this kind of perfection, Sokoloff wonders if people are as willing to accept some imperfections in their children.

"(Emma's Child) is a play about family and love ... perfect to watch during the holidays," he said.

"Emma's Child" is scheduled to run Friday through Dec. 19 at Riverside Theatre, 213 N. Gilbert St. On Thursdays, the show will begin at 7 p.m., on Fridays and Saturdays at 8 p.m., and on Sundays at 2 p.m. Tickets are $17 for adults on Fridays and Saturdays and $15 on Thursdays and Sundays; they are $15 for senior citizens or students. Any ticket that is not sold 15 minutes before the show can be purchased by students, with their college IDs, for $8.

Babies & bugs: an all-out animation war

The new movie explores sibling rivalry and peer acceptance.

By Kathleen Sampey
Associated Press

After six seasons on Nickelodeon, the animated series "Rugrats" has become as familiar and beloved to under-12s as "Peanuts" once was for baby boomers.

Paramount Pictures brought the golden googoo to the silver screen in "The Rugrats Movie," a week before the long Thanksgiving weekend, and reaped a box-office bonanza. The movie grossed $28 million in its weekend opening, taking the No. 1 its international popularity and billions of dollars in merchandise, these babies mean business.

"We all see ourselves in the Rugrats," said Albie Hecht, president of film and TV entertainment for Nickelodeon and executive producer for the movie. "It's kind of the secret life of kids. The creators have really been able to project what kids must think of adults. We say things like 'responsibility' and they hear 'sponsibility.' It offers real insight into how kids must view adults and how adults view kids."

In the film, which opened nationwide on Nov. 20, a new baby plops into the regular babies' lives when lead character Tommy Pickles gets a brother, the aptly named "Dil," short for Dylan.

Like the Emmy award-winning series, the movie mirrors themes in everyday family life, in this case, sibling rivalry and peer acceptance from the rest of the gang: scarey cat Chuckie, eccentric twins Phil and Lil DeVille and the bratty Angelica.

"It's a very universal experience," Klasky said. "I think adults will relate to it and certainly children will, even if they don't have a sibling."

The movie poses life lessons as well. Sibling rivalry is explored and also sibling love.

Klasky hopes the movie draws older viewers than the TV show does. Its hip soundtrack includes songs from Jakob Dylan, Beck, Lenny Kravitz, Busta Rhymes and Patti Smith.

"The music is very contemporary and we're hoping it will draw an older crowd — older meaning teen-agers," she said.

On the heels of "Antz" here comes "A Bug's Life," another formicary frolic.

By Malcolm Ritter
Associated Press

So you've seen "Antz," and now there's "A Bug's Life." Does it make any sense to see another computer-animated movie about ants?

Absolutely. Fact is, these are two quite different movies, and each is delightful in its own way.

The main characters in "A Bug's Life" are drawn like shiny, bright-colored toys rather than the more textured creatures of "Antz," and maybe that's a tip-off. Clearly, "A Bug's Life" is far more a kid's movie at heart. You won't find the knowing, Woody Allen-like verbal humor of "Antz." But you will see more action per minute, and some of it is riveting.

Even grown-ups will snap to attention when a cute, brightly colored songbird terrorizes our new insect friends. The scene drew gasps at a recent screening.

"A Bug's Life" tells the story of an ant colony that's invaded annually by a gang of grasshoppers, who demand a major share of the harvest. One of the ants, Flik (voice of Dave Foley, who stars in TV's "NewsRadio"), accidentally disposes of the offering just before the grasshoppers show up. It's up to him to save his colony. None of the grown-up ants has any faith in him, certainly not the lovely Princess Atta (voice of Julia Louis-Dreyfus from TV's "Seinfeld").

The animation is superb, as one would expect from the folks who created "Toy Story." Not only is it technically impressive — just watch that tree in the opening sequence, with each leaf shimmering in the breeze — but it's clever.

Grown-ups might find the story sagging a bit before they get swept up in the closing scenes. But for them, there's a treat at the closing credits: a series of supposed "outtakes" in which the insects act all too human. It's some of the best stuff in the movie.

"A Bug's Life," rated G, comes from Walt Disney Pictures and Pixar Animation Studios. It is produced by Darla K. Anderson and Kevin Reher, directed by John Lasseter and co-directed by Andrew Stanton, with screenplay by Stanton, Donald McEnery and Bob Shaw.

Berg leaving 'Hope' to write, direct

NEW YORK (AP) — Peter Berg says he is leaving the series "Chicago Hope" to concentrate on writing and directing, not because he's tired of acting in the medical drama.

"It's not like I'm David Caruso, like 'I hate you, let me out,'" Berg said in TV Guide's Nov. 28 edition, referring to the former star of "NYPD Blue."

"It's just that at some point you forget what episode you're in, and what you develop a passion for is the big fat paycheck. I don't want that to be my passion right now."

for having known Alan Pakula." Don Hewitt, producer of CBS' "60 Minutes," told Pakula's family and a few dozen invited friends in a eulogy Sunday.

Pakula, 70, whose films included "Sophie's Choice," "To Kill a Mockingbird" and "All The President's Men," was killed Nov. 19 after a steel pipe apparently fell off a truck and crashed through the windshield of his station wagon, striking him in the head.

He was interred in Greenriver cemetery, where painters Jackson Pollock and Elaine de Kooning and former Time Warner chairman Steve Ross are buried.

Sheen joins 2,000 to protest Army program

FORT BENNING, Ga. (AP) — Actor Martin Sheen and 2,000 other protesters were briefly detained during a demonstration against an Army program accused of training soldiers involved in atrocities in Latin America.

The School of the Americas at Fort Benning has trained more than 55,000 officers, cadets and soldiers from 22 Latin American countries. It has been a target of protests since 1989, when some of its graduates were linked to the murder of six Jesuit priests and two women in El Salvador.

Those who defied orders Sunday and walked onto Fort Benning property were loaded onto buses, driven to a park a mile away and released.

"We're asking them to be courageous and brave and realize this does not speak well of the U.S. Army," Sheen said. "We call on the Army to rid itself of this disgrace."

School officials said the institution, which moved to Fort Benning from Panama in 1984, is largely responsible for the growth of democracy in Latin America and teaches its students about human rights in each of its courses.
