City weighs downtown tax breaks

As a part of a Downtown Urban Revitalization plan, businesses may get some help from the city.

By Troy Shoen

To avoid a fight back against Downtown businesses, Iowa City's City Council may grant tax breaks.

"No one will invest money in downtown businesses if there is no opportunity of a return on their investment," said Mayor Peter Lowenstein.

The tax breaks would be part of a Downtown Urban Revitalization plan. It was to be given in downtown businesses within one year that are located within the city limits. The tax breaks would be given to downtown businesses that are located within the city limits.

City Council mulls adult business rule

Iowa City's existing "adult" stores would not be affected by a proposed amendment.

By Troy Shoen

Tonight's Iowa City City Council meeting is expected to approve a proposed amendment that would ban "adult" stores in the city. The amendment was brought forward by City Councilman Steve Schmadtke.

The amendment would define "adult" businesses as those that sell "adult" products. The definition would include "adult" products that are sold in a public manner, such as those that are sold in a public location or in a public display. The definition would also include those that are sold in a public manner, such as those that are sold in a public location or in a public display.

Obamacare Center to hold seminar on aging issues

While aging is generally viewed as a normal part of life, it is also a period when many people experience changes and challenges. The Affordable Care Act (ACA) is expected to continue to play a significant role in the lives of older Americans. As the ACA turns 15, there will be a focus on emerging trends and long-term care issues.

Panelists will provide an overview of key changes in the ACA, including the expansion of Medicare coverage, the health insurance marketplace, and the role of long-term care. The session will also address the impact of the ACA on the insurance market and the affordability of health care for older Americans.

The seminar will take place on October 25, 2023, from 9:00 AM to 12:00 PM at the University of Nebraska Medical Center in Omaha.

School superintendent finalist Peter Flynn meets with concerned citizens by Bill Leng

The people who had the chance to stop the first day of the final round of the Superintendent of the Iowa City School District search process were concerned citizens. A community forum was held for students, parents, school employees and community citizens.

Several people did not know Peter Flynn, former principal at Johnston High School in Des Moines. Several others did not know Peter Flynn, former superintendent of the University of Iowa.

The meeting was well attended with approximately 50 residents of the area composing the crowd. The meeting ended with citizens voicing their concerns.

Questions ranged from accountability on the superintendent's part to his promise of improving student achievement. Flynn briefly hinted at his ideas on involving parents and teachers.

Iowa City resident C.L. McCloskey, who has been living in the area since 1989, said the residents he would like to see in the new superintendent to be welcoming and open to new ideas.

Flynn, however, said he would not be able to answer questions about his plans for the school district without hesitation.

UI striving to find diversity

The International Writing Program has emerged from a season of turmoil with a new, albeit tentative lease on life. The program, which was at risk of being dismantled due to budget cuts and administrative inaction, has been saved for the time being. This was partly due to public opposition and the leadership of the program's director, Stephen Hershberger. The program's supporters argue that it is essential for the university to maintain a global perspective and to continue fostering diversity in rhetoric and literary arts.

The program's future is still uncertain, however. The university administration has yet to finalize its decision on the program's status for the upcoming academic year. This uncertainty is causing concern among students, faculty, and alumni who support the program's mission.

The New York Supreme Court has issued an order temporarily restraining the New York City Council from proceeding with the sale of the Manhattan Community College building.

The application was filed by the Manhattan Community College, which claims that the sale would violate the rights of the community college's students and faculty.

"I don't know how long they'll be on the block," said Marvin. But the Manhattan Community College's attorney, Jeffrey Brown, said that the Manhattan Community College would not be able to control the flood of adult business, but it will keep children out of such businesses, but he does not see a step in the right direction.

Under the new regulations, restaurants would be able to be located within 250 feet of an adult business, something not allowed under the current rules.

Jose Canseco continues to ponder quitting.

By Todd Netterman

In a league where the players don't have to do much to make it to the next level, it's no surprise that Canseco is pondering retirement. He has been a consistent hitter throughout his career, but recent injuries and a decrease in his performance have led him to question his future in the majors.

Canseco, who has played for several teams in his career, is currently with the Texas Rangers. He has struggled in recent years, hitting .247 with 13 home runs and 46 RBIs in 2019. Despite these numbers, he still has a solid track record and is considered one of the best players of his generation.

"I've been here so long, it feels like forever," Canseco said. "I just don't see the end of the tunnel anymore. It's like a numbers game. When you think about it, it's hard to say goodbye."

Eichelberger gets boost from Open

By Chuck Schnellenger

WELL DESERVED. Iowa native Ed Eichelberger, who has a long history of golfing, has a new boost for his game. He is the Open Champion and has been raising money for the Florida Atlantic's Foundation to help them succeed.

Eichelberger, a former pro since 1987, scored his first victory in a major when he won the Open last year. He is known for his tenacity and power, which has earned him many fans. The Open is one of the most prestigious tournaments in golf.

Eichelberger has won 24 tournaments and has a career best of 73 under-par. He is known for his ability to hit the ball far and straight. His consistency and accuracy have made him a favorite among golfers and fans alike.

Eichelberger's victory in the Open was a huge boost for Florida Atlantic. The school has been struggling financially and Eichelberger's win provided a much-needed infusion of money. The Florida Atlantic Golf Club is now able to improve its facilities and attract top players to the tournament.

Florida Atlantic did not search far

By Steven Wiese

While many schools search far and wide for a new coach, Florida Atlantic found its answer in the form of Howard Schnellenberger. Schnellenberger was a former Miami Hurricanes football coach and has a wealth of experience in college football.

Schnellenberger's first stint as a coach came in the 1970s, when he led the Florida State Seminoles to a national championship. He then went on to coach the Miami Hurricanes, where he led them to three consecutive national championships. After leaving Miami, Schnellenberger coached the Florida Atlantic Owls, where he led them to a 24-2 record and a Sugar Bowl victory.

Schnellenberger's reputation as a coach is well known, and Florida Atlantic was lucky to have him. He has been a mentor to many young coaches and has helped guide them to success.

The new coach was introduced at a press conference this week, where he stated, "I am excited to be back in college football. I have always believed in the power of education and the importance of giving back to the community. Florida Atlantic is a special place with a rich history, and I am looking forward to helping the Owls compete at the highest level of college football."
