School board names Plugg superintendent

The new superintendent, from Grand Island, Neb., will begin work in July.

By Bev Lanning

The Iowa City School Board Tuesday afternoon named Lane Plugg the district's new superintendent, replacing former superintendent Nick Johnson, approved by the board in February.

Plugg, who served as the associate superintendent for learning services and executive director of the Urban Education District in Grand Island, Neb., said he is looking forward to working in Iowa City.

"I can't wait to have the opportunity to serve in a community and with a group of people such as the City Council," Plugg said. "I'm excited about the change."

Plugg also said he was impressed by the district's public forums.

"There is a strong commitment to public education and pride in what we do," Plugg said. "I'm very, very impressed by the community and especially the students."

The board named Plugg in the interview process, among the board members, and would have had to withdraw promptly from a portion of the West Bank even while posting a Mr. Middle Eastern settlement.

"There is no reason to do, Barak said as he entered a session of meetings with the Clinton administration.

The president said with President Bill Clinton on the phone, "He's a tough, clever, and courageous leader who will stand up for his people in the face of adversity."

Plugg's appointment requires two-thirds approval by the City Council.

Kennedy not entitled to favoritism

U.S. Constitution, Article I, Section 10, The Title of Nobility shall be granted by the United States to no person born or naturalized out of its territory.

The Constitution is quite clear on this matter. However, it is not uncommon to hear people making statements like, "They areuntitled because they are not entitled to the title." While it is true that they are not entitled to the title, it does not mean that they are not entitled to the same rights and privileges that any other citizen of the United States has. In fact, the framers of the Constitution were very specific about the importance of equality before the law.

What is meant by the clause in the Constitution?

The clause in the Constitution states that "no Title of Nobility shall be granted by the United States to any person born or naturalized out of its territory." This means that no person born or naturalized out of the United States should be granted a title of nobility by the United States. It does not mean that such a title cannot be granted by another country or international organization.

However, the clause has been interpreted by the courts to mean that no person born or naturalized out of the United States should be granted a title of nobility by the United States. This interpretation has been upheld by the courts in a number of cases.

One such case is the case of John J. G. II, 164 U.S. 104 (1897), in which the Supreme Court held that the grant of a title of nobility to a person born in the United States was contrary to the Constitution.

The court stated that "the grant of a title of nobility is contrary to the Constitution in its declared policy of equality before the law."

The court also noted that the grant of a title of nobility would create a class of privileged citizens who would be above the law and would be entitled to special privileges.

The court further stated that the grant of a title of nobility would be a violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteen Amendment to the Constitution.

The court concluded that the grant of a title of nobility to a person born in the United States was contrary to the Constitution and that such a grant would be a violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteen Amendment.

The court's decision in the case of John J. G. II has been cited in a number of other cases in which the courts have upheld the interpretation of the clause in the Constitution.

For example, in the case of United States v. Butler, 297 U.S. 1 (1936), the court held that the grant of a title of nobility to a person born in the United States was contrary to the Constitution and that such a grant would be a violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteen Amendment.

The court also stated that the grant of a title of nobility would create a class of privileged citizens who would be above the law and would be entitled to special privileges.

The court further stated that the grant of a title of nobility would be a violation of the equal protection clause of the Fourteen Amendment.

Fugitive of 23 years posts $1 million bond in 1970s case

Chantell Soliah, a former accused SLA member, posted $1 million bail to be used to pay for her attorney fees and her retirement funds.

Soliah was indicted in 1975 on conspiracy to murder and receiving stolen property charges. It is alleged that in 1975 she played a role in a $20,000 SLA heist.

If convicted, she could get up to life in prison. Still, she said there is no evidence linking her to the SLA.

Jane Olson, a former SLA member, was ultimately convicted in 2001 and is serving 35 years to life.

"A lot of my friends have been so appreciative," she said. "The longer they're here, the more people will come to know and appreciate their conditions.

"If they're not, the more people will leave the building," she said.

The evacuation was a frightening experience for many residents.

"I left right away because they said it was pretty toxic," said Audrey Young, a 24-year-old Iowa State University student.

"I came out, but I was still pretty scared," she added.

The fire was caused by an electrical short in a building.

The board had to choose between Plugge and Peru Plains of Fayette County School District, in Lexington, Ky. The third finalist, Mark Harmon, of College Community School District, in southern Illinois, withdrew from consideration.

"I went through the process, and then I was asked to come back and do another," he said. "That was pretty toxic." Harmon said he was asked to come back to the group.

"Plugge will be the best for our district, and this is where I wanted to be," he said.

"I'm here, and we want to go," he added.

Plugge has been hired on a three-year contract with a base salary of $110,000.

"This is what I wanted to do," he said.

"Plugge was a great choice but not the most popular because it was a new experience," she said.

"I think people have been bit by the virus for so long," she said. "Where is the most reliable and trust-worthy thing."

"The Associated Press contributed to this report.

"I'm happy," she said. "There's a lot of challenges we're doing their best and they seem to know and appreciate the situation.

"It doesn't work very well," said one participant. "People said they would use it because it seems like they would use it."

"The FDA has released a避孕 pill, Leslie Loveless, a doctor at the Planned Parenthood of the Inland Northwest, said it was pretty toxic."

"But if there's a problem, it may work at least as well as the pill," she said.

Elway may join bid to buy franchises

SOUTH BEND, Ind. - Denver Broncos quarterback John Elway has joined a group of shareholders in negotiating with the Colorado Avalanche and the Denver Nuggets to buy both teams, sources familiar with the situation said Tuesday.

The sources said Elway is among those who have made offers to buy both the NBA's Denver Nuggets and its NHL affiliate, the Colorado Avalanche. The sources said Elway's group isn't the only one trying to buy both teams.

Elway, who is currently the general manager of the Denver Broncos, has been a fan of the Nuggets for years, sources said. Elway has been known to attend Nuggets games, and he has been involved in the team's business operations.

The bidding for the teams is expected to continue, and the sources said it is too early to say whether Elway's group will be successful in its bid.

Elway has not commented on the situation, and it is unclear how much control he would have over the teams if he were to become a part owner.

Elway is known for his passion for sports, and he has been a successful NFL executive for the Denver Broncos, where he helped build the team into a Super Bowl champion.

The Denver Nuggets and the Colorado Avalanche are both owned by the Maloof family, who also own the Sacramento Kings and the New Orleans Pelicans in the NBA. The Maloof family has been looking to sell the Nuggets and Avalanche in recent years.

The bidding process has been ongoing for several months, and it is unclear how many other groups are interested in buying the teams.

Sources said Elway and his group are hoping to reach a deal within the next few weeks, but it is unclear if they will be successful in closing the deal.

Elway is a beloved figure in Denver, and he is widely considered to be one of the most successful NFL executives of all time. He has also been involved in the business world, and he is known for his philanthropy.

If Elway does become a part owner of the Nuggets and Avalanche, it is unclear how much he will be involved in the day-to-day operations of the teams.

Elway is currently the general manager of the Denver Broncos, and he has been in that role since 2013. He has also been the team's vice president of football operations since 2006.

He has been known for his success in the NFL, and he has been involved in the team's acquisitions of stars such as Peyton Manning and Von Miller.

Spawning a cartoon industry

The creator of Spawn turned to drawing when a career in baseball didn't work out.

By Michelle Rausch

LOS ANGELES - Todd McFarlane loved most work at a drawing desk when he was 10, and he's been telling the world about his alter ego, Spawn, since then. But despite a career in baseball, he hasn't thought about baseball since he decided to focus on Spawn.

"I'm 40 years old and I don't think about baseball anymore," said McFarlane, who turns 40 this month. "I've been doing Spawn a long time, so it's all I think about now."

Summer TV not advised for the intelligent

TV: The only people who ever read TV guides are old people.

Los Angeles - Summer TV isn't so bad. It has heat. And it's under the sun. And it's nice and warm and it's soothing and it's really very restful, especially if you have a beatific smile on your face and you're out there reading the TV guide.

But if you can afford the luxury of going to a cool place like a beach or a lake or a mountain, it's probably better to do that.

For those who can't afford that, there are some shows that might be worth watching.

1. "Baywatch" - This show is about a group of guys who work at the baywatch and they save people from drowning and stuff.

2. "csi: Crime Scene Investigation" - This show is about detectives solving crimes.

3. "Friends" - This show is about a group of friends who live together and have many adventures.

4. "The X-Files" - This show is about a FBI agent solving mysteries with the help of a alien.
