Iowa football fans also celebrate the Huskies’ community was yesterday before the Hawks take the field at the University of Northern Iowa.

Iowa City, Iowa — On Tuesday, a new football schedule was released for the upcoming season. The schedule includes games against UNI, Iowa State, and Purdue. The Huskies will open their season against UNI on August 31st.

The schedule is expected to provide ample opportunities for the team to improve their overall performance.

In addition to their conference games, the Huskies will also play several non-conference opponents. These include Big Ten teams such as Ohio State and Michigan State, as well as Power Five schools like Georgia and Florida State.

The Huskies’ 2023 season will feature a total of 12 games, including six home contests and six away games. The team will look to build on last year’s success, where they finished the season with a record of 8-4 and secured a bowl victory.

Despite facing tough opponents, the Huskies aim to continue their winning streak and establish themselves as a top contender in the conference.

In closing, the schedule provides an exciting opportunity for fans to support their team throughout the season. With improvements in facilities and ongoing development, the Huskies are poised to make a significant impact on the football landscape.

Roof collapse injures 4

A worker talks on his cell phone and surveys the damage done when the roof of an old building in Coventry Construction was working on an order.

The cause is not yet known for an accident in Japan.

By Steve Schwendka

Coralville resident Troy Swanson was in his backyard Thursday when a large portion of the roof collapsed. Swanson, 36, said he was on the roof working on a second-story addition to his home.

The collapse occurred at around 4 p.m., causing Swanson and his family to evacuate the house. Swanson said he was at the job site and heard a loud noise, which caused the roof to collapse.

In the aftermath, Swanson said he and his family were uninjured, but the roof damage was extensive.

The collapse is currently under investigation by the local fire department and building officials.

Weakened Floyd hits Northeast

Downgraded to a storm, Floyd dashes along the coast, causing schools and causing floods.

By Frank Elkins

Northeast, N.Y. — Citing strong winds and record temperatures, the National Hurricane Center downgraded Floyd from hurricane to tropical storm status.

Floyd, which made landfall near Cape Fear, N.C., now poses a threat to the Northeast, where it is expected to bring heavy rain and high winds. The storm is expected to move inland and continue its path northward.

The National Hurricane Center has issued a tropical storm watch for parts of New York, Connecticut, and Rhode Island. Residents in these areas are urged to prepare for the storm and to monitor updates from local authorities.

His Airness comes down to earth

Cleveland (AP) — Michael Jordan was the subject of criticism on the basketball court. But for the first time in his career, he became the object of scrutiny during a press conference before leaving town Wednesday at the Quicken Loans Arena.

A native Chicagoan — Jordan was born in Chicago — was pelted with questions before a news conference on how he and his teammates had lost to the Los Angeles Lakers in the NBA Western Conference finals. Jordan was just the latest player to enter another professional sport.

He was asked to talk about not only his play but also the possibility of playing in a professional baseball league. Jordan has expressed his interest in playing in a professional baseball league before.

"I pretty sure that out of the box, but I just don't want to," Jordan said. "I think I have a future in baseball." Jordan said that he wants to be in the baseball league "the best way possible." Gates donates $1 billion for minorities

The Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation makes its largest single donation yet.

In accordance with

SEATTLE — Microsoft Chairman Bill Gates pledged Thursday to give a $1 billion scholarship fund for minority students, saying he wants to change the face of American leadership — including that of the military.

The "Gates Millennium Scholars Program," supported by the world's richest man — a Harvard dropout — will provide 10,000 scholarships a year for 20 years to help American and Canadian Indian students.

"This money is in an incredible time period. The advances in technology are really quite breathtaking," Gates said at a news conference. "It's everywhere getting a chance to benefit from this."

Indonesia pledges East Timor withdrawal

The military commander promises to remove his troops from the U.N. base. By James P_three Associated Press

BILL Indriod — Indonesia's military commander in East Timor promised Thursday to withdraw his troops from the international peacekeepers next week, ending a long, bitter occupation and making way for a multinational peacemaking force.

A company of 125 British Army Gurkhas, sporting green berets and with rifles at the ready, began to march Thursday in part of that force, as did some 250 U.S. military personnel. In Washington, President Clinton ordered 3,000 U.S. military personnel to take part in the force to provide logistical support.

"I have decided to contribute to the force in a limited but sustained way including communications and logistical aid, intelligence, surveillance of personnel and material and medical support," said Gen. Kiki Syabrantri, the British army commander in East Timor.

The Indonesian promise continues the momentum for the pro-Indonesian militias to start withdrawing their armed forces from the United Nations' base in Dili, the East Timorese capital.

Separation of fees from tuition no more than a publicity stunt

The proposal to separate fees from tuition at the University of Iowa is not a new idea. It has been proposed before, and it is unlikely to pass this time. The main reason is that it would be financially irresponsible for the university to do so.

The separation of fees from tuition would make it more difficult for the university to keep track of its financial obligations. It would also make it more difficult for the university to collect fees from students who do not pay their tuition on time. Additionally, it would make it more difficult for the university to manage its budget, which is already strained.

In conclusion, the separation of fees from tuition would be a bad idea for the University of Iowa. It would be financially irresponsible, and it would make it more difficult for the university to manage its budget.

Hay Fever to draw laughs, not sneezes

The Noel Coward comedy will prove to audiences that it's not allergy season as it opens in Iowa City. By Lisa Johnson

The Daily Iowan

When the curtain rises on the preview performance of "Hay Fever," there's a chance that some audience members will sneeze, but that's all right. The audience can sneeze all it wants as long as it's not allergic to laughter.

C. "Hay Fever," which revolves around the antics of an upper class family, will be presented 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the Blinn Family's country home, where the sneezing is often "adorable," according to Jessica Bergman, actor Matt Faldus, and Lindsay Hart, said.

The mixture of fancy and funny is perfect together," Lindy said.

The premise for "Hay Fever," arranged as a three-quarter round, with the audience sitting on three different sides around the stage. ThisFILESPACEAMPlifying file space allows for intimate seating, Fad dus said, because the audience members are as close as they can be.

There were more than a decade after writer John Steinbeck's death that "Hay Fever" was the New York City's Dreamwell Theater, plays the part of son Simon Bliss, where the scenery included snow-covered peaks. "Despite the show's intimate feeling," Fad dus said, because the audience members are as close as they can be.

Police can’t explain why a man killed seven people in a Fort Worth church.

By Stefan L. Kuusonen

Fort Worth, Texas – Police picked through Larry Gene Ashbrook’s trash and burned home and old journals Thursday, finding nothing to explain why the 47-year-old Ashbrook killed himself.

Jean Marie M. Langton, a 16-year-old Iowan from Muscatine, a 22-year-old Iowan from Tyler, Texas, and a 51-year-old Iowa from Cedar Rapids, were fined last week for urinating at the intersection of Broadway Avenue and Van Buren Street, pushed their vehicle into motion while drunk and drove with an expired license.

With possession of a firearm, Ashbrook entered the Wedgwood Church.

CUBS CAPTURE WIN, SOSA STAYS AT 59

The Chicago Cubs won their second game this weekend by defeating the Reds 7-6 in Cincinnati.

CINCINNATI—Sosa gets something nearly as elusive as his 60th home run—a Chicago Cubs win.

Sosa’s 55th home run against the Cincinnati Reds Saturday gave the Cubs a win in their first game in which he hit a home run since July 23.

"They’re just making the pitchers work a lot longer," Sosa said.

"Yeah, he’s been doing that," Cubs manager Jim Riggleman said.

"It doesn’t work away from challenges," Sosa said.

"It’s still a challenge for you," Riggleman said.

"I don’t walk away from challenges."

Iowa State will battle former Rams coach and absent Saturday.

By Chuck Scherer

AMER, Iowa — It is for the 18th time Iowa State will play a Big 12 coach in the Big 12 this season. So far, the Hawkeyes have lost all 17 matchups.

Iowa State will play at Oklahoma Saturday. Oklahoma coach Bob Stoops is 6-0 against the Hawkeyes during his time at Oklahoma State.

"I will tell the Magnate this weekend, we are 0-2," Iowa State head coach Paul Rhoads said. "We will play Oklahoma and we will win on Saturday and beat them up."

UNLV officials expect a crowd of more than 40,000. Iowa State will play half its games at the Rose Bowl this year. A win against UNLV would keep the Hawkeyes' home schedule in check.

Rhoads said, "I will tell the Magnate this weekend, we are 0-2. This is a difficult week. We have a lot of fans in the stands this week. This is a very difficult week.

The Iowa State defense is looking for a win against UNLV, which is struggling. The Hawkeyes have lost their last three games by a combined score of 12, 10, 8.

"We have to get the crowd involved," Rhoads said. "We need to get the fans involved."

City, county to seek extension in bid to A's deal

AMES, Iowa — Ames and Story County are working with the A's to keep the team in the city.

"We are not giving up," Iowa State Athletics Director Gary Barta said. "We will get the right deal and get the team."

AMES, Iowa (AP) - Iowa State's Danny Van Hofwegen is ready for his final season of eligibility.

"I've been looking forward to this for a long time," he said.

Van Hofwegen has played in 111 games during his previous four seasons. Now, he'll get to play in one last home game when the Cyclones visit the Beavers this Saturday.

Endicott, N.Y. - Hurricane Gilbert blew a 26-3 second half lead out of his B.C. Open on Thursday when the Storm got out of the first start.

It was a strange season for the Storm, who won't be seen on a court until they open the season.

After a brief play late in the half, the Storm jumped out of the way of the Storm and the wind picked up.

"It was brief and it was wet," said Tom Lehman, who planned to use the B.C. Open as a final prep for the Ryder Cup.

The Storm was pretty wet. The second or third half the Storms were full of water and the greens were wetting out.

"We just wanted to do our best," said Lehman. "That's what we wanted in the Storm."

After a brief delay and a delay, the Storms got out of the way of the Storm and the wind picked up.

The Storms were more than enough for American's play and the Storms got put out even before the Storms locked.

"That's what we were seeing," said Lehman. "We were a little scored out of the Storms."

Weather permitting, play will resume at 1:30 p.m. Friday with the tournament still at 72 holes.

"We're going to be in the Storm," said Lehman. "We're going to be in the Storm."

Iowa City, Iowa - The Hawkeyes played a tight game against the Nebraska Cornhuskers, but ultimately lost 63-58.

Iowa Hawkeye senior forward Chris Street was named the tournament’s MVP.

Street finished the game with 17 points and 10 rebounds.

"I'm excited to see what this new team can do in the future," Street said.

The Hawkeyes return to action next week when they host the University of Illinois in the second round of the Big Ten tournament.

Despite putting efforts in his sport, Daly's passion for golf began to fade when he realized he really believed he could only do well enough to reach the next level of competition.

Daly, once famous for his driving power and aggressive style, had to face the realization that his skills were no longer enough to sustain him in the world of golf.

"That will be the end of Daly’s saga," Daly said in a statement released by the PGA Tour.

Regardless of the outcome of Saturday’s game, Nebraska will likely find itself playing a role in the Big Ten tournament.

The Cornhuskers have already qualified for the tournament, and a win over Iowa could help them improve their seeding.

The Hawkeyes have struggled to find consistency this season, but a win over the Huskers could be a turning point for the team.

A Word From the Editor

Play the dealt hand

Mike Kelly

In an era where instant gratification runs rampant, buck the trend and keep faith in Kirk Ferentz and the Iowa program, even though this season probably won't be one that ends in Pasadena, or Boise for that matter.

"You got to play the hand you're dealt. You are not going to get the best one of the time."

While Lane's quote seems simplistic, it is an altruism that is applicable in any instance where things are not as good as they could be.

Most people have encountered situations, either at work, or in another type of organization where most things are messed up. In those situations, it is nearly impossible to take your program, whatever it is, from A to Z right away. A ball program is no different.

In an era where instant gratification runs rampant, buck the trend and keep faith in Kirk Ferentz and the Iowa program, even though this season probably won't be one that ends in Pasadena, or Boise for that matter.

So even if Northern Illinois comes into Iowa City and wins their first game in four years, don't be harsh on your conversations about Iowa football at the bar on Saturday night, or even on Monday.

Even though a loss would be one of the most bitter pills to go down the Hawkeyes' collective throat since the loss of the future is not now.

On Saturdays, he plays a game in front of 70,000 fans but during the week, Matt Bowen is just a normal college student— with one large extra-curricular commitment.

By Mike Kelly
The Daily Iowan

The Mooning Bowen begins his Wednesday with a bowl of cereal and a bagel at 6:30 a.m. before heading to the team's training complex for an early morning weight-lifting session.

"Watching up that early is hard sometimes because practice was so intense the day before," Bowen said. "Right now, I want to win so badly that I will do anything. Doing all these things will pay off on Saturdays." After stopping by defensive coordinator Norm Parker's office to get some game film he has to study for that day, Bowen heads to his 8:30 a.m. nonfiction writing class— a personal favorite because he shares it with teammates Doug Miller and Kristoph Traph.

"My nonfiction writing class is great because all I do is sit there and laugh," Bowen said.

"Doug (Miller) is so funny. He has loosened up a lot since he got married." Bowen's academic load is comprised mostly of writing classes. While his writing inspiration can sometimes be traced directly back to football, Bowen does not talk about the subject when he is in class.

He also writes about Slattery's inadequacies with females and murder mystery stories set in Italian neighborhoods, instead of talking about his athletic endeavors.

"I keep a low profile in my classes," Bowen said. "I never really talk about football because it would make me stand out. When I am in the classroom, I don't want to stand out."

He says the way he is treated by other students in his classes and around campus is a testament to how solid of an environment Iowa is for a student-athlete. Bowen said he could not recall one instance where another student criticized his team or his play in public.

"I feel like I am just another student, doing things like going to dinner, that he is just a normal college student, doing things like going to dinner, that he is just a normal college student," Bowen said. "I never really talk about football because it would make me stand out."

A Short Break Before Practice

After going to Bruegger's Bagels and ordering his mainstay, a Santa Fe Turkey bagel, Bowen heads back to his apartment to study some game film, and if he's lucky, catch the end of the Dating Game spin-off show Change of Heart.

With the new digital cable system that Bowen along with roommates Joe Slattery and Bart Palmer installed at their apartment, being student-athletes doesn't inhibit their watching of the world of television.

"Watching 'cable is one of the diversions that make the athletes seem eminently more like students."

The Practice

Even though official practice does not begin until 4 p.m., Bowen usually starts the football aspect of his day two hours before to get taped up, get pads adjusted, and get dressed for practice. More importantly for Bowen, it is a chance to hang out with his friends.

"The time before practice is automatically a good time," Bowen said. "We just sit there before practice, play pool and have fun of each other."

The individual lockers are arranged numerically, so Bowen sits in a row with some of the team's characters like Randy Reiners, Bashir Yamin, and Miller.

After watching more film with position coaches, the team straps on the cleats and pads and goes through practice. Even though the practice is nearly two hours long, Bowen said the practices fly by.

"Practice goes by fast because we are always on the go," Bowen said. "It does not drag at all."

The Best Time of the Day

In his last year of collegiate football, it is the little things, like going to dinner, that Bowen said he is going to miss when his Iowan days are over.

"Dinner is my favorite time of the day," Bowen said. "I get emotional during the season because this is my last year. Sometimes when I look at the younger guys and wish I was the age again."

Bowen and some of the other upperclassmen have established a mock ruling system at one of the dinner tables.

Ed Saidat is the president and Bowen serves as the vice-president. Players who wish to sit at the leaders' table must be recommended to him.

"Saidat is always Slattery on double duty," Bowen said. "He even goes as far as off of the table."

Slattery refutes it made against him by official table governor that Saidat is tyrannical leader with power unjustly.

"Ed declared his deat," Slattery said as cool as he think dominate Ed."

Keeping Kinnick playable

The men responsible for the groundskeeping at Kinnick said the grass was at regulation height against Nebraska.

By Molly Thomas
The Daily Iowan

Every other Saturday during the football season, over 70,000 Iowa fans crowd into Kinnick Stadium to show their spirit. When the game ends and the crowd disappears, a few people remain to maintain the Hawkeye playing field.

Maintenance of the Iowa football field includes mowing six days a week, fertilizing it on a weekly basis, and applying plant protectors or pesticides as needed.

Ted Thorn, supervisor of turf management at Kinnick, said his workers usually don’t have any problems with maintenance.

“They usually try to stay far enough ahead of things that the grass is preventative instead of curative,” Thorn said. “The inherent nature of football and the weather not being cooperative are really the only problems we have.”

After the season opener September 4, Nebraska complained of the grass being too long on the Iowa playing field. The Cornhuskers claimed that the only problems we have.

According to Thorn, the length of the grass is still at the length that former Iowa coach Hayden Fry requested it to be, which is 1 3/4 inches long.

“The average length in the Big Ten is about 1 1/2 inches, so we are close to the average,” Thorn said. "Coach (Kirk) Ferentz hasn’t asked for a change in the length, so until he does it will remain the same.”

According to Thorn, sports turf management at Kinnick is Larry Vito’s turf manager task. Vito’s turf manager is responsible for maintaining the grass to a certain standard. For example, he could be recommended to Bowen or Saidat.

The ruling pair does not tolerate any sort of tomfoolery at their dinner table, though. Just ask Slattery.

“Saidat is always putting Slattery on ‘double secret probation,’” Bowen said. “We have even gone as far as to kick him off of the table.”

Slattery refutes the charges made against him by the unofficial table government. He accuses Saidat of being a tyrannical leader who came to power unjustly.

“Ed declared himself president,” Slattery said. “He is not as cool as he thinks he is. I’ll dominate Ed.”

Good Night

In his five years at Iowa, Bowen has broken away from the traditional college life. His days are vastly more structured than most. He does not have the opportunity to do the spontaneous, like going to Vito’s on a Tuesday night or attending a guest speaker in one of his classes.

In return, Bowen has hundreds of the numerous accolades and attention that go along with being a college football player, as well as doing what he loves to do—play football with his friends.

But aside from the attention and pressure that goes along with being an athlete, Bowen enjoys being a student-athlete.

“Dinner is my favorite time of the day,” Bowen said. “I get emotional during the season because this is my last year. When his Iowa days are over, I will remember about being a student-athlete.

Two years ago, Iowa's A.J. Blazek took the long road from high school to the Hawkeyes.

By Greg Wallace
The Daily Iowan

It would be safe to say that A.J. Blazek wasn't at the top of many major colleges' recruiting lists coming out of high school in Wichita, Kan. He wanted to play offensive line in college, but Blazek was 1 foot 11 inches tall, and weighed only 220 pounds. This made him far too small for any Division I school's considerations.

This didn't stop A.J., though. His desire to continue his football career led him to Butler County Community College, a top junior college program.

"Most people go (to junior college) because of grades," Blazek said. "I went because of size. I was trying to gamble and hope I'd get bigger. I grew about two inches, and put on a lot of good weight, and got a lot faster and stronger down there."

Two years, two inches, and 56 pounds later, Blazek is starting at center for the Iowa football team. And he couldn't feel any better about it.

"I'm really looking forward to it," Blazek said. "The Big Ten is the best offensive line conference in the nation."

Blazek wasted no time making an impact on the Iowa offensive line. He was listed as a second-string center following spring ball, and became the starter when Chad Deal went to right guard.

He is only 276 pounds, on the small side for an offensive lineman. Blazek's at 5'10" tall, and he's only 220 pounds. This doesn't bother Blazek, however. He's always been a bit on the small side for an offensive lineman.

When his parents were expecting a bundle of joy back in 1978, they were planning on having a girl. They'd even picked out the name: Erin. Come November 5, they were surprised. Their girl, their "Erin," was a boy.

"It doesn't bother me," said Blazek. "I don't think of it that way."

This past spring, Blazek was working at right guard. He was trying to gamble on playing defensive tackle. Whatever the future holds for Blazek, his parents'Erin" name. Which became A.J., the way it's been ever since. Neither his moniker nor his size really matter to A.J.

Blazek isn't the only player on the Iowa football team looking to take the big next step this fall. The Hawkeyes have been through a lot of changes, and Blazek's decision to play football at Iowa is one of them.

"It wasn't visited," Blazek said.

It would be safe to say that A.J. Blazek wasn’t at the top of many major colleges’ recruiting lists coming out of high school in Wichita, Ks. He wanted to play offensive line in college, but Blazek was 6 feet 11 inches tall, and weighed only 220 pounds. This made him far too small for any Division I school’s consideration. This didn’t stop A.J., though. His desire to continue his football career led him to Butler County Community College, a top junior college program.

Most people go (to junior colleges) because of grades,” Blazek said. “I went because of me. I was trying to gamble and hope I’d get bigger. I grew about two inches, and put on a bit of good weight, and got a little faster and stronger down here.”

Two years, two inches, and 26 pounds later, Blazek is starting at center for the Iowa football team. And he couldn’t feel any better about it.

“I’m really looking forward to it,” Blazek said. “The Big Ten is the best offensive line conference in the nation.”

Blazek wasted no time making an impact on the Iowa offensive line. He was listed as a defensive string center following spring ball, and became the starter when Chad Deal moved to right guard.

He is only 276 pounds, on the small side for an offensive lineman going up against 300-pound tackles and guards. It doesn’t bother Blazek, however. “It’s always been a bit unexpected when my parents were up there a bundle of joy back in 1978, they were planning on having a girl. They’d even picked out the name. Erin. Jim November 5, they were surprised. Their girl, their ‘Erin’, was a boy. ‘Erin’ became Arin, Blazek’s given name. When he was a kid, the way it’s been ever since. Neither his moniker nor his birth really matter to A.J.

“It doesn’t bother me,” said Blazek of his size difference. “A lot of the defensive nose tackles are a little bit heavier, but I like going against guys who are a lot taller. I can get under them a lot easier.”

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz praised Blazek’s attitude.

“He’s working hard and he has a great attitude,” Ferentz said. “He improved from week one to week two, and that’s something we’re looking for.”

Division I was a big step up in both atmosphere and competition for Blazek. Last November, Butler County won the junior college national championship, beating Ricks College in Idaho’s Real Dairy Bowl.

“There’s not a BCS (Bowling Championship Series) like there is for Division I,” Blazek said. “It wasn’t even televised.”

Blazek isn’t the most heralded player on the team. Iowa’s first-string right tackle, for instance, is iPad Collins. But Blazek has the nerve to steal Iowa’s Daily Iowan’s Gridiron Grid needed to know where to continue the line. He revealed the plan. Blazek didn’t get recruited by Big Ten schools, or Mississippi State, and Arkansas had also shown interest. One week after visiting Northern Iowa, Blazek came to Iowa City for his visit. He was sold immediately.

Junior center A.J. Blazek took the long road from high school to the Hawkeyes.

Iowa center A.J. Blazek (52) blocks for Iowa running back Robbie Crockett (15) during Iowa’s 42-7 loss to Nebraska on September 4.

“I was here Coach Ferentz’s first weekend here, and I loved it,” Blazek said. “I loved it from the get-go. I talked to the coaches and said I liked what I saw, and said, let’s get this over with, so I can come to school.”

It hasn’t been an easy season for Blazek and the rest of the offensive line. Injuries and transfers have left the line decimated and inexperienced.

The line has struggled, and Iowa’s offense along with it.

In Iowa’s first game against Nebraska, the five linemen had a combined five games of starting experience.

Several linemen, including Blazek, have pinned the blame for Iowa’s struggles on their shoulders. He rates the unit’s performance as only a five on a scale of one to ten.

“The first game, we were young, and we learned a lot, and we did a lot better the second game,” Blazek said. “But we’re still sub-par, to where we want to be.”

The team that sticks together plays well together. The offensive line is trying to take that adage to heart. They are a tight-knit group, on and off the practice field.

They may not have been the most successful unit on the team, but it’s not for lack of effort, according to Blazek.

“We’ve always been here,” Blazek said. “We’ve always some of the first guys around, and we’re the last guys off of the field every night. We have a lot of camaraderie.”

For Iowa’s No. 1 Football Coach

By Mike Kelly
The Daily Iowan

Growing up in Michigan, defensive coordinator Norm Parker has been involved with Big Ten football all his life.

After spending most of his career as a head coach, Ken O’Keefe is switching gears at Iowa.

Offensive coordinator

By Jeremy Schmilkter
The Daily Iowan

After a four year stint at Vanderbilt University, Parker is heading back to his roots.

Parker has always had aspirations of coaching in the Big Ten. After stints at other Big Ten Universities such as Illinois, Minnesota and Michigan State, his dream is coming true for the fourth time.

“Growing up outside of Detroit, I always wanted to be a coach in the Big Ten,” Parker said.

So when Kirk Ferentz asked him to be his defensive coordinator, it was nearly impossible to say no.

“As a coach, playing against Iowa, I was always a little envious,” said Parker. “This is a palace.”

This season marks Parker’s 30th year in coaching — 21 of which have been in Ten. After leaving the B1G Conference, he is to be back in the Big Ten, leading the Hawkeyes to incredible success.

Parker opportunity at Iowa State, Kirk’s team and is going to work with him.

Opposing Big Ten, he could not imagine all the fun it brings.

So far this year Parker has given up an ave. rushing yards per game for the Hawkeyes, a remarkable feat.

Despite the big this season, Ferentz has him in his team’s coaching staff.

“Defense is like Parker can’t imagine the fun the Hawkeyes have to offer. If you’re a coach in the Big Ten, you have to like football, you have to believe in your team, but if not, the excitement is something’s not right,” Parker said.

When asked, Parker philosophically, his team.

“We are a football team. We have to improve, but we have to improve in every aspect,” said Parker.

Parker got his job.

For Iowa’s Norm Parker, Big Ten a perfect fit

By Jeremy Schultke
The Daily Iowan

After a four-year stint at Vanderbilt University, Norm Parker is heading back to his roots. Parker has always had aspirations of coaching in the Big Ten. After stints at other Big Ten institutions such as Illinois, Minnesota, and Michigan State, his dream is finally coming true for the fourth time. “Growing up outside of Detroit, I always wanted to be a coach in the Big Ten,” Parker said.

So when Kirk Verenz asked him to be his defensive coordinator, it was nearly impossible to say no. “As a coach, playing against Iowa, I was always a little envious,” said Parker. “This is a great opportunity that someone this season marks Parker’s 39th year in coaching — 21 of which have been in the Big Ten. After leaving Vanderbilt and the Southeastern Conference, he is quite happy to be back in the Midwest.

“It feels good to be back, I’m excited,” Parker said. “The opportunity at Iowa is something else. Kirk’s a good guy and it’s going to be fun real working with him.”

Opening Big Ten offenses might not make his homecoming all that fun, though. So far this year, Iowa has given up an average of 329 rushing yards per game, good last in the NCAA.

Despite the bleak outlook for the Hawkeye defense, Parker remains confident that his team will improve weekly. “Defense is like racing cars,” Parker explained. “After a race, you have to ask yourself if your car went faster. If it did, you know you’re getting better. If not, then you know something’s not right.”

While the emotional roller coaster of his coaching philosophy, his commitment to steady improvement stands out. If you have the ability to get better every week, he said, the wins and losses will take care of themselves.

Some of Parker’s former players praise his work ethic and say he is a stickler for hard work and dedication. “Coach Parker was the type of coach that no matter what good a season you were having or how good a game you played the week before, he would always expect more out of you,” said Vanderbilt linebacker Jamie Winborn.

While at Vanderbilt, he was named SEC defensive coordinator of the year in 1997. Though Parker places much emphasis on football, he values his family more than anything. His son Jeff, who has Down Syndrome, is a football fanatic. His fandom made the transition to the Hawkeye state easy. He said even though Jeff liked Vanderbilt, the football-crazy Hawkeye state has been an even better atmosphere for his son.

“Down at Vanderbilt, he was really into it,” said Parker of his 26-year-old son. “But at Iowa, there’s football signs everywhere. He really loves the atmosphere.”

Parker said that sports, especially football, have had a very positive influence on his son.

“Sports has added a lot to his life, and there’s a lot to get into for the Hawks,” Parker said.

Football has always transcended generations in the Parker family. Thinking back to his past, Norm Parker remembers the first college football game he went to with his father. Even though Parker didn’t know it, it would be a peek into his future.

“The first game I ever went to was Michigan versus Iowa and Iowa won,” Parker said.

Even through Michigan is off the schedule this year, Parker hopes to enjoy many Big Ten victories as Iowa’s defensive coordinator.

O’Keefe has plenty of experience with other peoples’ kids. Prior to coming to Iowa, O’Keefe served as head coach during the season marks Parker’s 39th year in coaching — 21 of which have been in the Big Ten. After leaving Vanderbilt and the Southeastern Conference, he is quite happy to be back in the Midwest. "The opportunity at Iowa is something else. Defensive tackles Jerry Montgomery and Corey Brown are great teammates on the football field, and even better friends off of it.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

Since coming to Iowa, Corey Brown has been like a big brother to Jerry Montgomery. He showed him the ropes in practice, guided him around Iowa City, and even took him dancing on the weekends. "Jerry loved to dance when he got here," Brown said. "I'd take other varsity football players to clubs on the weekends, he'd face and get all sweaty." Montgomery has earned the nickname "Big Punisher," after the famous rapper, for his late-night antics. "He likes to get his dance on," Brown continued. "We started calling him "Big Pun" because he looked like an entertainer." Despite all of their shenanigans, the two have developed a quite a relationship. When Montgomery moved to Iowa City the summer before his freshman year, he lived with Brown until he could move into the dorms. "He's like a brother to me," Montgomery said. "I lived with him when I first moved here and he showed me a lot of things." Brown said his style of leadership has just been a tradition carried through the years. Active linemen have family atmospheres on their unit. "We are like a family," Brown said. "You know, coach always be around to take care of on

Since coming to Iowa, Grey Brown has been like a big brother to Jerry Montgomery.

He showed him the ropes in practice, guided him around Iowa City, and even took him dancing on the weekends.

"Jerry loved to dance when he got here," Brown said.

"We know coaches can't always be around so you have to take care of one another. Part of the responsibility of continuing that family tradition is leading the younger guys by example. It's something that Brown takes pride in doing.

"Jerry came here a long way from home, just like I did," said Brown. "We've got to know each other personally, we hang out a lot on campus. I try to be a good role model." Montgomery is quite thankful of the leadership Brown has provided. He said it's helped him in all aspects of his life.

"Corey's been a real help," Montgomery said. "He's a very spiritual and emotional guy. He's helped me in both football and in everyday life." Their brotherly relationship has paid dividends on the field. Despite Iowa's 0-2 start, the defense has shown signs of excellence and Corey and Jerry are at the heart of it.

The duo have gained praise from both players and coaches. According to coach Kirk Ferentz, the two work together as well on the field as they do off of it.

"It was the first time they have played together," Ferentz said. "They did some good things to build on." Teammate A.J. Blazek, the starting center, said they are two of the best defensive linemen he's ever played against.

Blazek, a junior who transferred from Butler County Community College, is someone who has seen lots of talent at the junior college level. "I've played against a lot of guys that transferred to Division I schools," Blazek said. "These guys are the best I've played against. Going against those guys makes us (the offensive line) a lot better."

Despite their talent, both headed into 1999 relatively inexperienced. Brown, who is a fifth-year senior, has spent most of his playing days backing up the likes of Jared DeVries and Lloyd Bickham. Montgomery, a sophomore, passed last year as a backup as well, but seems to have a bright future ahead of him.

"It was a good experience playing behind those guys (DeVries and Bickham)," Brown said. "Those were guys that played their hearts out on Saturday afternoons." It's too early to see if Montgomery and Brown will live up to the lofty standards that previous defensive linemen have set, but they will certainly do their best to carry the torch on Saturday afternoons.

Brown has served as a friend and mentor for fellow defensive lineman Jerry Montgomery.

Brown By the Book

1999: Has started both games, with 14 tackles. Also has a blocked field goal and forced a fumble.

1997: Played in nine games, recording eight tackles.

1996: Played in all twelve games, had eighteen tackles, including two for a loss and a blocked punt.

High school: Brown was highly decorated, earning SuperPrep and Blue Chip High School All-American honors. Named as one of the top 100 high school players of 1994 in Texas by both the Houston Chronicle and the Dallas Morning News.

He was second-team all-Texas. He had 114 tackles and seven sacks his senior season, for a total of 206 tackles and 25 quarterback sacks.

The Skinny on Jerry

1999: Has started both games, with eleven tackles. One tackle for a loss.

1998: Played in final eight games of the season. He was one of four true freshmen to see action last season.

Had ten tackles.

High school: State player of the year in Nevada in 1997.

Recorded 38 career tackles, including 16 as a senior. He also scored ten touchdowns.

Street and Smith high school All-American two years in a row. Won state titles his first in 1997.

Rush Takes the Reins

- After two games, Kirk Ferentz said a change needed to be made in the offense.

By Mike Kelly

The Daily Iowan

Even though Kirk Ferentz said he was not down on quarterback Kyle McCann, he made the decision to replace sophomore with Randy Benitez, a junior from Peru, Ill.

Jury Report

Ferentz expects offensive line coach Dale Deadlock to miss his third game due to a groin strain.

Deadlock has an MRI done to his shoulder and will not be in the field.

Defensive lineman Cody Money is expected to play Saturday due to a sprained ankle suffered in practice last week.

The god news for Iowa is Stockdale should play after sitting out a sternum in the first game.

Reiners was suspended for the first game against Nebraska.

Ah, the thrill of whipping boy problems this week. They're the ones you expect to come together in October.

PREGAME PICK

When I stood next to the Panaderia in Ames all week and watched a scored Hawkeye team file into their locker room after the loss to Iowa State, I knew this week would be different.

This team cares too much to lose to a team like Northern Illinois. The effort is there, the attitude is there, but the wins aren't there yet.

It all changes this week. Northern Illinois comes to try to own the owner of an 0-2 record and a 3-9 cumulative mark over the past three seasons. They began the season with a loss to 1-AA Western Illinois, and just when it looked like they might break last week against Valparaiso, they blew a 29-3 halftime lead and lost 34-31.

This is the week it should all come together. When the undermanned offensive line opened up holes for Ladell Betts, he looked powerful.
Hayden and the Hawks a perfect recipe for victory

Greg Wallace

Since 10-7, the Iowa offense has been outmanned by the defense. For the most part, the Hawkeye defense has been able to dominate their opponents, and the offense has been unable to produce consistently. The result has been a 3-3 record, with losses to Western Illinois and Illinois, and a win over Iowa State.

This week, though, the Hawkeyes face a different challenge. They are taking on the Northern Illinois Huskies, a team that is expected to be tougher than the one they faced last week. The Huskies have a strong offensive line and a capable quarterback in Jay Bickford.

The Hawkeye defense will have to focus on stopping Bickford and the Huskies' running game. Bickford is a strong runner who can break tackles, and the Huskies have a capable running back in Ladell Betts.

On the other hand, the Hawkeye offense will have to focus on capitalizing on their opportunities. They have the talent to put points on the board, but they have been inconsistent. The team will need to show more firepower if they want to pull off the win.

The game is on Friday night at Kinnick Stadium. Kickoff is set for 8 pm.

Pregame Pick

Wallace predicts that the Hawkeyes will have a tough game against Northern Illinois. He points out that the Huskies have a strong offensive line and a capable quarterback in Jay Bickford. He also notes that the Hawkeye defense will have to focus on stopping Bickford and the Huskies' running game.

Wallace suggests that the Hawkeyes will need to capitalize on their opportunities on offense. He points out that they have the talent to put points on the board, but they have been inconsistent. The team will need to show more firepower if they want to pull off the win.

Wallace predicts that the game will be a close one, with the Hawkeyes just edging out the Huskies. He suggests that fans should expect a hard-fought battle between two evenly matched teams.

Building the future won’t echo the past this season.

By Lisa Colonno
The Daily Iowan

For Northern Illinois, football coach Joe Novak and his football team the past 16 years have been a struggle, especially the last six. The Huskies are 3-32 since 1986 and have not produced a winning season since 1990. But they held the nation’s top Division I-A losing streak, one that ended at 20 in a win over Eastern Michigan.

Bo Novak believes that the team has to change his mind someday.

The season, which was a disappointment, according to Novak, may become the anomaly in team history for the season.

"I am always talking about the future, and the future, and Novak said, "the time is now."" Novak said. "We are not without better team and the best team that we can be nutmeg every Saturday.""

Although the Huskies may not be a higher level of play

Northern Illinois Huskies win snapped a 23-game losing streak and won their last game. The Huskies will present in one game.

Northern Illinois hopes future won't echo the past this season.

By Lisa Colonno
The Daily Iowan

For Northern Illinois University coach Joe Novak, who's football team the past few years have been a struggle, this year is the least.

The Huskies are 3-2 since 1996 and have not produced a winning season since 1990. Novak has held the nation's largest Division I-A losing streak, one that ended at 20-48 with a victory against Kent State.

But Novak believes that "this is the time to change his team's disinterested attitude.

The slogan, which was a big deal in 1998, according to Novak, has become the unofficial motto for the season.

"It was always talking about a future and the future, and I finally said, "the time is now," Novak said. "We are a much better team and there are a lot of people that we can compete with this year.""}

Northern Illinois fans tear down the goalposts following the Huskies' win over Central Michigan, Oct. 17, 1998. The win snapped a 23-game losing streak for NIU.

Northern Illinois' Paul Novak, 90, was named the head football coach at the school in 1996. He was also named the head football coach at Eastern Illinois University in 1997.

Northern Illinois' Paul Novak, 90, was named the head football coach at the school in 1996. He was also named the head football coach at Eastern Illinois University in 1997.

"Our sixth-string quarterback (Craig Harmon) ended up playing our last eight games," Novak said. "Our starter got a shoulder injury, a one player was injured, one had mono and another had an operation. Harmon was a walk-on and we won two games with him."

So far this season these problems have remained a thing of the past. Now, the team is focusing on the Mid-American Conference and how the Huskies will stack up to the rest of the conference's teams.

"Our goals are conference oriented," Novak said. "We look at our pre-conference games as a way to sort things out. We want to win (against Iowa), but it is really to measure our students against students from these conferences."

"Iowa will be an exciting game for our players. A lot of Iowa kids are from around here (DeKalb, Ill.), so a lot of the kids know each other. It will give the players a chance to go to Kinnick Stadium and see how we measure up to a Big Ten team."

The Opponent

This week's Opponent is the Iowa State University Cyclones. The Cyclones are currently ranked #9 in the AP Poll and are coming off a 24-17 win over the Central Michigan Chippewas.

The Cyclones have a solid offense, led by quarterback Sam Richardson, who has thrown for over 2,000 yards and 19 touchdowns so far this season. The defense, under the guidance of head coach Matt Campbell, has allowed just 18.6 points per game.

The Big Ten Conference has always been known for its tough competition, and the Cyclones are no exception. They have played some tough opponents this season, including the Penn State Nittany Lions and the Northwestern Wildcats. They will be looking to build on their recent success and make a run in the conference.

The Cyclones have won five of their six games so far this season. Their only loss came to the Ohio State Buckeyes, who are currently ranked #1 in the AP Poll.

This week's game will be critical for both teams. The Cyclones are looking to continue their winning streak, while the Huskies are looking to improve their conference record.

Matchups improving as teams prepare for Big Ten play

Michigan at Syracuse
The Wolverines go into the Carrier Dome in a matchup of 2-0 teams. One will leave a loser, and it won't be Michigan, even though the Wolverines are 2-0, but they have squashed two MAC teams and still don't have a true starting quarterback. Michigan doesn't either, but both Tom Brady and Drew Henson would be worthy starters for any Division I team. The Wolverines might have problems with the Carrier Dome noise, but they are far more talented than the Orangeemen.

Michigan State at Notre Dame
The natives are not happy at Notre Dame. The Irish have lost two close games to Big Ten teams, and they don't want to make it three. Michigan State is 2-0 after beating up Eastern Michigan last week. The Irish are no Eastern Michigan. The Irish won't have any problems with fourth-quarter clock management this week, because the game will be in their back pockets by then.

Notre Dame 28, Michigan State 12
Kentucky at Indiana
The Wildcats and Hoosiers will battle for the Bourbon Barrel, one of the more unusual-sounding trophies in college football. What do they do with this thing? Will Antwan Varner go fire up the still and make some 'shine? Sometimes the South really confounds me. Kentucky actually struggled with I-AA UConn last week. These aren't Tim Couch's 'Cats. Randle El will run all over their defense, making this a rout.

Indiana 43, Kentucky 9
Illinois at Louisville
The Illini are 2-0, but that shouldn't last for long. They travel to similarly unblemished Louisville. Chris Redman is one of the better quarterbacks in college football, and he'll prove it against the Illinois secondary. Ron Turner is turning things around, but it's a slow process.

Louisville 34, Illinois 3
Ohio State at Michigan State
If they try to put this turkey in... Northern Iowa? That's pathetic. The Panthers are a good I-AA team, but it doesn't say much for the Bobcats. John Cooper will get anybody in the game who wants playing time. I'm all for in-state rivalries, but this is ridiculous.

Ohio State 55, Ohio 3
Northwestern at Duke
The battle of universities filled with my future bosses goes down in Durham. Randy Walker got his first win last week against a decent TCU team. I won't be betting against him this week. Northwestern goes 2-1, and students pitch the first tent outside of Cameron to get their basketball tickets.

Northwestern 14, Duke 10
Illinois State at Minnesota
Glen Mason decides to take another "tough" non-conference game. Come on, guys. I am so tired of seeing major conference teams pound on lower-division schools. The Redbirds are fifth in I-AA, but that won't matter much when they go up against Tim Carter and the Gophers. If this is all the stronger Minnesota is going to schedule, ticket holders should demand refunds.

Minnesota 45, Illinois State 3
Central Michigan at Purdue
Drew Brees is really making a believer out of the folks at West Lafayette. This game should do nothing to dispel that notion. Purdue will go 3-0, with ease. If Touchdown Jesus couldn't win at Ross-Ade Stadium, I give little chance to the Chippewas.

Purdue 31, Central Michigan 10
Wisconsin at Cincinnati
The highlight of the Badgers non-conference season is a trip to the Queen City. How sad that is. Ron Dayne and speedy Nick Davis will roll all over the Bearcats. It's too bad that it isn't basketball season; it'd certainly be a much more competitive matchup. The real fun for the Cheesehead fans starts next week, when Michigan visits. Rest up, Ron — you're going to need everything you have.

This week in the Big Ten...
Now the real season starts. For the Iowa women’s soccer team, it’s finally time for the Big Ten season.

"We’ve used our past five games as preparation for Big Ten season," Iowa women’s soccer coach Stephanie Gabbert said. "This is the main part of our season. It is what we train for."

The Hawkeyes are aiming to improve on last year’s 1-7-1 record and ninth place conference finish. Coach Gabbert and her players have high expectations for the 1999 conference campaign.

"We’re looking forward to the Big Ten season. It should be a better year for the Iowa program," senior Jenny Hargis said. "Our biggest goal is to make it to the Big Ten Tournament at the end of the year. We need to be in the top eight out of 11 teams." Senior Julia Meyer said.

Iowa is looking to get back on the winning track following their double-overtime loss to Iowa State this weekend, and it provides motivation for Hawkeyes’ opponents.

"Iowa will face 25 teams in the country when they host No. 12 Wisconsin and former No. 22 Minnesota. Wisconsin will face conference leader Minnesota and them a sixth Iowa lost 3-2 to Badgers and 2-1 last year, defeated either Gabbert’s early in the season where Iowa was able to get back on winning track following their double-overtime loss to Iowa State this weekend, and it provides motivation for Hawkeyes’ opponents.

Hawkeye women's soccer a rising star

The Daily Iowan

In only their third year of competition, the Iowa women's soccer team hopes to make a big impact on the Big Ten conference race.

Iowa's Kate Walse (2) tries to kick past DePaul's Erin Lough in this September 13 game against the Blue Demons. Iowa has two home games this weekend, and admission is free.

Iowa will enter this weekend ranked second in the Big Ten in scoring with 17 goals, but more importantly, with confidence and excitement that hasn't been there in years past.

"The mentality of our whole team has improved. The freshmen aren't afraid," Hyngstrom said.

Three freshmen lead the Hawkeye offensive attack. Last week, Sarah Lynch led Iowa with two goals in the Big Ten last year, and has never defeated either team. Julie Atkinson is tied for first in the Big Ten with five assists. Iowa City native Teasa Price has three goals on five attempts.

Our offense has shown we are ready. We're getting scoring from many players, including those coming off the bench," junior Jenny Sturm, who has netted two goals, said. This year Iowa heads into their Big Ten matches undefeated at home.

"We feel confident," Hyngstrom said. "We're coming gangbusters out of the gate." Iowa will play Wisconsin Friday at 4 p.m. and Minnesota Sunday at 1 p.m. Home games are played at the Hawkeye Recreational Fields in west Iowa City. Admission is free to the public.
