Fate of Englert Theatre still up in air

Public officials say there's still a possibility that the Englert Theatre, 232 Washington St., would wind up in the hands of the city.

"It's a matter of the community deciding to buy it," he said. "The city just does not have the capacity to purchase the theater. We cannot just line out public funds and buy things.

"That situation has improved in the city. We have a little bit of an infrastructure that has been improved in purchasing the theatre, which is currently owned by the Des Moines-based Central States Theatre Group, and turning it into a combination restaurant and theater.

"There's a lot of work that has to be done in the city. We're going to work very hard to do it," she said. "The city just does not have the capacity to purchase the theatre. We cannot just line out public funds and buy things.

The city's proposal of acquiring the Englert Theatre is a part of a referendum that failed last spring. Franklin said the city would have to ask for a new referendum. Franklin said the city did not even cause the referendum once it because there had been no agreement made to sell the theatre.

"We cannot just take out public funds and buy things. And then spend more money. And then spend more money, and then spend more money. And then spend more money, and then spend more money. And then spend more money, and then spend more money. And then spend more money, and then spend more money. And then spend more money. And then spend more money.

L.C. students trash talking for a good cause

Crackdown on travel scams may aid UI students

Increased prices, however, may not make Spring Break trips any easier

UI junior Angie Roger is getting ready to leave Iowa City, along with hundreds of other students leading to Iowa's annual spring break, with mixed feelings about the trip. Roger said she is excited for a week of fun and activities, but also concerned about potential travel scams.

Roger is one of many UI students who will be leaving on March 18 for Spring Break, a time when students often seek out travel deals and experiences. However, with increased prices and potential travel scams, many students are left wondering whether it's worth the cost.

UI Student Travel Service (USTS) offers a variety of travel options for students, including flights, hotels, and package deals. However, with prices increasing, some students may be hesitant to commit to the cost.

UI Student Travel Service manager Mary Lou Hallorin said, "We understand that students are looking for ways to save money, but we also want to ensure that students are safe and have a good experience."

Hallorin added that USTS is working to address potential travel scams by providing students with travel tips and recommendations.

UI Student Travel Service is currently offering a variety of travel deals, including flights to popular destinations such as New York City, Los Angeles, and Orlando. However, with increased prices, some students may be hesitant to commit to the cost.

Father, son undergo rare liver surgery

A Dubuque father and son underwent transplant surgery on Oct. 22 to transplant the liver of a woman, 40, who died in a car accident Oct. 21 in Dubuque County.

The surgery began at 10:46 a.m. and continued through 11:23 p.m. The transplant process lasted 15 hours.

The transplant was performed by Dr. Todd Blake and surgical team members.

The operation was successful, and the father and son are doing well.

The operation involved removing the liver from the woman and then transplanting it into the father's body. The son was also involved in the procedure as a donor.

The team of surgeons worked throughout the night to ensure the success of the surgery.

The father and son are expected to recover fully from the procedure.

The surgery is considered a major milestone in liver transplantation, as it is rare to have successful transplant operations of this nature.

The operation was conducted at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota.

Maryland teen gets 24 years for murder

In an Israeli court judge calls the disemboweling "a shocking act of sadism."

By Jeff Stetser

Tel-Aviv, Israel — Calling the murder and disemboweling of a Maryland teenager "an act of sadistic, cruel and inhuman revenge," a Tel-Aviv judge sentenced him on Tuesday to 24 years in prison.

The teenager, who had never been charged in the United States, pleaded guilty in June to the murder and dismemberment of a 14-year-old boy, who was from Jerusalem.

The boy's body was found in the United States in 1978, and the Israeli teenager was charged with the murder in 1989.

Opposition leader wins in Argentina

The center-left candidate who ascended to the presidency in the presidential race.

By Bill Galbraith

Quartier Latin

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — The first Socialist landslide in presidential elections since 1983 has shifted power in South America, more than a decade after Peronism’s fall from grace.

The center-left candidate, Alberto Fernández, won in the presidential race.

With 98.5% of the vote counted, Fernández had 58% of the vote, according to the National Election Board. His far-right opponent, María Eugenia Vidal, had 39% of the vote.

Fernández’s victory marked the end of the peronist era, which had dominated Argentine politics since the 1940s.

"This is a historic moment," Fernández said. "We have won a historic mandate to build a new Argentina."

Millions of Colombians march for needed peace

The Colombian government and FARC rebels signed a peace deal in 2016, ending a civil war that had raged for over five decades.

The deal was hailed as a significant step towards peace and reconciliation in Colombia.

However, many Colombians remain concerned about the peace process and the future of the country.

"We want peace and justice," said a protester in Bogotá. "We want our country to be free of violence."

The protest was one of the largest in recent memory, with hundreds of thousands of Colombians taking to the streets across the country.

The Iowa-ten year love affair between the two parties has ended. President-elect Alberto Fernández’s victory is a triumph for democracy in South America. The move to the left is a ray of hope for the Latin American region. Fernández has promised to tackle poverty, inequality, and corruption, and to strengthen ties with the international community.

Nelson Almendarez, a former FARC guerrilla, said the victory "is a victory for the people."

"We fought for 50 years for peace and justice," he said. "Today we have won."

The victory has also been hailed as a potential turning point for the region. "This is a historic victory," said former Brazilian President Luiz Inácio Lula da Silva. "It's a victory for the working class."

The victory comes in the midst of a region-wide shift to the left, with many other Latin American countries electing left-wing leaders in recent years.

"This is a historic moment," said Fernández. "We have won a historic mandate to build a new Argentina."

The victory is also a blow to the right-wing bloc that has dominated Argentine politics for decades. This bloc includes the Peronist Party, which has been in power since the 1940s.

"This is a historic defeat," said Peronist Party leader Máximo Kirchner. "It's a victory for the people."
Bradley's poverty proposal not enough

While Republicans are trying to figure out a way to preserve Social Security, they are capturing the votes of the elderly. Bill Bradley is taking on an even greater endeavor—saving the baby boomers' retirement nest egg.

The savings re-our Generation "X" or we'll ever see. The attempt is heart-breaking, but it falls way off the mark.

Last week, Bradley announced that part of his platform would be to save the 15 million children who live in poverty. It is a noble goal, but perhaps unrealistic. The number of children who are poor will grow or, worse, large numbers of children who are poor will stay poor. Besides humanitarian reasons, there are many other long-term reasons that make that hurt the country economically, such as higher crime rates and lower tax revenue.

Low education is a consequence of poverty, not the cause. Poverty is a symptom of a much larger problem. Children are poor because their mothers are poor. Is poverty in America. Is Bradley going to help us. We can begin by teaching these households with children under our care the value of the children? Why not make sure that all children benefit from our programs? Why not aim to improve the lives of women? If the lives of women are improved, is like adding water to a grease fire? It will help.

"Iowa may be the first team in NCAA history to win, or lose, its entire schedule," is the way Mike Kelly described the Hawkeyes' performance in The Daily Iowan.

"This is a great accomplishment," Kelly said. "Iowa has won every game this season, and they have lost every game this season."

Iowa's 6-0 record is the best in the Big Ten, and they have outscored their opponents by a combined score of 208-103. Iowa's defense is ranked third in the conference, allowing just 13.8 points per game.

The Hawkeyes are off to the best start in school history, and they are currently ranked fourth in the nation.

Woods wasn't pretty, but good enough to win
By JIM DUNN, Staff Writer

LARRY DUBMAN FOR THE PTV - Tiger
Wood's 66 at the venerable Fisherman's

Ferenz says Mullen hasn’t passed Reiners — yet

Scott Mullen’s impressive performance gives Kirk Ferentz a tough decision.

By Greg Wallis
The Daily Iowan

Iowa’s offensive coordinator has been an unsung hero to the Hawkeyes in recent weeks.

Mullen began building Iowa to its identity under Ferentz, but in recent games, the quarterback has been just getting started.

Midweek 497 yards and 4 TDs in Iowa’s 56-0 win over Penn State last Saturday. It was Iowa’s first offensive output since a 41-24 loss to Missouri on Sept. 24. Mullen and his teammates have attempted to attack in each game.

Iowa coach Kirk Ferentz and Reiners’ health was improving, and no decision had been made as of Tuesday afternoon to play Reiners ahead of him for the first time.

When asked if he had thought of Reiners’ status for Saturday’s game, Ferentz responded, “We’ll see. We’ll see. We’ll see what happens. I don’t know what a quarterback can do when he’s not there.

Mullen rebuffed to add fuel to the fire.

That’s up to the coaches,” he said. “I’ll do everything I can to be No. 1, but it’s not completely decided.”

Iowa’s two touchdowns in the final half were the first of the season, punctuating the Hawkeye first half effort with 3 points to 17. Ferentz was very pleased with his offensives performance.

“We scored a touchdown, it wasn’t a huge down,” Ferentz said of Iowa’s first score, a 44-yard drive against Laudel Bede’s 29-yard touchdown run with 2:10 left in the half. “We ran out with good tempo. It was something to emphasize.”

Kaper’s favorite:

Kevin Kasper appeared in Iowa’s favorite moment, catching 11 passes for 121 yards. Kasper is the first Iowa receiver to catch more than 100 yards receiving since he accomplished the feat in 2010.

The game on Saturday, Ferentz said. “We’re going to face them and get a feel for what we’re up against.”

Iowa 12, Penn State 10

The Hawkeyes led the Lions 12-0 after the first quarter, and no decision had been made as of Tuesday afternoon to play Reiners ahead of him for the first time.

It’s a good question,” Allen said. “I hate doing this at the dead of night, because we get a little more time.”

Injury report:

Kasper didn’t look quite right to Ferentz, who said he was pleased.

The Hawkeyes talked to the Tribune on a single game in Tuscaloosa, Alabama, and three more games with five matches in total.

"We're really excited for Tuscaloosa. We've just been through a tough week of travel and we have a lot of young players," said Amy Koch, the Tribune's volleyball analyst.

"I think we're really ready for Tuscaloosa. We've been through a lot of tough matches this week and we're looking forward to facing a tougher team."}

Backups get Vikings back on track

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — The backup quarterbacks for the Minnesota Vikings had a chance to show they might be able to fill in for Quarterback Tommy Kramer when he returns from injury. But instead of the expected backup quarterback battle, they had to prove they could do the job on their own.

The Vikings were without their starting quarterback, who was injured in the season opener against the Green Bay Packers. Backup quarterbacks Morten Anderson and Jim Jordan were both effective in their performances.

The Vikings' backup quarterback, Morten Anderson, had a strong performance against the New York Giants. He completed 20 of 31 passes for 297 yards and two touchdowns, and the Vikings won the game 24-10.

Meanwhile, the Miami Dolphins continued their impressive start to the season. Quarterback Dan Marino threw for 246 yards and two touchdowns, as the Dolphins defeated the Cleveland Browns 27-10.

The Dolphins' defense also continued to impress, recording four sacks and two interceptions.

Knee, not ear, new Tyson problem

Dr. Orson Norris claims Mike Tyson's problem with his knee is not related to his boxing career.

"It's not boxing-related," Norris said. "It's a knee problem that he's had for some time."

Tyson has been experiencing problems with his knee for several years, and Norris said the pain is caused by a tear in the ligaments around the knee joint.

The knee problem has been a nagging issue for Tyson, who has had surgery on his knee in the past.

"I'm very concerned about the long-term effects," Norris said. "We need to address this properly."
