There can be too much fun in the sun over Break

Spring Break for some UI students will keep local health personnel busy.

By Kate Thayer

Spring Break excitement in exotic places can turn into future worries when students return home. University of Iowa Health Services are more than usually prepared for typical problems following Spring Break. Tainted renewal, unwanted pregnancy, and sexually transmitted diseases are among the most common problems.

An increased number of students visited the UI Hospital and Clinics dermatology clinic following Spring Break requesting treatment for sunburns, warts or simply to remove newly acquired tattoos. UI dermatology professor, Dr. Patrick Butz said the process involves six to eight laser treatments, repeated every two to six months, depending on the size and color of the tattoo.

"The investment of getting that tattoo removed can end up being very expensive," he said. "People need to think twice before committing to that sort of project." Students may also seek post-break treatments at Student Health Service for each problem.

"We offer services including free and confidential HIV testing for sterile needles," Dr. Butz said. "It certainly is available if needed, but hopefully, evidence is using prophylaxis of all kinds ahead of time."

The Emma Goldman Clinic also increased an number of UI students seeking Spring Break, said Susan Feit, a campus community program specialist.

"We offer testing for sexually transmitted diseases, as well as advice on emergency contraception pill, which can be obtained over the counter for women who have been seen at our clinic," she said. "Hopefully, students are using other forms of birth control as well because this pill is only 75 percent effective."

Many students tend to set out of the ordinary when they go on spring break, said UI sophomore Matt Johnson, who spent his break in Panama City, Fla. this year. "Spring Break is a time when we should remember to be responsible," he said. "Students do things that may be embarrassing, but when they come home, their friends and family love them no matter what."

Regardless of their actions, UI senator Dave McDowell said he will not vote for the spring break returning from a ski trip in Jackson, Wyoming.

"Spring Break is supposed to be enjoyable," he said. "That's what we are for, you are purging yourself for the second half of the academic year."

Even though a Spring Break vacation for some has resulted in unplanned consequences, UI senior Tony Butz said "people are all the same and someday regret was when he stayed at home and at the beach."

"You are not supposed to work during Spring Break," he said. "Having fun is what Spring Break is all about."

State schools may start to tailor parents on alcohol violations

The UI could soon be notifying parents about their alcohol violations.

The Iowa House recently passed a bill that would allow state universities, community colleges and private colleges to share records of students under 21 with school district officials.

The bill states that while universities would not be required to do so, they could report policies where misuses of licenses would be included.

Rep. Ronnie Daniels (D-Olalla City), was one of only two legislators who opposed the bill.

"If parents get a call from the university saying that their son or daughter had a beer, they would be more upset that they got the call than that their son or daughter had been drinking," Daniels said. The legislator should stay away from interfering with university policies and affairs, he said. "It's not going to change the problem, it's going to change the parents involved, it's going to change the lives of the students." Sen. Phil Terry, R-Bristol, also opposed the bill, said he hopes the bill will not allow the student to be affected by the drinking problem.

"This college includes an attitude that the public is tired of hearing about underage college drinking," he said. "The issue depends on the present and the student relationship, he said, if the parents are paying, they should have a right to know."

At least one UI member of the House also opposes the bill.

"This parent notification bill has been done with some good effort on the part of the University of Delaware," said Kline. "This is the best case for the University of Delaware, it's not necessary for us to do it, but it will be a good test to see if it works."

Sweatshop deadline approaches

I) Though today marks the end of the semester, some students feel they're not done with their work.

By Andy T. Dawson

The end of the semester marks the end of sweatshops for some students, but for others, the struggle continues.

With the arrival of the US Senate's anti-sweatshop bill today, the group of students hoping to form an official club to promote sweatshop awareness and join the Fair Trade Coalition is now waiting to hear from the Senate.

The group, which includes students from 50 different departments, hopes to form an official club to promote sweatshop awareness. The group plans to meet with senators today to discuss future actions but was unable to decide upon a plan to move forward.

"It's a difficult decision to make, and there's lots of info to consider," she said.

Worsend said she would like to have a decision by today, though the US Senate has not yet given the committee a deadline despite the Senate's request that a decision be made today.

The committee members have been in contact with each other since Monday night's public forum. Among the issues the group will address are the high cost of sweatshop clothing, the poor working conditions for those who produce the clothing, and the lack of consumer education.

The next meeting will be Thursday night's market and action night, but the group still needs to decide on a plan to move forward.

STATE BRIEF

Tenants: New name won't save mall

Old Capitol Mall is scheduled to undergo reconstruction and get a name change early this spring in an effort to enhance its image. The renovations will include decorations on the outside of the mall and enhanced window visibility. The name will be changed to Old Capitol Town Center, and the logo has been redesigned.

"We think the reconstruction and name change is a great idea," said Lisa Rowe, the Old Capitol Mall property administrator and marketing director. "I think the direction we want to go, which is to be a town center that serves the needs of the community." Rowe has been raised over the years, and that's the goal of the mall. Rowe said that the mall is always looking for ways to improve and that "everything changes, either the mall, the mall, or the mall," she said. "We want the right stores here. We do not want more that's not meant for the mall," she said.

 Rowe would cut any whether any new stores are coming to Old Capitol Mall but said "if it's dealing with prospective tenants, then we have everything, with new stores here," she said.

"We're closing everything," she said. "It's terrible," she said. "They need to get some permanent stores in here. A grocery store would be good for kids without cars, and we need a store for guys. There's nothing here." Ober Old Capitol Mall needs to attract new stores, said Rowe, because renovation and the name change will do nothing for the amount of business the mall will get. "It's dead in here. It's like a ghost town. We need more stores," Rowe said.

Iowa City resident Carolyn Blasnik said she shops at the mall approximately once every six months but would visit more often if there was a better selection of stores.

"I used to enjoy this mall more than I do now," she said. "I'd like to see more women's clothing stores or boutiques. It would also be nice to have a really nice restaurant, and I've always wished that the library were here."
Legal Matters

The U.S. Department of Energy warns that Mexico, three major oil-producing countries, will keep prices high because they will not keep filling their tanks as usual, unless the price goes over $2 a gallon by summer. The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will meet in Vienna, Croatia, in March, when it is expected to increase the oil price.

GOP ties minimum wage to tax cut

The House Republican leadership campaigned in the fall on the promise of getting a minimum-wage increase passed through Congress. The package was approved last week by the Senate, but the House will not vote on it this week and some House Republicans are not sure it will pass through the chamber.

Democrats have been working on legislation to raise the minimum wage for several months. The bill would increase the current $5.15-an-hour minimum wage to $6.50 by 2002. The House has passed a bill that would raise the minimum wage to $5.75 by 2002, but the Senate has not acted on it. The House bill was not expected to pass this week, but some House Republicans are still working on it.

Blasé reactions to school shootings disturbing
Apparent lack of concern in reaction to the massacre in Colorado.

I n the wake of more ridiculously tragic shootings, including the murder of 6-second-old Kayla Riddlesblack by a fellow first-grader in her Michigan school last week, school administrators have been coping with questions about what more they can or should do about the nation's at-risk youth.

In return, they have offered several options, from background checks on gun show vendors in Washington state to banning filters on cellphones, but without much attention.

Blasé reactions to school shootings disturbing
It is disturbing to see the inaction of the issue of children working in factories has inspired radials and growing coverage by regional media, the number of Americans who are concerned is rising more and more quickly, but has been found because no one is consciously seeking one. This makes it easier for the fewest number of us to enjoy the activities.

Martin Luther King Jr. is saying in the corridors. For this, I congratulate him. The war in the Congo is ominous, and the American public is not informed. Thousands of people are dying daily, but is it really as a result of this, and no one in the big day of America is pushing the present administration to the Congress to take action. Why? Because politics is more important than the lives of people in other African countries.

Last month was declared to be African month of 2000-01. The war in the Congo is significant, and the American public is not informed. We still have a long way to go. We are going to hit New York, and speak to the American public. And we will do it this week.

Iowa’s strange season just keeps going

Iowa play continues to bounce between horrible and terrific.

Champaign — If you would have told me yesterday that Iowa would lose to Minnesota at home, then have Oliver home with 12 minutes left in regulation, I would not have believed you.

The Hawkeyes next take on No. 2 seeded Minnesota, 81-78.

Mike Kelly

Gallorey is just one of the younger players that could step up and play a major role in bringing Iowa back to being a national power. Or, he could be the third man off of the bench.

Not many teams have the luxurty of not starting a guy who lights up the page for 30 points at any given night. Problem is, he can’t control 30 minutes of playing time. You never know when the third man off the bench will be making goes of the basket.

Next year’s Hawkeyes will be a team to watch closely. But give them time. The jump from high school to college doesn’t happen overnight — unlike this year’s Hawkeyes team transferring from wonderful to horrible, game-to-game.

"Iowa's season isn’t over. Still have another game to play that is against the mighty Rutgers from Madison Square Garden, they are supposed to lose. Their season should be over,"

Knowing this year’s team, it probably has more time left to slumber.

"Thank you Mike Kelly for being such a dedicated player,"

Reports: Marino to retire Monday

Daily Iowan and a reporter who has witnessed Dan Marino’s announcement of his retirement Monday. The report sources said that Marino had already decided to retire before the season ended.

Mike Marino

It was Marino’s third retirement decision in as many years.

Marino, who has had surgery on his back and neck in recent months, has been dealing with pain throughout his career.

"I’ve been dealing with the pain for a long time," Marino said.

Men's Golf

This week: The Iowa men's golf team will finish up the spring season by traveling to Florence, Ala., to participate in a 9-hole tournament hosted by the University of North Alabama. The 36-hole tournament will begin Thursday and conclude Tuesday with another 18 holes. The Hawkeyes will travel to Kansas City, Mo., to compete in the Capital City Collegiate Cup Wednesday.

Defeated: Earlier in the week, Iowa head coach B.J. Smothers said he didn't know much about the team he had defeated in the tournament.

Women's Golf

Next competition: From March 15-17 the Hawkeyes will travel to Daytona Beach, Fla., to compete in the Chick-fil-A Challenge. The tournament will be hosted by South Florida. Iowa will continue its trip to the Sunshine State the following week by competing in the 2003 NCAA Regional in Gulf Shores, Ala.

In the tournament: Iowa's team is ranked 13th in the nation by Golfweek. The Hawkeyes' team of senior Meghan Mardones, junior Cindy Spero, junior Meghan Mardones, junior Cindy Spero, junior Kelli Rollins and sophomore Kristi Ebert will compete in the NCAA Championships.

Coach's comment: "The weather has been a little bit of a factor but we hope we shouldn't have too much rain.

Women's Tennis

The Hawkeyes face Butler and Rider this weekend in Duane Banks Tennis Center.

Senior Keely Zeilstra and freshman Katie Vanhouten have won their last eight matches.

The Hawkeyes were undefeated in their last meet of the season against Butler.

Coach's comment: "We have a chance to get to know each other in the tournament."
Mark Schwab won't watch brother at NCAAs

Mark Schwab, 21, of Mt. Pleasant, Mich., was recently released as head coach of the University of Iowa's wrestling team. The former two-time NCAA champion had spent 19 seasons with the program, leading the Hawkeyes to 14 NCAA titles. He won the Big Ten championship twice and had the Hawkeyes ranked No. 1 in five of the last seven years.

Schwab, who is the brother of former Olympic wrestler Jeff Schwab, was named the head coach of the University of Michigan's wrestling team on Friday. He will begin his duties at Michigan in the fall.

In a statement released by the University of Iowa, Schwab said:

"I want to personally thank the University of Iowa for allowing me to coach for 19 years in our program. I have had the privilege of working with the best coaches in the history of Iowa Wrestling, culminating in our first NCAA Championship in 1997.

"I want to thank my family, who have always been with me throughout this journey. I am thankful for the support of our fans and supporters, who have always been there for us.

"I am looking forward to the next chapter of my career and I wish the program the best of luck in the future."

half. The team hit eight of 10 3- pointers from four different players.

When Jacob Jaco's monster dunk put Iowa up 18 with just over 12 minutes left to play, fans started heading for the exit at the United Center. The site began to turn with nine minutes left in the half when Michigan's aggressive press forced the first of six Dejan Olajuwon turnovers. Iowa's scoring was dominated by Galloway, along with Rob Griffin, who had 14 and Jaco's with 18.

The Hawkeyes have a little more than 30 hours to come down from the emotionally draining win. Next up in Michigan State, the No. 10 champions and No. 3 seed in the tournament. Iowa won in overtime on Jan. 29 at Carver-Hawkeye and the Hawkeyes will have a tough time avoiding a repeat.

Allied said his team was focused on turning momentum in Michigan State, and has not even looked on tape of Michigan State. "There are a lot of weaknesses to find in just 24 hours," Allied said. "We are going to have to find some, but it will be hard." Michigan State is led by All-Big Ten selections Morris Peterson and Maurice Taylor. Allied called the Spartans "the best team in the country."

Even though beating Michigan State will be a tall order because of the size and experience difference between the two squads, Oliver still said Iowa will find a way to win. "If we don't think we can win, why don't we show up and play tomorrow," Oliver said. "The game begins at 6:40 p.m. and will be syndicated on ESPN.
