Two Down,
Alley Cat

Up student, Chelsee Lambdin, 21, left, talks about the famed dancing alley cat, King, 15, in front of the feline's home as a crowd gathers outside in the Student Activities office, Tuesday night. King, one of the only cats to perform tricks as a live act, is flying to Los Angeles for a 6 - week run playing the grease monkey in the television special "Live From Mars."
Two new bars open downtown

Iowa City sees changes, as Brothers and Alley Cat open in outposts

By Sky Elms
The Daily Iowan

IU students returning from spring break may find the Iowa City area's bar scene looks different, with Brothers Bar opening its doors on March 18 and M&J Tap, formerly Rush Hour, becoming a more alternative bar called the Alley Cat.

The Alley Cat, located at 13 S. Linn St., posted signs calling it "Iowa City's newest alternative venue," co-owners Marco Cook and John Leadley said.

"We want to keep a little bit of the mix, and that's what this bar is," Leadley said. "It's just more alternative, but still a good time."

Brothers Bar and Grill is one of several new bars to recently open in downtown Iowa City.

Club Banana is bigger, but the Alley Cat is a nice place to go, Leadley said. Meanwhile, employees at Brothers Bar, located in Plaza Centre One, said their early business has been good.

"It was pretty packed Friday night, and it looked like everybody was having a good time," said UI senior Jon Nelson, a bartender at Brothers. "It was a lot of fun. It was really cool to be open on the first night and have people come in and say how excited they are to have a place like this in Iowa City."

The managers of the bar said they could not be reached for comment. (Contact Sky Elms can be reached at: skylems@dailyiowan.com)

Cross Park fire remains a mystery

The investigation into a March 6 arson/homicide continues; no suspects have been named.

By Anna Hayek
The Daily Iowan

While investigators continue to search for answers in the March 6 Gold Fire at 845 Cross Park Ave., the victim's family and residents of the apartment building are struggling to get their lives back normal.

The fire was reported at approximately 9:45 p.m. on March 6, investigators later ruled that arson was the cause. Kurt Miller, 20, was burned and died of his injuries. His wife, Laura Miller, also 20, was rescued from the couple's third-floor bedroom. The couple owned a cat, and residents of the apartment complex said it was rescued from the couple's apartment Saturday.

Police have made no arrests in the case and have not named any suspects in the homicide.

"It's still pretty packed Friday night, and it looked like everybody was having a good time," said UI senior Jon Nelson, a bartender at Brothers. "It was a lot of fun. It was really cool to be open on the first night and have people come in and say how excited they are to have a place like this in Iowa City."

Local group snags Sycamore Mall

The four Iowa City developers who won a site to remain mostly retail.

By Christopher Trapp

The Chicago-based Sycamore Mall developers worked hard that four local real-estate developers were elected in a retail presence and some office use," said Ambrose, the president of Ambrose Development Co. and a spokesman for the group. "It's going to be a lot of changes; it's going to be a lot more retail space." The March 13 announcement came two weeks after the developers' first move into the mall. "One problem we have is that the layout is owing to the need for change, he said. "The group will take over the current tenants, including the one for McDonald's, which he said is a real estate deal that will make the exchange most of a retail space.

Ex-Hawks get GM mark of excellence

Two former Iowa wrestlers, looking to make the Olympics team, have been awarded new cars.

By Jeremy Shapero

Olympic wrestling hopefuls and former Hawkeyes Joe Williams and Lincoln McIlravy were awarded a brand new Pontiac Grand Am for being two more dedicated wrestlers.

- Chad Vance, one of the wrestlers' financial needs and what their current situations looked like within their sports," said Joe Johnson, a public relations supervisor for GM, North Central Region.

"A point system was used to weed out the applicants." Williams and McIlravy both have been training for the U.S. National Team and U.S. Freestyle team team from 1995-2002 in Las Vegas and the Final Freestyle Olympic Team from June 23-24 in Dallas. "It's great to get the out," said Vance. "It's definitely something that I'm really excited about. So I'm really happy about being honored.

To apply athletes had to fill out a detailed questionnaire, which comprised of their current situation, and indicating how the site would benefit in their training. Applicants also had to declare financial rewards in the need-based portion of application, Johnson said.

Each of the 100 athletes received a special medal made for the program. The interior seats were designed by Boeing, a famous designer, and are not available to the general public. Johnson said.

GM used lifestyle studies to match each sport with a participating brand. Johnson said. The group was attended by 18 sports, including some in the special medical facility on the site. The developers' financial needs and what they have to do with some of the issues in their lives, he said. "We had the traveling brothers in there, but we're not thinking about that anymore," he said.

Danney and Erin Garrett, who live near the mall and have been walking inside the mall for two years, said they hope that they have the same opportunity in the future.

"When we moved back to Iowa City in 1991, we had problems walking on the ground without our walker," Danney Garrett said. "I was grateful I could walk inside.

A group of six towers was on site to support the first Olympic Games.

"I have a new way to get to my work, I have a new car to drive, and I have the opportunity to be a part of the Olympic Games," Vance said.

"I don't know how many Olympic competitors have a new car," he said. "I don't even know if we have a car at all."

Cult fire kills hundreds in Uganda

The death count in a mysterious explosion-fire at a religious cult's compound could reach 470.

By George Munyai

A prominent Ugandan Muslim, Said Ssemujju, said Wednesday that the death toll from the explosion in the town of Masindi in southwestern Uganda may reach as many as 500. He said the bodies of many of the victims had not yet been identified.

Ssemujju, who was among the victims, said that he and other survivors had managed to escape the building that burned down.

The explosion occurred at a small compound where thousands of people had gathered to celebrate the birthday of a local Muslim leader, Sheikh Yusuf Kihika. The Sheikh is known for his radical views, including support for Islamic fundamentalism.

Ssemujju, who said he was among those who survived the explosion, said that he was still in shock. "I was inside the building when the explosion occurred," he said. "I heard a loud noise and then I felt the building shaking. I ran outside and saw people running in all directions."

The cause of the explosion is unknown, but some locals believe it was caused by a suicide bomber. Others suggest it was an accident, possibly due to faulty wiring or other electrical problems.

The government has dispatched police and soldiers to the scene to investigate the incident. They are also attempting to control the crowd and prevent further violence.

In a statement, the government said it was working to provide assistance to the victims and their families. It also urged the public to remain calm and avoid any acts of violence.

Ipersonal Israel: Cabinet on land transfer

The government of Israel is set to approve a land transfer agreement with the Palestinians, according to reports.

The agreement, reportedly reached last week, would transfer control of a large area of land in the West Bank to the Palestinians. The exact details of the agreement have not yet been made public.

The move comes as part of the ongoing efforts to implement the Oslo Accords, which were signed in 1995. Under the terms of the agreement, Israel was to transfer control of certain areas to the Palestinians.

However, the agreement has been a source of controversy, with some Israelis opposing the transfer of land. The Israeli government has defended the move, saying it is necessary for the establishment of a Palestinian state.

The agreement is expected to be signed next week, according to reports. It is unclear whether the agreement will be signed by the Israeli government or by leaders of the Palestinian Authority.

In a statement, the Israeli government said it was committed to implementing the Oslo Accords and that it would continue to work towards a two-state solution. It also said that it would not be bound by any agreements that threatened Israeli sovereignty.

The move is likely to be met with skepticism by some Jews, who have expressed concerns about the transfer of land to the Palestinians.

Can’t make a Silkwood out of a sow’s ear

FILM REVIEW

By John Mullan

Eric Brodovich is the sort of movie that you’re probably supposed to like because it’s gutsy. It’s a legal drama, but only in five minutes of screen time are actually spent in a courtroom. It takes time in terms of narrating a lead character who freely lets his body, sensuality and social skills go to getting the information she needs out of people. There’s no courtroom drama, no adrenaline-pumping courtroom scenes, no courtroom trials. But there is a courtroom setting where everyone goes through their motions. But, just like with personal injury cases, the legal aspects like damages tend to be buried. Brodovich is a film that has a lot of gutters in it. It’s so big, it’s often not as strong as it entirely works. It isn’t exactly Julia Roberts’ usual fare, because this isn’t her type of movie. She doesn’t satisfy anyone looking for a strong, powerful character for this type of movie. Roberts stars in the title role of a thirty-three year-old, divorced south Louisiana woman who smashed into her car. Soon, she’s invisible to the law and doesn’t see just about anything she’s shown. She’s working as an employee out of guilt for the cancer caused by oil that could burn down their water supply of a small California company.

JULIA ROBERTS TURNS THROUGH FILMS AS ERIC BRODOVICH.

If that plot line sounds a little familiar to you, that’s because it probably was. Very similar themes were seen last year in the Julia Roberts picture A Civil Action (also based on a true story) and 1995’s Silkwood, which starred Meryl Streep again, based on a true story. Brodovich has some notable differences from those two movies, but there are many strong similarities. Aligned is a woman of questionable character and without much formal education against a massive and nasty corporation. A Civil Action attempts to be an anti-legalese drama legal drama, defying many of the conventions of the genre on possible fines does Brodovich. All three films, if necessary, have scenes where the struggle of the main character is compared to personal and familial, and each tends to focus more on the sacrifice made for the change of the story to the public than the actual suffering of the people who were most harmed by the pollution in the first place.

It’s a shame that Brodovich is ultimately so unsatisfying in the same way that those other two films are. The flick has an edgy look because it’s not a major studio movie. The theme of the movie is too sentimental for the genre, a la Silkwood. It’s a shame that Roberts’ character to earn some professional respect? Are we pulling for the victims to get some kind of restitution? Even if victory means to win a large settlement, does it really make up for everything? It’s questions such as these that the movie never really leaves itself away from Roberts’ obviousness long enough to ask.

UI could face skyrocketing tuition cost

Tuition

If the proposed 4.5 percent tuition increase is passed, the UI would not be able to cover the increased costs. The university is projecting a $12 million loss in revenue next year, with tuition accounting for more than half of that.

Students have been vocal in their opposition to the increased tuition costs. One student, who wishes to remain anonymous, said, "I don't think it's fair that the students are the ones who have to pay for this.

However, President J. Bruce Harreld said, "We have no choice but to raise tuition."

The proposed tuition increase is part of a larger package of budget cuts that the university is facing. President Harreld said, "We have had to make difficult decisions, but we have to do what is necessary to ensure the future of the university."
Tumultuous career ends in finals for Iowa senior

By Jeremy Schottler

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — June wines be remembered on a wrestling mat as Iowa senior Wes Hand was always getting in short order of the action. In 1998, when Iowa’s dual with Penn State came down to the shortend of the stick, it seemed that any college student could take the program and show all the Nittany Lions a thing or two. However, Wes Hand had just different plans.

In Saturday night’s championship match, Wes Hand finished second in the 187 lb. weight class, losing to Minnesota’s Brock Lesnar, ending the first forced overtime. Hand couldn’t hold on the program and show all the Nittany Lions a thing or two.

To start, he was on the mat as the Hawkeyes lost 3-1 in overtime to Penn State. The season ended for the Hawkeyes in fourth place, finishing 6-0 with eight matches

All matches in the finals came down to the double-overtime in six, and each competitor had a chance to win. But Hand couldn’t hold on to the victory.

Weber State’s Cody Sanderson. 3-1, in the first collegiate dual. Sanderson controlled the pace of the match, tying up Bumbotron постоянно and winning the Batorium, 3-1. Sanderson finished sixth and broke the six-match streak.

The Hawkeyes rebounded from a nightmarish Friday with a sparkling consolation in overtime. The title was Juergens’ and claimed the eighth-straight NCAA wrestling championship Saturday night. 116-113. Minnesota finished a distant third with 90 points.

“Wow, just a dream,” Zaloupek told us Saturday morning. “We wanted to win it, but we couldn’t do it. We just had to win all of our matches, and that’s what happened. The Hawkeyes rebounded from a nightmarish Friday with a sparkling consolation in overtime. The title was Juergens’ and claimed the eighth-straight NCAA wrestling championship Saturday night. 116-113. Minnesota finished a distant third with 90 points.

“We were just happy to be back,” Borton said. “We wanted to win it, but we couldn’t do it. We just had to win all of our matches, and that’s what happened.”

Juergens, Doug Schaub, and T.J. Williams, all top seeded in their weights, were upset Friday. Bumbotron and Schaub fell in the quarterfinals, while Williams lost his first match as a Hawkeye in the semifinals, falling 3-1 to overtime to Boise State’s Larry Quinn. But they both came back strong on Saturday, claiming third-place finishes and giving Iowa the points it needed to overtake the Cyclones.

Overall, Iowa was eight of 12 matches successful in the consolation rounds.

Cyclones was only one of four champions for Iowa. Iowa’s only champion was 133-pound Wes Hand, who defeated Iowa State’s Cody Sanderson, 3-1, in overtime. The win was Hand’s first consolation.

Borton said he was “very happy to be back,” and that he was “very happy to be back.”

By Jamie Stewart

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — Heading into the win, many people had doubts about Iowa’s chances at the NCAA wrestling championship. However, the Hawkeyes proved everyone wrong, winning their first NCAA title with 185 wins and 18 losses. The program ended the season on a high note, and the Hawkeyes are looking forward to next year.

Juergens, Doug Schaub, and T.J. Williams, all top seeded in their weights, were upset Friday. Buetooth and Schaub fell in the quarterfinals, while Williams lost his first match as a Hawkeye in the semifinals, falling 3-1 to overtime to Boise State’s Larry Quinn. But they both came back strong on Saturday, claiming third-place finishes and giving Iowa the points it needed to overtake the Cyclones.

Overall, Iowa was eight of 12 matches successful in the consolation rounds.

Cyclones was only one of four champions for Iowa. Iowa’s only champion was 133-pound Wes Hand, who defeated Iowa State’s Cody Sanderson, 3-1, in overtime. The win was Hand’s first consolation.

“Very happy to be back,” Borton said. “We wanted to win it, but we couldn’t do it. We just had to win all of our matches, and that’s what happened.”

Worley ready for next level after leading West to title

Iowa recruit Glen Worley was named captain of the Iowa high school all-tournament team Saturday.

By Mike Braun

WAUSON - Glen Worley wanted to do back to back. He was second in the state in Florida last year and was fighting for the 2nd spot in the state by the end of the third. He was in a tie with his brother, Kenny, and in the state by the end of the year.

Worley scored 19 points - 13 in the first half - for a victory Sunday at the Legends Tournament.

It's a little bit of a success. This is the last game I've been here. After the second game, Worley said, "I'm just enjoying this victory."

The other game, Dayton again, Worley scored 40 points - 19 in the first half - for a victory.

Winning the second title with the Titans is different from the first title. Worley said. In 1996, Worley scored 19 points - 10 in the first half - for a victory in the top-ranked Des Moines Register.

"It's a little bit easier. This is the last game, the last time I'll be here," Worley said. "After my sophomore year, I know I had a better chance of coming back. After this, there's no chance of coming back."

Defense carries Duke past Kansas

Shane Battier played a composed 30 minutes, led Duke to a 94-82 victory over Kansas and Blue Devils didn't have a bad start.

By David Brudzinkas

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. — Shane Battier said it was nothing special. "Every game is a special game," he said. But he was referring to all the NCAA tournament games in the NCAA tournament.

Battier had 21 points, eight rebounds and eight assists in Saturday's 94-82 victory over Kansas in the second round of the East Regional.

"When you get into the tournament, teams don't have your year's allowance of all the time, so something that may not be as effective in the ACC as all of the sudden becomes a lot more effective in the Big East," Battier, whose previous high for assists was 13, said. "That was the case today. They couldn't stop him.

"Battier is a Big East player of the year," Kansas coach Roy Williams said. "He is a big-time defensive player in the second half, forcing Kansas 16-20 percentage points.

"You look at the stats and you probably wouldn't say that we didn't play well," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski, who said his team had five turnovers and had a season-high 15 3-point tries near the end, and finished 2-for-12 from the line. "I thought they knocked us back a bit," Krzyzewski said. "We had a slow start that played that good defense in the first half. The All the game we played today was likely to be carried by Battier's play, hitting 4-for-10 from the floor and 6-for-7 from the line.

"I thought we did well enough in the first half, but we had to carry the load in the second half," Williams said.

Woods begins Masters march with victory

By Doug Ferguson

ORLANDO, Fla. — Tiger Woods has been thinking about Augusta National since the new year. Now he's begun to make that dream a reality. Woods began his march to the Masters in style on Sunday by winning the Bay Hill Invitational, the final tournament before he heads to Augusta. "The opportunity to have a shot at the Masters is obviously hasn't been there," Woods said. "It's been a very long time since the new year when we had a shot at the Masters. It was really exciting to be able to play this week and have a shot at the Masters." Woods became the first player since 1996 to win consecutively at Bay Hill, the final stop on the PGA Tour before the Masters. Woods, who has won the Masters three times, said he's thinking about Augusta every day. "I think I'm heading in the right direction for Augusta," Woods said. "Hopefully, my game is peaking towards that. Hopefully, you'll have some signs that I'm actually playing a little bit better." Better? Woods didn't finish his round until Sunday, but he said his game is "there. He finished at 10-under par for the tournament, four strokes ahead of the field. "It wasn't a thrilling playoff," Woods said. "Better?" Woods hold up the Bay Hill Trophy on Sunday in Orlando, Fla. Woods defeated Arnold Palmer to win the Bay Hill Invitational and improve his chances of making the Masters. "I would have loved to have won the trophy on the 18th hole," Woods said.
