The rise in arrests at the UI comes from a combination of increased alcohol use, better enforcement of liquor laws and programs that increase recognition and intervention with drinking, said Capt. Claude Ricketts, UI police chief.

"It is making the university and the community aware of alcohol-related times to drinking, and that is a problem that needs to be addressed, he said.

More new bars in Iowa City's downtown area and a lack of alcohol action are one of the major problems, he said.

"Most people go to the bars because there are so many downtown and there is always some food that puts the fun in being there," she said. "The more bars they add, the less space we have for the bars we do have.

"At the University of Wisconsin, Madison, the UI police chief, Capt. Dane Burke of the University of Wisconsin police, said the number of alcohol arrests has increased.

"We have a lot of bars. The number of alcohol-related arrests by public officers compared to 1995 and 1996, increasing from 300 to 400.

Most people go to the bars because there are so many downtown and there is always some food that fits a person's personality. The more bars they add, the less space there is for alternative activities.

"In 1997, we were severely understaffed due to arrest of officers for the department," he said. "In 1999, we were severely understaffed.

"Schools with a lower number of arrests for alcohol-related offenses expected Burke, who said the lack of arrests reflected poor enforcement of liquor laws in the Madison area.

"In 1997, there were 300 arrests, according to the UI police.

"In 1999, there were 400 arrests, according to the UI police.

The primary election today will call the field for several local races.

By Andrew Moses

The Daily Iowan

Last-minute primary election preparations are underway for the upcoming election. Iowa is one of three states with a "blanket" primary, where all registered voters will vote for their candidates, regardless of party affiliation. These preparations include developing campaign materials, securing poll locations, and appointing poll workers.

Incumbent Senator Chuck Grassley, who is seeking re-election, is running unopposed in the Republican primary. Grassley is expected to face a challenge in the general election, where he will run against a Democratic candidate.

In the Democratic primary for the U.S. Senate, two candidates are running: Representative Abby Finkenauer and Attorney General Gone M. Grimes. Finkenauer is favored to win the primary, but Grimes is expected to make a strong showing.

In the House of Representatives, several races are closely contested. In the 3rd District, incumbent Representative Dave Loebsack (D) is facing a challenge from Republican candidate Cindy Ziemke-Steffen. In the 1st District, incumbent Representative Rod Blum (R) is facing a challenge from Democratic candidate Abby Finkenauer. In the 2nd District, incumbent Representative Keith Farnham (D) is facing a challenge from Republican candidate Mike Jacobson.

On the local level, several races are also closely contested. In the Iowa City council race, incumbent William Saffell (D) is facing a challenge from Republican candidate David Moll. In the Coralville council race, incumbent James Peavler (D) is facing a challenge from Republican candidate John Kaltwasser.

The Iowa City council race is particularly significant, as it is a "runoff" race, meaning that the top two candidates from the primary will advance to the general election. The winner of the runoff will then face a challenge from a Republican candidate in the November election.

In addition to the local races, several statewide races are also closely contested. In the race for governor, incumbent Governor Kim Reynolds (R) is facing a challenge from Democratic candidate Fred Hubbell. In the race for lieutenant governor, incumbent Lt. Governor Adam Gregg (D) is facing a challenge from Republican candidate Dan Hall.

EDITORIAL

Kathy Kern’s arm-twisting appropriate

After Indiana University-President Myra Brand announced two weeks ago that the university would not fund the basketball school of basketball star Bob Knight, despite allegations of verbal and physical abuse of over-coerced and former player Tom Phelan, much of the world was again asking: why is this happening? The fact is, Kathy Kern worked at the Enid Gontis Department of Psychology for 10 years. I would be better able to speak to this issue in the legislation.

Three weeks ago, she stood at the microphone of the world to express her viewpoint on the issues that impact our lives. Kathy Kern served on the faculty of the Indiana University and has been a prominent figure in the world of labor and human rights.

Kathy Kern is the first choice for the Democratic candidate for the Iowa Senate seat. The division within the party . Lensing is from the Democratic America. A bril­ liant leader that she is, hired a union-busting firm to cancel con­ tracts with Brown, Michigan and Indiana universities. Kathy Kern was endorsed by Cathy Kern.

Let's make our voices loud and clear in support of Kathy Kern. She is the clear choice for the Democratic candidate for the Iowa Senate seat. The division within the party... Vehicles catch children abusing kids

Hidden cameras captured motorists hitting children with urines and suffocating them, among other things.

By Ken Hechler

ATLANTA—Rushed by unseen physicians into neonatal intensive care units to assess the condition of seriously injured children, Robert Carroll faced a dilemma: should he act on his suspicions about the children’s injuries or trust the opinions of the doctors who confirmed their diagnoses? As a pediatrician, he carried his own concerns, but also the mother who brought in her child to keep him 16 years ago; the mother who had informed the doctor about the child’s injuries.

In this case, Carroll decided to act. He immediately called the child’s mother and asked to see the child. The child was brought to the hospital, where Carroll examined him. The child was severely injured, suffering from severe brain damage. Carroll immediately informed the child’s mother about the severity of the child’s condition.

58 dead, 500 hurt in Indonesian quake

One province reports widespread panic as aftershocks roll through the area.

By Grant Spencer

JAKARTA, Indonesia — At least 58 people died and 500 were injured when a powerful earthquake struck off the coast of Indonesia’s Sumatra island, sending a tsunami rushing ashore.

All victims, including those who were confirmed dead, were women and children. Among the dead were children of all ages, from newborns to adults.

In a remote area of Aceh province, where the tsunami hit hardest, rescue workers worked tirelessly to save lives. At least 300 people were rescued and sent to hospitals.

In a statement, the Indonesian government confirmed that the death toll was 58, with hundreds injured. The government said it was still trying to assess the extent of the damage.

The Indonesian Red Cross said it had dispatched 300 relief workers to the area to provide medical assistance and food to survivors.

On the ground, the situation was chaotic and desperate. People were unconscious, with bloodied faces and bodies.

A 3.2 magnitude earthquake struck Sumatra island, Indonesia, at 05:45 a.m. local time, causing the tsunami. The quake and tsunami were the worst to hit the area in recent memory.

The tsunami waves reached up to 10 meters high, killing people and destroying homes and infrastructure. The government said it was still trying to assess the extent of the damage.

The Indonesian government has set up a rescue team to help victims in the area. The military, police and Red Cross are among the teams deployed to the site.

In the aftermath of the disaster, the Indonesian government has vowed to help survivors rebuild their homes and lives.

The United Nations has pledged its support in the aftermath of the disaster, saying it was ready to provide aid and assistance to the victims. The World Health Organization has also offered its support, saying it would provide medical and humanitarian aid.

According to the Indonesian Red Cross, the death toll could rise as rescue efforts continue.

Taking a stroll on the avenues of letters

Some Iowa authors will be celebrated this spring along Iowa Avenue.

By Kathy DeWitt

A new book will be born in a literary walk along Iowa Avenue next month as a celebration of public art and community. "Iowa Avenue authors with quotes," from each of the 100 blocks of Iowa Avenue, will be completed by the third Saturday in May, the Iowa Avenue Association said.

The project is a collaboration between the Iowa City Public Art Project and the Iowa Avenue Association. Artists were chosen by a committee made up of librarians, book sellers and others with literary knowledge.

The project was made possible through the Iowa City Community Foundation's Iowa Avenue Fund.

"It tells you something about the spirit and character of the community," said John Cusick, executive director of the Iowa Avenue Association.

The project's authors will be those who have written something about Iowa Avenue over the past two decades.

"I think it's a great idea," said Kevin Quinn, executive director of the Iowa Avenue Association.

The project will cost $20,000 and will be paid for by an annual allocation from the Iowa City Public Art Project.

"The project will have a positive impact on Iowa Avenue," said Quinn.

"Iowa Avenue authors with quotes" will be on display along Iowa Avenue from Saturday, May 16, through Sunday, May 17.

NEW YORK — Philip Morris will stop publishing tobacco ads in magazines after the government's tobacco lawsuit.

The company, which has been a major advertiser in the industry, said it would not run tobacco ads in magazines after the government's lawsuit.

"We believe that the government's lawsuit is an attempt to force us to stop advertising tobacco products in magazines," said a company spokesman.

The lawsuit seeks to stop Philip Morris from advertising its cigarettes in magazines.

The company, which is the largest advertiser in the industry, said it would continue to advertise its products in other media.

"We are not happy with the government's lawsuit, but we are committed to defending ourselves," said the company spokesman.

Do the Pacers have a chance in the NBA Finals?

In the Eastern Conference finals, the Lakers have taken a 3-1 lead over the Pacers. The Lakers are considered the favorites to win the series and the NBA championship.

The following points can help you understand the situation:

1. Experience: The Lakers have more experience in the playoffs and have already knocked out three other teams to reach the Finals. The Pacers are making their first appearance in the Finals.

2. Star Power: The Lakers have superstars like LeBron James and Anthony Davis, while the Pacers have young talent like Victor Oladipo. The Lakers' experience in pressure situations could be a deciding factor.

3. Coaching: The Lakers have a legendary coach in Phil Jackson, who has won several titles. The Pacers' coach, Frank Vogel, is relatively new to the scene.

4. Role Players: The Lakers have a deep bench with players like Rajon Rondo and Andre Drummond, providing depth and versatility. The Pacers' bench is less deep and could be a weakness.

5. Health: The Lakers have been relatively healthy throughout the playoffs, while the Pacers have had some injuries, particularly to Victor Oladipo.

6. Conference Comparison: The Lakers have faced stronger teams in the Western Conference, which could help them in the Finals. The Pacers have faced mostly weaker teams in the Eastern Conference.

In conclusion, while the Pacers have a chance, they face a tough challenge against the Lakers. The Lakers' depth, experience, and star power make them strong favorites to win the NBA Finals.
No room in salary cap for Chmura

Despite the fact Mark Chmura is being charged with sexual assault, the Green Bay Packers took back one of the spots in the salary cap for cutting him.

GREEN BAY, Wis. - In a move the Green Bay Packers never publicly revealed, they cut Mark Chmura from the team on Tuesday, removing him from this season’s salary cap.

Even before the news surfaced, the star right tight end of the Packers’ offense was tipped at two games of last season’s five with an ankle injury suffered in the season opener.

As of Tuesday night, Chmura was still on the roster, but his $1.4 million salary for 2002 means he will count against the Packers’ $45.082 million salary cap for the coming season.

Chmura had a practice injury during last season’s opener against the Chicago Bears and was scratched for the game. He didn’t return to the field that day and missed the remaining 14 games.

Chmura said he was ready to return to the field when he was informed of his team’s decision.

The Packers had $500,000 in salary cap room.

The collapse of the salary cap means that a player can be released up until the season starts and still count as a salary cap hit. However, that doesn’t apply to players released during the season.

If a player is released during the season, his team will typically try to get a release in the offseason, when the salary cap is reset.

Chmura was never given a chance to return to the field last season.

The Packers were forced to release him, and he was signed to the practice squad.

ATLANTA - Murray charges against Ray Lewis were dropped Monday, and he could be practicing next week with the Baltimore Ravens.

Lewis, who faced life in prison, pleaded not guilty to all charges. The NFL star pled guilty to a misdemeanor charge of obstructing justice and agreed to testify at a later date. Lewis was granted probation under Georgia's first-offense driving law.

"We have a solid future - next year, we'll be back up in the top tier," he said.

The Hawks had finished fourth in the Eastern Conference.
