Stores to give ID scanners a six-month trial-run

Local retailers selling alcohol and tobacco will begin using a new identification-scanning device.

By Tony Hokanson

Half of the stores selling alcohol and tobacco in the Iowa City and Coralville areas are now equipped with a new device that will scan customers’ drivers’ licenses.

About 70 RAV — electronic age verification — devices were distributed Wednesday in almost 50 local liquor stores, drug stores and convenience stores. The devices are small black boxes similar to credit-card machines.

When used, a clerk has to check a customer’s driver’s license. The box then tells the store owner whether the person is 21 or older.

Clarks, who has been employed as an employee at convenience stores, said these machines can be easily swiped. All the information from the card comes up on the screen and the device informs the clerk whether the person is old enough for the purchase.

Joan Stave, manager at the Leggs Company in Coralville, said she plans to test the Leggs Company manufacture’s new ID scanners because she wants to be able to scan the customer’s IDs to see if they are fake or not.

She also said the Leggs Company manufacture’s new ID scanners can even scan the drivers’ licenses for people using IDs that Illinois which cannot be scanned by the new device.

"I think we can have more control over who we are selling alcohol and tobacco to,” Stave said.

"This project is geared toward the perspective of the business owner," said Sue Rice, manager of the Iowa Alcohol Beverages Commission.

"We are trying to reduce the number of arrests of underage persons and, though it is slightly more expensive, to encourage use of ID systems is helpful.

"This industry needs to be a part of the solution and not the problem," she added.

Store director John Peterman, 21, first introduced the idea of trying the new scanners at his store. He said it will be useful tool to prevent the sale to people who aren’t of age.

"It will also take some of the pressure off of the clerks who have to ask for a person’s ID," Peterman said.

Several merchants expressed interest in using the new devices at their stores.

UI student faces assault and public intoxication charges

An Iowa City police officer arrested a UI student Wednesday for alleged assault and public intoxication.

Police were called to 1002 N. Dubuque Street around 3 p.m., according to Iowa City police officer Jim Mack.

Mack said officers responded to the store, called Michael’s Pizza on Dubuque, because they had been notified of a possible assault.

AUI student, John Stephen Brown, 19, was charged with a second-degree assault after allegedly assault police officer Thomas Blom, 45, who is a plain-clothes police officer.

Thomas Blom, 45, broke into a store to visit a friend during his shift. Blom said he had been notified that a customer had been seen inside and had been seen inside and had been asked to leave.

After Blom and his partner arrived at the scene, they were met by a man who was allegedly threatening them with a knife.

Brown, who is a UI student, was later arrested and charged with second-degree assault.

According to Mack, Brown was taken into custody and is being held at the Johnson County Jail.

"I am an employee here at the store," Blom said. "I was just on my way back from a shift."

According to Mack, the officer who arrested Brown turned over the stolen property to the university police department.

"We are investigating this incident," Mack said.

Police are still investigating the incident as of Wednesday afternoon.

Democrats claim credit for carving out cuts

Republicans put the effort off until at least next week.

By Mike Glover

Democratic leaders downplayed Bush's economic proposals Wednesday for laying out a six-week nationwide tour to tout his tax cut plan. Republicans had planned to present their alternative to Vilsack on Wednesday but instead put the effort on hold after heated criticism from a broad variety of groups.

"I think they realized this was a situation where they couldn't win and couldn't lose," said Senate Majority Leader Tom Daschle of South Dakota, who led opposing Senate Republicans in outmaneuvering Bush throughout the debate.

"This is the only way to respond to this," Daschle said. "We will be able to take our position into the five-state tour with a good sense of where we are with this."

The Senate failed to pass Bush's $1.35 trillion tax cut measure Wednesday afternoon, a move that will give Bush a chance to argue that the Senate is out of touch with taxpayers across the nation to visit with taxpayers during the debate.

"It's not too late when you have some time to pass the bill," said Steve Miller, of the people in Iowa who are being sized.

Some majority Republicans said the debate was a weak attempt to bring about much encouragement.

"I don't think anything is going to happen until we have a similar budget cut proposal in secret, the GOP ranks," said the boy's father Mark Hynek.

The president hits the road to tout the benefits of his budget plan.

By Martin Chorosty
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush sent Congress a $1.34 trillion budget Wednesday that would fuel spending in programs ranging from anti-terrorism to transportation while using billions of dollars from a projected $418 billion surplus to pay down the debt.

Bush's tax-cutting, spending-focused budget was expected to win congressional approval in the House. But it won't be easy for a budget on revenue-sharing to pass in the Senate, where conservative Republicans and liberals are divided.

Bush hit the road Wednesday to tout the benefits of his economic program, telling a crowd at the University of Virginia that the proposal would "reverse the trend of deficit spending that has dogged us in the past." He said, "We believe that a strong and healthy nation can only be built when we act first to bring down our debt and then work hard to bring excess demand to the rich." A cheer erupted from the crowd as Bush said that the plan was "necessary for growth and prosperity." He said, "I want to go to work to bring back a spirit of optimism and a shared sense of responsibility that has been missing in Washington for a long time."

The surplus in the budget is, in part, a reason for the budgets of various programs.

Love deems partisans 'shortsighted'

Washington — Love, former partner attorney, speaks before the House Judiciary Committee.

WASHINGTON — From the beginning of his presidency, love's attorney has been trying to win back the House Democrats' support for the budget. The attorney, who is one of the most prominent attorneys in the country, said Wednesday that the House Judiciary subcommittee's vote to approve the budget was a victory for those who "believe in the Constitution, the rule of law, and the judicial branch of government." Prosecutor says Milosevic moved gold to Switzerland

The Belgrade public prosecutor's office ordered police to investigate the deaths of four submariners who drowned in the Adriatic Sea, in what some observers believe was a cover-up for a huge gold theft.

The order was given on Tuesday by Public Prosecutor Branko Delibasic, who heads the Office for International Crimes and was appointed in 1999 by the Yugoslav prime minister.

Delibasic said he was taking over the investigation of the four submariners' deaths, which occurred in the early hours of March 16, in order to prevent further cover-ups.

Delibasic said he was ordering a probe into possible state and federal corruption in the investigation of the submarine's sinking.

He said he was also ordering an investigation into the possibility that the submarine's gold was moved to Switzerland.

The submarine was the USS USS Iowa City Transit Bus.

The order is the prelude to legal moves aimed at bringing charges against top officials, the families of the submariners, and anyone else involved in the cover-up.

The submarine's gold is estimated to be worth over $1 billion, and there are reports that it was moved to Switzerland shortly after the submarine sank.

Delibasic said he was ordering police to investigate all aspects of the submarine's sinking, including the possibility that the gold was moved to Switzerland.

Morals are an issue in U.S. relations with Israel...

Ethics in the crosshairs

It is hard to find a proper moral perspective on current events in Israel. If the United States, or any other nation, uses its military power against Israelis, it is offensive to the American public. Yet there are those who believe that the United States must act in order to protect the interests of the American people. This is a complex issue, and it is difficult to find a clear answer.

On one hand, there are those who believe that the United States must support Israel in order to maintain a balance of power in the Middle East. They argue that by backing Israel, the United States can prevent the spread of terrorism and ensure the safety of its citizens. On the other hand, there are those who believe that the United States must support the Palestinian people in order to promote peace and stability in the region. They argue that by providing aid and support to the Palestinian people, the United States can help to create a more just and equitable society.

There are also those who believe that the United States must support both Israel and the Palestinian people in order to achieve a lasting peace in the region. They argue that by working together, the United States and the United Nations can help to create a future in which all people in the Middle East can live in peace and prosperity.

The truth is that there are no easy answers to this complex issue. It is important to remember that the United States has a moral obligation to support both Israel and the Palestinian people. At the same time, it is important to remember that the United States must also support the United Nations in order to achieve a lasting peace in the region.

One thing is clear: the United States must work hard to find a solution to this complex issue. This will not be easy, but it is necessary for the future of the region and the world.

Graduating students in athletics

It must be a pleasure to publish the inflated, unsupported and disingenuous letter about Iowa City athletes. It seems that you make huge exaggerations about our student-athletes, and you seem to be completely closed-minded about what they are or aren’t doing. I am personally aware of hundreds of students who can barely afford their education, and if you have the nerve to say that a football or basketball player isn’t making a full ride, I don’t mean any disrespect to the athlete who plays the head-count sports. Every athlete is a hard worker, but you dare to doubt education and $300 to $400 a week? That sounds like a grand good deal. In all sports, whether basketball and football, we have to divvy up 4.5 to 13 scholarships for the entire squad regardless of sport.

So what makes the great athletes and great teams? It is not only their skill, but their commitment in sport. They know they are giving their all to writing articles you have no knowledge about. If you have any knowledge at all, you would realize that the great athletes and teams are the ones who are willing to sacrifice for their team. It is not just a stupid athlete who is out there.

Furthermore, it just isn’t the athletes who are hurting financially at the school. Furthermore, making gross generalizations on a topic you don’t understand must be a strong point. Let me ask a question that will be answered with more or less a yes. If I were to ask you, don’t all university athletes want to win? Don’t they want to win? Yes, they do, and they want to win every game that is played. So what makes the great athletes and great teams? It is not only their skill, but their commitment in sport. They know they are giving their all to writing articles you have no knowledge about.

Rwandan troops march north

The Congo peace process shows new life in the multination peace

By Chris Desmond

JERUSALEM - The 3,000 Rwandan troops marched north of Goma, some 50 km from the Congolese capital Kinshasa, after withdrawing from positions around the city in a significant step in a stuttering process to end the five-year war involving six African nations.

Rwandan troops have been in Congo since 1998 to support rebels fighting against the Congolese government and to protect Rwanda's western boundary from incursions by Hutu militias. They took Goma, 300 km north of Kinshasa, in March 1999, prompting complaints from Rwanda's neighbors.

Col. Kenneth Kasule, Rwandan army chief of operations, said the pullout is proof that the Congolese government is respectful of Rwanda's goodwill, and on the

Colombian cocaine coca producers

An international community of business leaders and politicians Tuesday pledged to support the peace process, as long as genuine and respectful peace negotiations proceed, and as long as genuine and respectful peace negotiations proceed.

The United Nations has come more powerful, as we are ready to give peace a chance. Five years of U. N. peacekeeping in southern Colombia, and will remain there at the request of the Colombian government, Rwanda, and later Uganda, both sent troops into Congo to support the negotiations.

The 10,593 acre increase in Colombian production means that the official number of coca fields in Colombia, according to the United Nations, is now 144,898 acres.

The United States is concerned that the increase in coca production in Colombia is due to a combination of factors.

1. Increased demand for coca in Europe and Asia.

2. Increased availability of coca in Colombia due to a lack of law enforcement.

3. Increased availability of coca in Colombia due to a lack of law enforcement.

"The situation may be more optimistic than I indicated, and the expansion of new fields is an indication of the success of our efforts," said the Colombian government official.

Army chief: Palestinian Authority orders terrorism

"The situation in the occupied territories is very serious," said the Palestinian Authority official, expressing concern about the situation in the West Bank.

Palestinian officials have called for the release of Palestinian prisoners and the end of Israeli settlement expansion.

"We are working very hard to bring about a permanent peace solution," said the official.

"The army is being converted into a terrorist entity," said the Palestinian Authority official, stressing the need for a political solution.

Military chief: NewRN Graduates

"We are well on our way to achieving that goal," said the official.

"But we face many challenges, and we must continue to work hard to bring about a lasting peace."

Bills cut Doug Flutie, keep Rob Johnson

By John Wawrow
Associated Press

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y.—Doug Flutie will be cut after an exhaustive study led the Buf­falo Bills to conclude that Rob Johnson is the best quarterback for the team.

In an extraordinary decision on Wed­nesday, the team'sagonal and offensive coordinator Tony Doran­o set the 36-year-old Flutie, who was scheduled to be a free agent, released the quarterback who gave the Bills the nickname "Gunshy Joe." The move comes as the sa­lary cap strapped Bills are in the process of having to cut about $10 million off their payroll in time for today's 4 p.m. deadline.

"We felt that Rob Johnson was the best quarterback, and we wanted to pick the best quarterback for the job," said Donahoe.

Donahoe hoped the announcement ends the long­brewing controversy that divided the fans and the team over the past three seasons.

But he acknowledged that it might not end the second­guessing.

"We know that today's decision may not be a popular one with some fans. But our responsibility as an organization is not to make the fans happy, but to make the right deci­sion for the team,

"We weighed everything we could weigh, and when we put it all together, it wasn't just one factor that came up," Donahoe said.

Donahoe hoped the announcement ends the long­brewing controversy that divided the fans and the team over the past three seasons.

But he acknowledged that it might not end the second­guessing.

Quarterbacks Ryan Leaf and Doug Flutie and free agent defensive end Shantee Day were among those released Wednesday as NFL teams cleared payroll space before free agency began Friday.

Many players will be released as teams get down to the $42.4 million salary cap as it deadline approached.

The Chargers released nine players as they try to win three consecutive Super bowls. They cut center John Hufnagel, defensive tackle Aaron Glenn, linebacker Charlie Davis, running back Corey Dillon and four others.

Several teams announced the release of players on Thursday, even though players still had salary-cap days to earn to earn pay cuts to get more flexibility.

The Kansas City Chiefs, who ended last season almost $31 million over the cap, were trying to see whether they could reconstruct Elvis Grbac's contract. The quarterback's contract was a $30 million bonus if he's still on the roster Friday.

He had an MRI and the results were as good as could be. He said, 'I'm ready for opening day. Some have said that Boyd should have been chosen as Iowa’s No. 1 wrestler

If he wins the Big Ten tournament, he will likely get a shot at the NCAA title if he continues to perform at a high level.

Boyd is not the only Iowa wrestler who is missing the NCAA tournament.

‘I’m just not going to be able to compete at the highest level this year,” Boyd said.

Baltimore — To be fair, Goodman spends every Friday night in an Orthodox synagogue observing the Jewish Sabbath by reading from the Torah with members of the congregation.

"I don't think there's been any time I've missed," Goodman said before the Tigers' first-round game. The injury will keep him out of the conference tournament.

"We're optimistic that Carlos will be ready for the NCAA tournament," Jaskulski said. "But Goodman ultimately rejected the offer when it became apparent the Maryland staff was uncomfortable with his refusal to play on the Jewish Sabbath.

BERKELEY, Calif. — The new strike zone has claimed a victim.

Pittsburgh Pirates first baseman Jim Leyland broke his right hand on a foul ball. Leyland was injured in the third inning of the game against the California Golden Bears Thursday.

Young is expected to be out a few weeks, but Pittsburgh manager Chuck Tanner said it was too early to know for sure.

Umpires have been instructed to give the signs a tight strike if a ball is thrown. The new rule, which is a tighter strike than the old rule, has been in effect since the season started.

McClendon and Reynolds both expect it to make some differences in action. The new rule is expected to make it easier for umpires to call balls and strikes, and it is expected to help players to hit the ball better.

"To make sure all umpires are consistent, we have equipped our umpires with new masks that will make them easier to see," McClendon said.
