UI prepares new safety blueprint

■ The plan will focus on safety precautions for people with disabilities.

By Andrew Bixby
The Daily Iowan

The UI is in the process of unveiling a new safety plan that would protect students, faculty and staff in the case of an emergency or violent incident.

The Critical Incident Management Plan aims to educate those who occupy university buildings on how to safely handle emergencies or situations dealing with bomb threats, explosions, floods, fires, tornadoes, civil protests and other incidents, said Chuck Green, the UI assistant vice president for Public Safety. The plan began as an idea in March 1999; it was fashioned after a similar, unfinished plan that was in development six or seven years earlier, he said.

The main priority of the plan is to establish a place of refuge for people with disabilities in the event that an evacuation is necessary, Green said. Eventually, every floor of each university building will have a designated place where disabled persons can stay safely. They can be easily found and quickly evacuated.

Peter Blanck, a law professor and the director of the university's Law, Health Policy and Disability Center, said the plan is a step in the right direction and that such a plan is necessary for all state institutions.

"This is a very good first step," he said from Washington, D.C., Thursday. "It's an opportunity to enhance knowledge of safety issues for everyone on campus."

The plan could have positive effects that will "spill over" on other members of the community who may have difficulty quickly evacuating a building, namely injured athletes or students, Blanck said.

Susan Vess, the director of Student Disability Services, sees the plan as a more systematic look at an already established program.

Campus mourns prof's death

■ Alan Widiss was on a trip to D.C. with students when he was stricken with a heart attack.

By Bridget Stratton and
Jessi Todden
The Daily Iowan

A longtime UI law professor died of a heart attack Wednesday while in Washington, D.C., on a trip with six of his students.

Alan Widiss, 62, who paid for the trip, accompanied students from his Church and State Seminar class to Washington to watch Wednesday's Supreme Court arguments, said N. William Hines, the dean of the UI College of Law.

After visiting the famed court and other government offices, Widiss and his wife, Ellen Widiss, joined the students for dinner, Hines said. The students had already left the restaurant when Widiss collapsed.

"He was a very successful and beloved teacher," Hines said.

Widiss joined the UI in 1965 as an assistant professor and became a professor in 1978. Throughout his career, he established himself as an expert on insurance law, giving lectures on the topic around the country. In addition, he was an adviser for the American Bar Association Litigation Section's Task Force on Environmental Litigation, and he chaired several committees for the ABA, Association of American Law Schools and the UI. Widiss also worked as a consultant and witness on insurance litigation.

Ellen Widiss, who traveled with him, said she will remember his zest for life and his love of teaching.

"He loved being a professor. He didn't ever want to retire," she said. "He wanted to work forever."

Carie-Megan Flood, a first-year law student, said Widiss was the first professor whom she got to know. Flood was in Widiss' Contracts One Small Section course in the fall, where, she said, he helped to reinforce her interest in contract law.

The gyro of the Pedestrian Mall masses

It's Friday night on the Pedestrian Mall. The 10-degree temperature actually feels much colder because of blasts of wind, and there is a freezing-rain advisory for the Iowa City area.

But for the employees of George's Best Gyros, it's just another night of work.

George Mihalopoulos, "the gyro man," has been selling his famous product on the Ped Mall since 1984. Every Monday through Saturday night, Mihalopoulos parks his cart on College Street between the Union Bar and Brothers. For $3.75, patrons can have fresh gyros made right before their eyes in fewer than 10 seconds.

UI alum brings 'Green Arrow' back

■ A UI grad who resurrected a popular comic book will hold a signing Saturday.

By Jackie Hammers
The Daily Iowan

After foiling evil nemeses and sacrificing himself to save the city, the "Green Arrow" was presumed dead years ago. But thanks to a UI alum and a famous movie director, the hero was resurrected earlier this week.

Phil Hester will hold a signing Saturday for the comic book that he recreated with director Kevin Smith.

Hester, who illustrates the new series, will sign "The Green Arrow" from 1-4 p.m. at Daydream Comics, 112 E. College St. The entire first run of 101,000 comic books sold out before it even hit shelves. DC Comics has scheduled a second run.

"I cannot even remember the last time that happened, it has been so long," said Adam Mix, Daydreams' owner. Daydreams sold approximately 85 books, more copies of a single comic than the store usually sells in a month.

"We ordered plenty because we knew there would be a lot of interest in this signing," Mix said. "We wanted to have enough so nobody would be turned away."

Hester is known in comic circles for his work on such comics as "The Wretch," "The Crow" and "Swamp Thing." Smith, who wrote the comic book and has directed such movies as Clerks and Mallrats, had previously worked with Hester before starting this series last summer.

"We wanted it to come out on time because we knew this book had a good chance of being a hit," Hester said from his North English, Iowa, home Wednesday. "We are about six

Despite world outcry, Taliban destroys statues

■ As the world expresses its horror, troops target two ancient giant Buddhas.

By Mohamed Gul
Associated Press

KABUL, Afghanistan — Defying an international outcry, Taliban soldiers Thursday began destroying all statues in Afghanistan — even targeting two soaring, ancient statues of Buddha carved into the face of a mountain.

The ruling Islamic militia said it sought to purge the nation of idolatrous images, but its closest ally, Pakistan, said the action could be a backlash against Afghanistan's international isolation, including U.N. sanctions.

Pakistani Interior Minister Moinuddin Haider told the Associated Press the Taliban's order "may have been an act of defiance brought on by the isolation it feels."

As troops fanned out with everything from rocket launchers to tanks to destroy statues, cultural leaders worldwide expressed horror.

The head of UNESCO asked other Islamic nations to pressure the Taliban to stop, while the director of the Metropolitan Museum in New York pleaded with Afghan officials to give the artifacts to foreign museums.

"In Afghanistan, they are destroying statues that the entire world considers to be masterpieces," UNESCO Director-General Koichiro Matsuura said. "This icono-

Mix-up briefly frees Thomson

■ The convicted sex offender was sent home after serving a federal sentence.

By Kellie Doyle
The Daily Iowan

After a convicted sex offender was mistakenly freed for two weeks, his attorney said Thursday he had never seen anything like it.

Roland Thomson, 72, was sent back to his West Des Moines home after completing a 366-day sentence in federal prison, said his attorney, Bill Kutmus of Des Moines.

But Thomson still had another two years of prison time to serve for the state, according to his March 2000 sentence.

"The state apparently failed to notify the federal government (of the detainment)," Kutmus said. "But I don't know who's at fault, who's to blame."

Thomson will most likely not receive further penalty for the mistake, whose fault remains debatable, Kutmus said.

"I can't see it. It would be just plain silly," he said.

Neither Kutmus nor Johnson County Attorney J. Patrick White could recall a similar incident.

"It's very unusual," White said. "But it's a very unusual case."

Kutmus also said he does not consider the error a huge deal, especially because no harm was done.

"Had it been a serious felony, that would have been different," he said.

Roland Thomson was sentenced to one year in federal prison and two years in state prison last March after he pleaded guilty to taking sexually suggestive photographs of students at Lucas Elementary School, 830 Southlawn Drive, in 1998.

After being released from federal prison in Rochester, Minn., Thomson reported to his probation officer in Cedar Rapids, who instructed him to return home and check in once a month.

Johnson County authorities contacted Thomson on Feb. 27 — 14 days later — after discovering he was not where he was supposed to be. They asked him to turn himself in at 1 p.m. the following day — a request that the sickly Thomson, along side his wife Shirley, punctually met.

Shirley Thomson, a former teacher at Lucas, was charged with child endangerment in February 2000. She allegedly permitted her husband to take photographs of her students despite knowing he had a past of sexual misconduct with children.

Roland Thomson was immediately transported to Iowa Medical & Classification Center at Oakdale, where he will remain until authorities decide which local facility will better suit his needs. Thomson requires medical attention for his diabetes, arthritis and heart problems, Kutmus said.

"He's just a very sickly man," he said. "When he was in (federal) prison, he was always in the hospital."

Oakdale is expected to make a recommendation on Roland Thomson's location within 30 days, Kutmus said.

Kutmus said he plans to request that Roland Thomson's state sentencing be waived because of his poor health during a hearing April 19.

Clinton aides opposed Rich pardon

■ Three of Clinton's top advisers testify that they lobbied against the controversial action.

By Deb Riechmann
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former President Clinton's closest advisers — White House Chief of Staff John Podesta, counsel Beth Nolan and Bruce Lindsey — told a House committee Thursday they strongly opposed his pardon of fugitive billionaire Marc Rich and thought it would never happen.

"The staff informed the president that it was our view that the pardon should not be granted," Podesta told the House Government Reform Committee, which is investigating whether political and other donations or payments influenced the pardon of the Rich.

GOP rams tax plan through panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Racing to do President Bush's bidding, House Republicans pushed across-the-board tax cuts through committee Thursday, clearing the way for a floor vote next week on the cornerstone of the new administration's economic program.

The vote in the Ways and Means Committee was 23-15, along party lines, as Democrats sharply criticized the bill as flawed and called the unusually quick action by the panel a poor omen for bipartisanship.

Essentially what the president is proposing is a pay raise for the average American," asserted Rep. Jerry Weller of Illinois, one of several Republicans on the panel who argued that the bill would stimulate the economy as well as provide relief to taxpayers.

Committee approves 24-hour waiting period on abortion

DES MOINES — A House committee Thursday approved a 24-hour waiting period for women seeking an abortion, even though the governor is certain to veto the bill if it passes.

Supporters of the bill said a cooling off period will give women time to think about a major decision such as having an abortion.

"It's fairly common sense," said Rep. Chuck Larson, R-Cedar Rapids. "It doesn't bother me."

Opponents said it's yet another effort to chip away at a woman's right to choose.

UI Web site details factory sites

■ The new page discloses information pertaining to companies that make Hawkeye apparel.

By Anne Webbeking
The Daily Iowan

UI officials Thursday unveiled a Web site listing factory locations and contact information for the 360 companies that produce UI apparel.

The information includes the names, addresses, phone numbers, e-mail addresses, names of contact people and product descriptions for 2,296 factories under license.

For Nike and Reebok — two of the most prominent and controversial licensees — most of those factories are out of U.S. boundaries.

Forty-three Nike factories are listed, 11 of which are located in the United States, according to the Web site. Of the 26 Reebok factories, the one in Paris, Ky., is the only one in the country.

Steve Parrott, the director of university communications, said the university wanted to make the information public so that outside groups, such as UI Students Against Sweatshops and labor watchdog organizations such as the Workers Rights Consortium or the Fair Labor Association can use the data to examine the factories of the licensees.

"If you don't know where the factories are, you can't get out and monitor them," he said.

The information also lets licensees know they could be investigated, Parrott said.

Sherene Judeh, a member of SAS, said the posting is a step in the right direction and that members of her group could now look into some of the disclosed factories.

Judeh, along with UI graduate students Michael Marchman and Laura Crossett, visited with a Mexican workers' union in November 2000. The group presented a list of addresses of factories in which UI officials said Hawkeye apparel is made. Every address was either incorrect or the location of a business office, Marchman has said.

Parrott said factory information could be false, but the university wouldn't investigate whether the addresses are accurate.

Being able to see the information up on the Web site doesn't matter as much as making sure that factories are monitored to ensure the rights of workers that make UI apparel, Judeh said.

She also said the university needs to sever ties with companies that have not signed the university's Code of Conduct, such as Nike and Reebok.

Veterans' budget concerns supervisors

■ For third year, the veterans commission needs more money.

By Chao Xiong
The Daily Iowan

The Johnson County Board of Supervisors expressed concern about possible inaccurate budgeting by a departmental director after he asked them for more funding for the third consecutive year.

Leo Baier, the director of the Johnson County Commission of Veteran Affairs, asked the board to immediately advance $15,000, the rest of the commission's fiscal year 2001 budget, during its formal meeting Thursday. The amount is reserved for release later this spring to finance the commission through June. Baier also asked for an unspecified amount of additional funds after exhausting this year's budget, which totals $59,922.

The board typically releases three-fourths of a department's budget at the start of a fiscal year and distributes the remaining funds later. Baier has asked for an early release of those funds the past three years after underestimating the commission's financial need.

The board said it may meet with Baier to discuss the commission's financial needs before voting on his proposals during its March 8 meeting.

"He's totally out of money," said Jeffrey Horne, the Johnson County budget coordinator. "The board wants to fully support veterans. It doesn't want to have to go through this process of making amendments every year to do so."

An increase in the number of veterans seeking aid from the commission, which offers housing and funeral services among others, and rent and utility hikes have led to insufficient funds, Baier said.

To date, the commission has used 96 percent, $24,547, of its budget reserved for veterans' rent. Approximately $3,585 was spent on rent in February alone. Between March and June 2000, $8,088 was used for rent.

"I've been cutting back for quite some time," Baier said. "I don't now what else to do unless you release more funds to us. It's scary, really."

The commission's budget has increased each fiscal year; it is tentatively budgeted to receive $65,793 for fiscal year 2002, which begins on July 1 and ends June 30, 2002. The board wants Baier to accurately assess the commission's financial need at the start of the budgeting process to avoid last-minute amendments, Horne said.

Board Chairman Mike Lehman suggested that Baier begin referring his clients to other sources of aid, such as the Johnson County Department of Human Services.

"If they have to tell people the cookie jar is empty, so be it," he said.

thoughtful and concerned, and now it's just going through and making sure it has all of its ducks in a row," she said.

The process of locating and identifying these places will begin before summer and will require the help of the Iowa City Fire Department, Green said. No completion date has been set for the project.

"When you're talking about every floor in every building, it's hard to put a time table on it," he said.

The second part of the plan is updating and strategically placing safety reference cards that show what to do in case of specific emergencies. They will be placed on the floors of most university buildings for easier access, Green said.

The current cards were created three years ago and have become outdated. Further, only a select group of faculty and staff have copies of the cards.

"They don't do any good inside someone's desk or locker," Green said.

The new cards will be printed on white paper so that they can be easily photocopied. A representative from Public Safety will work with each academic department to devise the best location for the cards, Green said.

Workers will begin updating and placing the new safety cards this summer, when the buildings are less occupied, he said.

UI mourns loss of popular law prof

Although she only knew Widiss for one semester, she said, he made a permanent impression on her.

"He was constantly challenging us to improve our writing skills," Flood said. "He realized the potential in all of us, and I will be a better lawyer because of his teaching."

She said she will remember Widiss as a professor of high integrity who made himself available to his students.

UI law student Josh McClatchey was shocked to learn Thursday morning that his former professor had passed away.

"When I had him, he seemed to be in good health," he said.

McClatchey said Widiss' death will be a great loss to the law profession and the university.

"He was a great professor. I really enjoyed having him," he said. "He's really going to be missed."

Not only was Widiss known for his love of teaching but also as one of the outstanding scholars on insurance law in the country, said UI law Professor David Vernon. Vernon worked closely with Widiss for 35 years and was collaborating with him on a book about contract law.

"He was a good teacher, scholar and a delightful colleague," Vernon said. "He was very outgoing and helped a lot of people."

The students were scheduled to meet with Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, Thursday; they will fly back today, Hines said.

Information about the memorial service will be released today. The law school will hold a memorial service for Widiss next week.

months ahead on the book, so it is unlikely that it will ever be late."

Though Hester has held past signings at Daydreams, often bringing examples of his other work for patrons to view, Mix said he expects this one to get the highest turnout ever.

"There has been some talk of the book for a while," Mix said. "It is something that people have kind of been looking out for."

Hester also expressed optimism for the turnout at this signing.

"In the past, it has only been a trickle, but that has been during the summer when all of the college kids were gone," he said. This is also the first time Hester has held a signing on a Saturday afternoon.

For comic readers such as Ken Caldwell, the rebirth of a character they already knew sparked interest in the book. Also, additional interest was generated because it was drawn by a local artist.

"I have always liked the character," said the 26-year-old Coralville reader. "Phil is a local yokel, so to speak, and it is nice to support people from the area who have been successful."

Hester began his career in comics as a 19-year-old student, though his love of drawing started much earlier, he said.

"I went to art school for the purpose of getting into comics," he said. "It was at a time when, if you could hold a pencil, you could get work — and I could hold a pencil."

Mix said he expected the popularity of the new book because it is about a character many readers have become familiar with since the first appearance in November 1941.

"There is nostalgia for a character that has not been around for a long time," he said. "It could be interesting to new readers and to those who are familiar with the character already."

Taliban targets statues, 2 Buddhas clastic determination shocks me."

"All officials, including the Ministry of Vice and Virtue, have been given the go-ahead to destroy the statues," the Taliban's Information Minister Qadrattullah Jamal said Thursday. "The destruction work will be done by any means available to them."

"All the statues all over the country will be destroyed," he said.

It was impossible to confirm what Taliban troops had destroyed so far — particularly whether they had begun demolishing two huge Buddha statues carved into a cliff at Bamiyan. One of the statues is 175 feet high and dates to the 5th century; the other is 120 feet tall and dates to the 3rd century.

The road to Bamiyan, 90 miles west of Kabul, was blocked by snow Thursday. There are soldiers in Bamiyan, but journalists have not been allowed to go there. The Taliban also refused to let reporters inside the Kabul Museum, repository for thousands of Buddhist antiquities.

The Taliban's supreme leader, Mullah Mohammed Omar, ordered the destruction in an edict Monday, saying such images were contrary to Islam.

"These idols have been gods of the infidels, who worshipped them, and these are respected even now and perhaps maybe turned into gods again," his edict said.

The Taliban, which espouses a strict brand of Islamic law, rules approximately 95 percent of Afghanistan; it has been batting northern-based opposition forces for years. Only Pakistan, Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates recognize the militia's rule.

Religious leaders in Pakistan said they understood the Taliban order.

"Hundreds of people are dying. Afghanistan has been destroyed by war, and the West imposes sanctions," Fazle-ur Rehman, the head of Pakistan's Jamiat-e-Ulema, or Party of Islamic Clerics, told AP. Western nations "don't have any respect for the people. Maybe that is why they have taken this action."

The United Nations imposed sanctions against the Taliban in January, demanding the surrender of Osama bin Laden, who is charged in the United States in the deadly bombings of two U.S. embassies in Africa. The Taliban has refused, saying there is no proof bin Laden is involved in terrorism and noting that he is its guest.

Afghanistan has been overwhelmingly Muslim since around the 8th century. But it has relics from the pre-Islamic era when, under Persian and Central Asian rulers, it was crisscrossed by Buddhists from China and India who erected many pilgrimage sites.

The 175-foot statue at Bamiyan is thought to be the world's tallest statue in which Buddha is standing. There are an estimated 6,000 pieces of Buddhist artwork in the Kabul Museum and a 23-foot reclining Buddha in Ghazni province, said Brigitte Neubacher of the Pakistan-based Society for the Preservation of Afghanistan's Cultural Heritage.

Even the Pakistani Foreign

Ministry pleaded for the preservation of the ancient statues, which it called "part of the world's cultural heritage."

UNESCO's Matsuura said he had contacted officials from Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, Qatar, Iran and Tajikistan as well as the Organization of the Islamic Conference.

"They have all expressed their unconditional support and have pledged to do all that they can to put a stop to this destruction," he said.

Iowa City in 1977 to study computer science at the UI and work at his uncle's restaurant. After seven years of managing his uncle's restaurant, Mihalopoulos decided to start his own business, but he never forgot the advice his uncle gave him.

"He told me, 'If you want to sell gyros, you have to be No. 1, never No. 2,'" Mihalopoulos said, adding he believes he is No. 1.

In particular, Mihalopoulos is proud of his unique gyro sauce, a mixture of sour cream, cucumber, parsley and garlic. The smell from the stand makes people notice, he said.

"Some people will walk by and say, 'Smells good,' and I tell them, 'Tastes better,'" he said.

9:45 p.m. — Mihalopoulos and company — tonight John Torosyan, Alex Dimitrov and Irakli Tsilosani will help staff the cart — arrive at the storage building on Gilbert Street. Mihalopoulos and Torosyan promptly begin loading the gyro sauce, tomatoes, onions, gyro meat and pita bread onto the truck. The vegetables, meat and pita bread are all prepared downtown, but the sauce is mixed earlier in the day.

10:15 p.m. — Torosyan, Dimitrov and Tsilosani park the gyro cart at its regular spot. Dimitrov and Tsilosani begin chopping vegetables while Torosyan cooks the meat.

UI freshman Josh Bedwell wants to buy a gyro, but Torosyan says they won't be ready for another five minutes. In the meantime, Bedwell strikes up a conversation with Mihalopoulos and praises him for his gyros.

"It's good food. These guys do good work," Bedwell said. "Students love this guy. Everyone wants to meet George."

Midnight — Business for George's has not been too good tonight. Mihalopoulos said it's because of the bad weather, but he still expects a rush later. During the lulls, Torosyan, Dimitrov and Tsilosani read a book about chess strategies.

1 a.m. — Business starts to pick up. The bars aren't closed, but people are heading home for the night already.

Sarah Smith, a university junior, is one of the many bar goers who chooses not to wear a coat. She appears to be cold but says it's worth it to have a gyro.

"The gyros are good, and the guys are sweet," she says. Huddled behind Tsilosani, she says, "Plus, they keep me warm."

1:45 a.m. — The bars are closed, and business at George's takes off. The guys work at a furious pace with Tsilosani heating the pita bread, Torosyan putting the gyros together and Dimitrov handling the money.

2:15 a.m. — The last gyro is served, and the guys are ready to head back to the storage facility. After Dimitrov and Torosyan count the tip money, they split it between them. The freezing rain, which was a nuisance before, has picked up.

2:35 a.m. — Everything has been unloaded at the storage facility. Mihalopoulos says tonight's business was only "fair," blaming the inclement weather. Despite the weather, the crew of George's will be back the next night to keep the 17-year-old tradition in Iowa City alive.

"In Iowa City," Mihalopoulos said, "it's a tradition to have a George's gyro."

Gallery Walk serves up 'emotional soul food'

■ M.C. Ginsberg and 12 other businesses will host this year's spring Gallery Walk.

By Becca Sutlive
The Daily Iowan

Mark Ginsberg, the owner of M.C. Ginsberg Jewelry & Objects of Art, won't be found slinging hash or flipping burgers Friday evening, but he will be serving up the public a hefty helping of soul food. "Emotional soul food," that is.

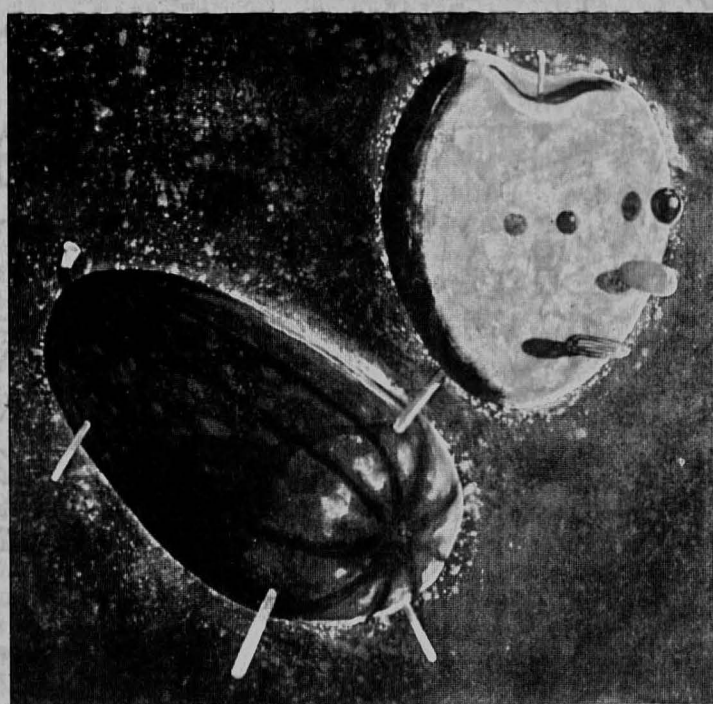

Joined by 12 fellow downtown businesses, M.C. Ginsberg, 110 E. Washington St., and cohorts will host joint opening receptions during this year's spring Gallery Walk.

What Ginsberg refers to as "emotional soul food" is more commonly labeled as art. Whatever one may call it, today's Gallery Walk is a testament that Iowa City's arts community is thriving along with the help of locally owned businesses.

The 13 firms will feature a wide range of works, including national and international artists, but local artists are at the center of many of the exhibits. Sanjay Jani, who co-owns AKAR Architecture and Design with his wife, Jigna Jani, will host two exhibits at their business, 4 S. Linn St. Sanjay Jani, who's hosted exhibits during Gallery Walk for the last three years, said Iowa City is "wealthy when it comes to artists."

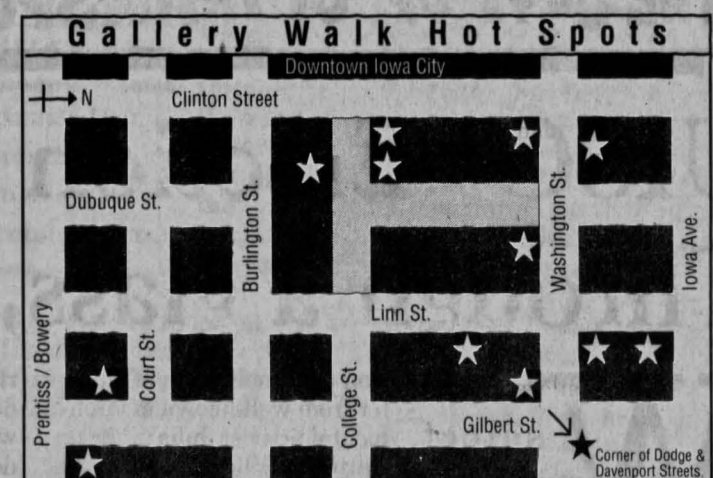

AKAR will feature drawings by Peter Feldstein, a local artist and UI professor of art. Ranging from minute black-and-white silhouettes to large-scale, multi-colored/layered prints, Feldstein's drawings are done digitally by computer, but they give the illusion of being drawn by hand. Feldstein, who's taught at the UI for 27 years, has been refining his digital drawings since the late 1980s. He discovered that many people interpret his abstract images as cultural artifacts, such as tools or costumes.

"I think there's a common human memory, but we tend to let it go," he said. "I see these images as reflecting on that past, a common human history."

Nick Hotek, the president of Hudson River Gallery, 538 S. Gilbert St., echoed Sanjay Jani's sentiments on local talent.

"I think in this area there are some phenomenal artists," he said. "I'm blown away by the abundance of talent."

Hudson River Gallery will feature the work of three photographers, two of whom work locally: Conrad Marvin and Kathy Wachel. Wachel, who doubles as a librarian at the university, has practiced photography for years as a hobby but has just recently begun showing her work publicly. Her exhibit will feature color photos including street scenes and views of cemeteries.

Wachel admits there are not many who can make a living creating art, but that's just what Connie and Michael Roberts have been doing for the past 10 years in Iowa City. Renowned both nationally and locally, the Roberts will both have work on display at Iowa Artisans/DJ Rinner Goldsmith, 117 E. College St. Michael Roberts, an accomplished portrait painter, will showcase self-portraits along with portraits of friends and family that he calls "allegorical paintings."

Connie Roberts' wood carvings, which range in size and price from a $10 pencil to a $3,000 gargantuan, all feature a fully functioning whistle. What she refers to as "hands-on, lips-on art" is featured in collections owned by celebrities from Whoopi Goldberg to Allan Greenspan.

The Art Mission Fine Art & Framing, 114 S. Linn St., is the newest business on Gallery Walk. Owner Kathleen Rash has exhibited her own artwork for the past five years in Gallery Walk but has only hosted an exhibition in the walk once prior to tonight's event. She said she is thrilled to have her business in downtown Iowa City and hopes that the walk will help emphasize the positive aspects of downtown rather than the negatives.

"Downtown is changing, but it's always changing," Rash said. "The focus is on businesses leaving, but we need to focus more on what's here. It's not all

The spitballs of ska rock out with style

■ MU330 will take over the stage of Gabe's this weekend.

By Shawn Sebastian
The Daily Iowan

The kids in the back of the of the classroom shooting spitballs and making fart noises with their armpits have taken over. MU330 plays a blend of ska, punk and pop that shifts from genre to genre but never fails to exude a characteristic sense of humor and maintain a high level of energy. The band will bring its sophomore high-jinks to Gabe's Saturday at 9 p.m.

Sophomore may be overestimating the maturity of the band, considering that the members actually formed the group during their freshman year of high school. MU330 takes its name from the music room where lead singer Dan Potthast and the other members first met.

Since then, the band has grown to be one of the most popular ska acts to come out of the St. Louis area, and it has an extremely devoted following throughout the Midwest. Despite their success, the group's members have not acquired the pre-tension and arrogance of typical rock stars. Before he devoted himself to MU330 as an actual job, Potthast installed air conditioners, and Ted Moll, the drummer, actually learned to play drums as a form of therapy.

Chris Diebold plays bass, Rob Bell plays the trombone, and Gerry Lundquist, formerly of Skankin' Pickle, plays the trombone. Lundquist also serves as the band's driver and every so often sheds his mild-mannered trombonist alter-ego to transform himself into the Ayatollah of Rock and Rolla.

MU330 has played at Gabe's several times and has developed quite a following.

"The MU330 show at Gabe's was the best ska show I've ever seen," said sophomore Britta Mueller. "There was an extremely high level of energy, and the songs are really funny. It's just happy music, it's not heavy-metal darkness."

In addition to the band's humor, Mueller appreciated the respect that the band showed the crowd.

"A guy was getting pretty out of control in the mosh pit, pushing women around and stuff, and the guys stopped right in the middle of the song and told the guy to chill out," Mueller said.

"It's good to know that they're not only talented and funny, but they're also really good guys."

Freshman John Cline is friends with the members of N.I.L.S., a band that frequently opens for MU330, and he has followed its music for several years. He says that despite all of their immature shenanigans on stage, the guys are maturing musically.

"They're moving away from their ska roots a little bit to a more mid-tempo pop-punk," he said. "I think that their CD Crab Rangoon marked the start of their shift. I wouldn't say that their sound has started to get old, but it has definitely matured."

Perhaps MU330 has achieved a level of musical maturity and its sound has progressed since the members' freshman year in Catholic high school. But as long as they are on stage, they will continue to make references to "Star Trek," rip off their shirts like Hollywood Hulk Hogan, and never take themselves too seriously.

Cruise cruises to Celebrity 100 top

NEW YORK (AP) — Money isn't everything, right? Fame together with money is. Or so Forbes figures.

Using a formula that combines the two, the magazine says Tom Cruise tops its latest Celebrity 100 list.

Hollywood stars and athletes dominated the list, released Thursday, with 26 coming from the world of sports, including No. 2 Tiger Woods.

Chefs, models and authors made it too, as well as what the magazine called "the non-celebrity ty celebrity, courtesy of reality television." Richard Hatch, the winner of last summer's "Survivor," ranked 77th.

Making the top 10 were three teen sensations — Britney Spears, the Backstreet Boys and 'N Sync.

Jennifer Lopez, who recently had the No. 1 movie and album in the country, made her debut on the list, as did Ben Affleck and the "Friends" women: Jennifer Aniston, Courteney Cox Arquette and Lisa Kudrow.

Last year's No. 1, Julia Roberts, fell to No. 16 despite her hit movie Erin Brockovich and being the odds-on favorite for the best-actress Oscar this month.

The GOP's stop-gap oil plan ...

Find a permanent solution

Senate Republicans released their energy legislation proposal Monday, calling for increased production and drilling for oil in the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge. The legislation's sponsors hope to see a bill that combines their proposals and President Bush's energy recommendations passed sometime this summer.

The Republicans' energy proposal is intended to reduce the U.S. dependence on imported oil, which accounts for more than half of the 18 million barrels consumed in the United States each day. The bill seeks to achieve this goal almost exclusively by increasing U.S. oil and energy production through tax subsidies and loosened regulations.

While the increased energy production that the Republican bill calls for may be a temporary solution for America's energy problems, the fossil-fuel sources of this energy will not last forever. Eventually, legislators will be forced to examine the unsustainable consumption habits and exportation that made Americans so dependent upon domestic energy and foreign oil in the first place.

The sponsors of the bill see such a shortage of domestic oil production that they want to open the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to oil drilling, yet they ignore the fact that the United States exports 50,000-90,000 barrels of Alaskan oil every day. Instead of spoiling an environmental preserve, Senate Republicans should push to keep the oil that Alaska currently produces in the country. Legislators should also expand their efforts to promote energy conservation.

The Republican bill currently calls for tax breaks for families that purchase fuel-efficient cars, but it needs to go further. Congress should begin to require the automobile industry to produce cars and trucks with better fuel efficiency. Federal fuel-efficiency standards have not been updated since the 1970s, when light trucks and SUVs accounted for approximately 20 percent of cars sold. Today, the same vehicles (which average 12-16 miles per gallon of gasoline) account for more than half of all new car sales.

The facts of the matter are simple. America cannot become less dependent upon foreign oil without decreasing its energy consumption and handling its own energy resources responsibly. We don't need legislation that promotes quick-fix energy production without also addressing the needs for responsible management of domestic oil and updated fuel efficiency standards.

UISG Election 2001: Through a glass, darkly

Who will select your next

UISG president?

I don't know. They haven't gone on record yet.

From now until the UISG elections on March 5 and 6, few student groups will hold as much power over the future of the student body as does the Student Elections Board. This six-member panel, chaired by Melissa Lettiere, is endowed with the power to control virtually all aspects of the UISG election:

Who can talk?

What can they say?

Where can they say it?

In other words, the Elections Board makes sure that the candidates play by the rules ... except there are no rules.

Section III, Item 4 of the UISG Spring 2001 Elections Code, the guideline for campaign materials, indicated that "all materials must be pre-approved by the Elections Board."

Section IV outlines the definition of "campaigning" for half of that space. And the only indication of what is acceptable and unacceptable is this:

Prior to the distribution of any campaign material through any medium, all candidates shall give to the Board a copy of said material and wait for approval before distribution.

All inquiries are answered on a "Need to No-Comment" basis. Don't call us, we'll call you. Good luck at the polls.

The Klenske-Rossi slate was fined $50 for the submission and publication of a letter from well-known environmental activist Julia Butterfly Hill to the DI.

They didn't write the letter. Hill did, on Circle of Life Foundation letterhead. I published the letter in the same manner as I do all other letters. And Klenske-Rossi paid the price — $50, along with $50 more in other fines. In the context of a $1,500 campaign-spending cap, that's hardly chump change.

Oh, and who filed the complaint? That's anyone's guess, and the Elections Board isn't talking.

The Elections Board and Student Judicial Court are meticulously crafting their final rulings. Their final rulings, of course will be moot. The UISG campaign effectively lasts two weeks.

Fourteen days to get the message out. Fourteen days to leave it all on the table.

Or, in Klenske's case, 14 days to sit, stunned, while waiting for a decree from on high.

UI student politics is a stunningly incestuous affair. Composed mostly of political-science majors, year in and year out we see the same crowd floating through the system. Candidates for office, election officials, campaign-support teams.

Like a Redneck wedding — the guest list never changes. We just keep rearranging the chairs.

The parties cross paths so often — student groups, study groups, campaigns and keggers. The opportunity for ulterior motives is undeniable. I don't believe that that is at work here — but how can students be sure that this election is on the level?

We can't. And why not? Because the line never changes:

No comment.

Can we know the truth?

Not now.

When will we know the truth?

No comment.

Anything else?

Go away.

Without the objective transparency of an on-the-record process, students are left to cast their votes with incomplete information.

Eventually, the final reports and opinions will see daylight — maybe days from now, maybe weeks from now. Just in time for the election to be comfortably forgotten. Just in time for the issue to be wholly irrelevant.

We've seen this all before — last year, when the final days of the UISG election were marred by charges of inappropriate conduct. Campaigning in ITCs. Unverifiable petition signatures.

Last year, it was the Brown-Bare ticket that was held down by a Student Elections Board that it felt was playing "dirty politics." "It's really quite obvious that he's targeting our ticket," Marquez Brown told us.

Now, the bodies overseeing Election '01 include two former members of the Brown-Bare ticket. Hopefully, they and the the Elections Board will remember that time is of the essence in these matters.

In the meantime, let's hope that Candidate Klenske learned his lesson: Play by the rules.

What rules?

No comment.

Rethinking sanctions on Iraq ...

Stop starving the innocent

"Four thousand five hundred children under the age of 5 are dying each month from hunger and disease ... The situation is disastrous for children. Many are living on the very margin of survival."

This October 1996 statement from UNICEF is not a description of African famine or South American poverty. Rather, it describes the effects of a decade of crippling sanctions imposed on the Iraqi people by the United Nations and the United States. The sanctions were designed to weaken Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and his brutal regime, but their effect has been quite the opposite. Not only have they dealt an untold number of Iraqi citizens lethal blows, they have in fact given Saddam a tool with which he has solidified his position.

But now, after years of pressure from segments of the international community, this bleak situation may finally grow brighter. Secretary of State Colin Powell announced Monday that he is working on a plan to modify the current sanctions punishing Iraq.

U.N. sanctions have in fact given Saddam a tool with which he has solidified his position.

If President Bush and Congress are serious about weakening Saddam's regime, it is imperative that they come to their senses and allow some form of Powell's "smart sanctions" to replace the current set of misguided import restrictions.

Despite efforts, such as the "oil for food" program, designed to ease the suffering wrought by sanctions, Iraqi civilians continue to fight against economic devastation. Former U.N. Humanitarian Coordinator Hans von Sponeck said in a May 2000 press release that because of the sanctions, Iraqis simply do not have enough to eat; von Sponeck, who protested the sanctions and their effects by resigning from his post a year ago, said programs such as "oil for food" simply are not meeting the basic needs of Iraqi citizens.

Denis Halliday, who preceded von Sponeck as the humanitarian coordinator through September 1998, also resigned in protest of what he called "the human calamity going on in Iraq today on account of widespread deprivation caused by U.S.-driven economic sanctions."

The people of Iraq have little food because the United States won't let them have refrigerated trucks to transport it. They have little water because the United States won't let them have chlorine to purify it. The sanctions are simply not working. A new approach is overdue.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Attacks on Eminem & Elton are attacks on personal liberty

Some gays and lesbians are outraged that gay singer Elton John would agree to perform with rapper Eminem. They are also disturbed that activists of the entertainment industry haven't publicly condemned Eminem. Eminem's lyrics, perceived as derogatory toward gays and women, outrage their sensibilities.

Entertainment activists who are more than willing to lend their names to causes from global warming to animal rights are deathly silent on this issue. The attack on Eminem is an attack on an artist's freedom of speech and creativity. Efforts to censor Eminem would leave their own work vulnerable to attack from a different protest group.

Whether it be John Q. Public or Rapper Eminem, people who spew tasteless or derogatory rhetoric don't earn my praise, nor perhaps yours. Yet neither should they be shouted down or driven underground. Plugging ears with fingers so no one can hear and clamping hands over mouths to stop speech, sentences us to deafness and dumbness. Let's not accept that.

To achieve a society in which people are judged on the content of their character, not the color of their skin or sexual orientation, we must first allow the content of their character to be known. One's character might be strong or weak, deep or shallow, attractive or offensive. Character might be expressed with pretty phrases or with tasteless lyrics. The challenge lies before us: We must speak of differences without threatening to gag others, or we shall be forever condemned to give and receive shallow judgments based on characteristics in plain view.

Defending the value of controversial art

Four women sporting lavender umbrellas flowed around my car and streamed in the rain towards their red minivan.

As I waited, I could see one 18-foot shuttlecock on the green lawn of the Nelson-Atkins Museum of Art in Kansas City. The badminton "birdie" tipped winsomely towards the columns of portico, in wry but joyful homage to the venerable institution. I smiled, pulled into the tiny parking space, and headed into the museum.

Controversy once enveloped the shuttlecock and its three companions, a tortorial fury that raged through the

Kansas City Star in 1994, when the sculptures by Coosje van Brueggen and Claes

Oldenberg flitted to rest over the vast net of the Nelson. Art for public consumption. The Shuttlecocks came from a donor family, but Missourians' tax dollars support the museum, at least a bit. Yet the Nelson survived the strife and journeyed on. The fierce discussion in the Star increased my understanding of the works. And when I'm home in the summer, often I glimpse families of all races and ages lunching in the sheltering shade of the towering playthings — forming a true community in my oft-divided hometown.

Let me see. Would I rather have taxes going to support the giant birdies, or would I rather that my money be used to purchase "safe" art — art that offends no one?

That is, no one except every person who feels the craving for forceful, enlivening, community-building art. No one except every taxpayer who claims an iota of passion about the world. No one except the vast majority of people who can both argue about artistic ideals and then deal with the majestic, squalid reality.

Were I bland as a canned pear, I could agree that government funding shouldn't go to art that deals with controversial subjects. Yes, I could wish artists would paint more landscapes of the good old days, when the pioneers roamed the uninhabited land, when trains whistled in the night, when ...

SUZI STEFFEN

Were I bland as a canned pear, I could agree that government funding shouldn't go to art that deals with controversial subjects.

Wait a second. I hear a voice — the voice of history. The voice that tells me Western landscapes were none so innocent. That those landscapes encouraged the massacre of thousands of American Indians by attracting white settlers to what looked — in the paintings — like empty land. That calm pictures of wooded hills with trains steaming in the distance whitewashed the deaths and near-slavery of the Irish immigrants, the Chinese men, the blacks who built those railroads.

OK, so landscape is too controversial. Let's pick, say, Michelangelo. The government surely could fund more painters like good ol' Mike. He's a great artist, right? But wait! I don't know if his interpretation of creation on the Sistine Chapel ceiling is, well, biblically correct. Plus, I remember all those rumors about his taste for young men. No to Michelangelo.

All right, what about Edouard Manet, father of the Impressionists, painter of Olympia and Dejeuner sur L'herbe — he's safe, right? Impressionists, they're totally safe. We've probably all got an Impressionist mug or calendar or sweater around somewhere. So Manet would be a good candidate for government funding. Yeah. He was so safe that Olympia nearly caused riots. So safe that he — like many other Parisians of his time, a regular habitué of prostitutes — died of syphilis. So, er, I guess no Manet either.

What should we do with art, artists, pesky embodiments of our collective contradictions? You know, when I walk through the Nelson or the UI Museum of Art, I find much that offends me. Renaissance art? Please. I am so over the whole blue-eyed, blond, white Jesus idea. As if Bethlehem were a teeming swarm of Swedes 2,000 years ago. Willem de Kooning? I adore contemporary art, but I'm also so over violent depictions of women.

Yet strong, intelligent artworks shake me up, throw around pieces of consciousness and worldview that often oppose my ideas. I say excellent! Nothing could be more rewarding, especially when I find local or national discussions about the works. Take my money, government, and give it to artists. Give freely, generously, to artists who will surprise me, reconfigure my thinking, own me for a while — until I emerge, altered, awake, from moments and money well-spent.

Hawkeyes looking for redemption

Iowa is looking to capture its 27th Big Ten title in 28 years.

By Jeremy Schnitker
The Daily Iowan

Is this Iowa wrestling team better in tournaments than duals?

This weekend, everyone will get to find out.

The fourth-ranked Hawkeyes will travel to Evanston, Ill., Saturday to participate in their first big tournament test of the year — the Big Ten Championships.

While the Hawkeyes may have lost four duals this year, the talk around town is that Iowa is still the favorite to win both Big Tens and NAAs because of the number of top-ranked guys the Hawkeyes have.

However, Iowa coach Jim Zalesky doesn't buy it.

The Hawkeyes may have more top seeds in the meet than anybody else, but the fourth-year Iowa coach said that doesn't mean a thing.

"We haven't been in a tournament yet this year," Zalesky said. "Maybe on paper people say we're a better tournament team, but that's paper. I don't believe what's on paper."

The reason people believe the Hawkeyes will be a good tournament team, which is coincidentally the same reason they weren't a great dual team, is that Iowa is top-heavy. The Hawkeyes have three wrestlers ranked first in the country, one second, one fourth, one sixth and two ninth.

Not shabby. They also have a 197-pounder and a heavy-weight that have only beaten two Big Ten opponents all season. Not good. If all those Hawkeyes place as high as their seeds, and Ryan Fulsas (197) and Josh Liddle (heavy-weight) step up their performances, Iowa should win the meet. But if they don't, the Hawkeyes could be looking at losing the conference meet only the second time in 28 years.

"Minnesota and we are favored," Zalesky said.

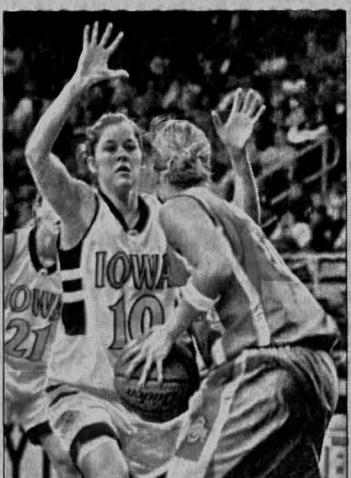

The No. 1 ranked Gophers defeated Iowa twice this year in duals, 20-17 and 17-16. It was also Minnesota that broke Iowa's 25-consecutive Big Ten Championship winning streak in 1999.

Zalesky said the key to victory is having the team wrestle well up and down the lineup.

"We haven't had a lot of good team performances. This is the time of year that if you're going to have them, let's have them now," he said.

The top part of the lineup for Iowa should have a fairly easy go of things. Eric Juergens, Doug Schwab and T.J. Williams have dominated their Big Ten opponents thus far.

Women to face Indiana

The Iowa women's basketball team will try to win its way into the championship game.

By Roseanna Smith
The Daily Iowan

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — The No. 23 Iowa women's basketball team enters this weekend's Big Ten Tournament with confidence and the realistic expectation of capturing the title. The Hawkeyes were 9-1 over the final 10 games of the regular season — the best performance in the conference. Iowa (19-7 overall, 12-4 in the Big Ten) will also walk onto the Van Andel Arena floor in Grand Rapids knowing it is the one team with a victory over each other Big Ten school this year.

With a second seed, the Hawkeyes sat out opening round play Thursday; they will jump into quarterfinal action tonight. They will take on seventh-seeded Indiana, which defeated Minnesota, 78-56, in the first round.

The Hawkeyes' game begins at 5 p.m. and can be seen on Fox Sports Chicago.

Senior Cara Consuegra said Iowa's blitz through the latter half of the season gives her team nothing but confidence heading into tonight's second-round match-up.

"We need to go in there and continue to play like we have all season," she said. "We want to go in there and win, and I think we can make a good run at it. This is time to turn it up."

Not since Consuegra's and senior teammate Randi Peterson's freshman season have the Hawkeyes been a legitimate threat to seize the tournament crown. In 1997, Iowa entered as a fourth seed and exited with the Big Ten Tournament title. It is the only title the Hawkeyes have won in the conference tournament's eight-year history.

In fact, Iowa has lost three straight tournament games, including last season's first-round defeat at the hands of No. 10 seed Northwestern, ending a disappointing and emotional 9-18 season.

New coach Lisa Bluder, her staff and a confident Iowa team made an impressive and surprising regular-season run. But just as the Hawkeyes have blocked out the troubling past few years, so, too, will they have to set aside their regular-season success. The Hawks know their opponents aren't going to let them run the table, especially Indiana.

The last time these two teams met, Iowa outplayed the Hoosiers in every facet of the game, coming away with an 83-56 victory at Carver-

Hawks burned by Penn State

The Nittany Lions put a damper on Iowa's NCAA plans.

By Todd Brommelkamp
The Daily Iowan

While the Penn State Nittany Lions made their case for a postseason bid Thursday night, the Iowa Hawkeyes hopes of a NCAA assignment took a major step backwards with a 78-73 loss to the Nittany Lions at Carver-Hawkeye Arena.

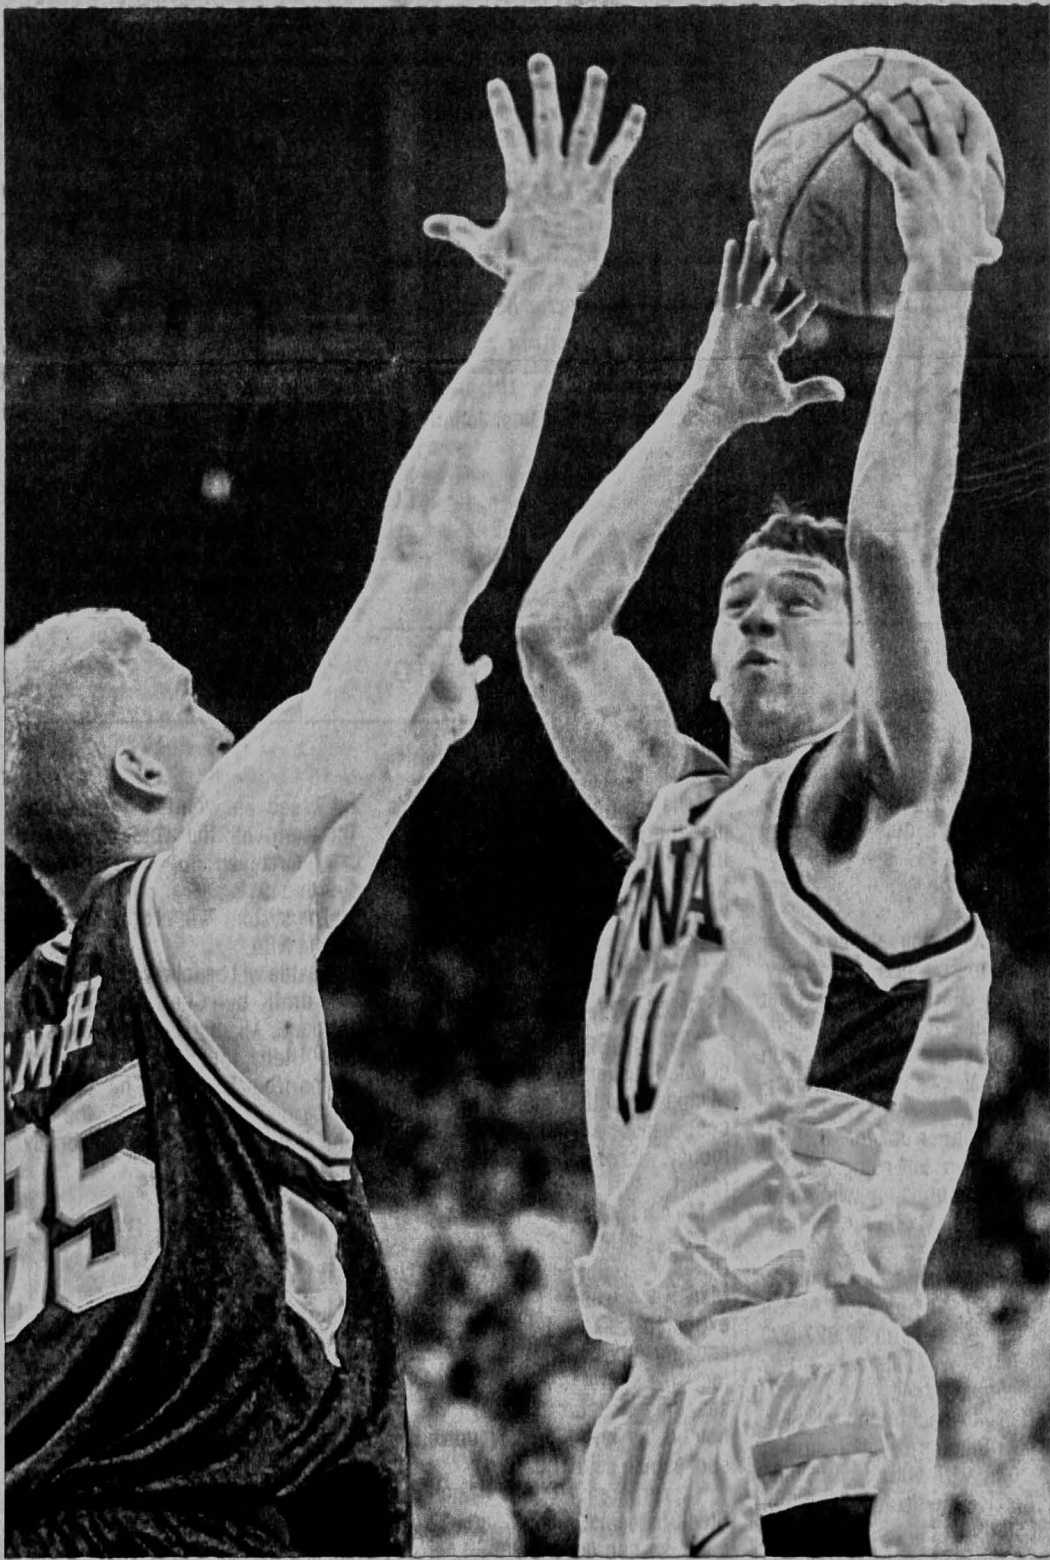

Penn State's Gyasi Cline-Heard scored 20 points en route to leading the Lions past a Hawkeye team that had Jerry Dunn's team on the ropes midway through the second half.

"The difference was Heard," Iowa coach Steve Alford said. "He just flat-out dominated our inside guys."

Many Hawk fans put much of the blame for the Iowa loss on the officials after a controversial call with just under four seconds remaining in the game. After Brody Boyd hit two of three free throw attempts to pull Iowa within one at 74-73, Duez Henderson was whistled for a foul before the Lions could in bound the ball. After much discussion, officials ruled a dead-ball intentional foul on Henderson and awarded Penn State two shots and the ball.

Official Tim Higgins said the officials had no choice but to call the foul because Henderson's foul occurred while the ball was dead on the floor. Had the ball been carried across the baseline, an intentional foul would have been called. Penn State's Jamaal Tate drained both free throws, and Joe Crispin threw in a final

Season is slipping away for Hawkeyes

All Reggie Evans could say when asked if he thought his season was slipping away was "yes."

Don't blame the referees, blame the Hawks' inability to put opponents away. That is what foiled them again at a time when they needed a win worse than ever.

When Dean Oliver's spin move drive to the basket put Iowa up, 51-43, Iowa's defense failed to be bold, as the Nittany Lions waltzed to make an eight-point deficit an eight-point lead.

Sixteen unanswered points.

And this, coming from a team whose coach utters the words "tough-minded defense" at nearly every interview.

"You can't let teams go on runs of 16 points in this league and expect to win," Hawk coach Steve Alford said. "Stopping long runs is what it is all about this late in the season."

Penn State is not the first team to come back on the Hawkeyes in the second half this season. This game was eerily similar to the Ohio State contest when Iowa had the Buckeyes down nine on two different occasions in the second half, only to see the lead slip away. The Hawks were up by four with under 10 minutes left against Northwestern. They lost. Minnesota and Purdue did the same thing, but fell just short.

"It ain't fun," Reggie Evans said. "We have a lot of talent on this team. It's big-time frustrating."

Wizards release guard Strickland

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rod Strickland could end up with the Los Angeles Lakers, who are one of "six or seven" playoff teams interested in signing the point guard after he clears waivers, agent David Falk said Thursday.

The Wizards dumped Strickland, buying out the final year of his contract for half price — $2.5 million. Strickland took the hit so he can sign with another team and be eligible for this season's playoffs.

If the Wizards had cut Strickland after midnight Thursday, he would have been ineligible for the postseason.

"Based on the talks that went on prior to the trade deadline, we know there are several teams interested," Falk said. "They can acquire a $10-million asset for a couple million dollars."

Sirotko making improvement

DUNEDIN, Fla. — Mike Sirotko's injured left shoulder, the center of a disputed deal between the Chicago White Sox and Toronto, is making improvement.

Sirotko is still unable to throw, however, and the Blue Jays are not sure when he might be able to pitch. "The doctor recommended he have another week of rehab with no throwing," Blue Jays manager Buck Martinez said.

The Blue Jays are seeking compensation from the White Sox because of Sirotko's injury. Both teams have submitted documents to the commissioner's office and said there was a good chance a decision would be made today by commissioner Bud Selig.

Agents quit after Thomas' boycott

TUCSON, Ariz. — The fallout from

Frank Thomas' boycott goes on.

Thomas' agents quit Wednesday night in response to his six-day boycott of the Chicago White Sox spring camp.

"It was an unfair situation for them," Thomas said Thursday. "They'd just come aboard, weren't abreast about everything ... They had nothing to do with what went on last week. That was a personal decision."

Thomas, runner-up for the AL MVP last season, left camp Feb. 21 because he was unhappy with some of the terms of his contract, particularly the "diminished skills" clause. Though his contract calls for him to receive $9,927,000 in each of the next six seasons — with $3,827,000 a year deferred with interest — only this year is guaranteed.

If he fails to become an All-Star, win a Silver Slugger or finish among the top 10 in MVP voting, the White Sox can revise the deal and pay him only $250,000, plus $10,125,000 deferred. If that happens — and the White Sox don't have to invoke the clause — Thomas could terminate the contract and become a free agent.

In a statement, agents Scott Sanderson and Mike Moya said they were quitting because they had a difference of opinion with Thomas.

"From the beginning of our involvement with Frank this offseason, we have consistently advised him to honor his contract, perform to the best of his abilities on the field and address any issues he might have with the White Sox privately," the agents said.

"Based on recent discussions with Frank, we have concluded that we have divergent views on certain principles that we believe are fundamental in the representation of our clients."

Thomas, who returned to the White Sox Tuesday — the mandatory reporting date — said he understood the decision.

■ The Cardinal agrees to a two-year extension.

By Mark Long
Associated Press

JUPITER, Fla. — Mark McGwire didn't want or need to test the free-agent market. He knew his worth. So did the St. Louis Cardinals.

McGwire and the Cardinals agreed Thursday to a two-year extension worth $30 million. McGwire negotiated the extension himself, opting not to go through his agent.

"If somebody's going to complain about making $15 million, there's something wrong with him," McGwire said.

"I was telling my son the other day that I was going to sign this deal ... basically averaging $15 million a year and people are going to talk about how I'm going to be underpaid. That's pretty ridiculous."

The last time McGwire signed a contract with the Cardinals, he got a standing ovation at Busch Stadium following the announcement, then homered.

Thursday was far less dramatic. Playing in an intrasquad game with coaches pitching, McGwire went 0-for-2. He hit into a double play and hit a fly ball that was dropped for an error in the outfield.

The new contract is nowhere near what Big Mac would have received as a free agent. But it is the first step to guaranteeing that he will end his career in St. Louis — possibly as the home run king.

The deal runs through 2003, the season McGwire could be approaching Hank Aaron's home-run record of 755.

"I am so happy where I'm at. You can't document it any better than that," McGwire said. "I've heard people say, 'Well, he'll probably go to the American League and DH.' No, I'm not. I'm going to stay here. I'm going to be with the Cardinals as far as I can go as a baseball player, period. You can't find a better organization and better fans in baseball."

McGwire, 37, missed most of the second half of last season with a knee injury. He had surgery during the offseason and has been healthy this spring.

He set the single-season record with 70 homers in 1998, then hit 65 the following year. He hit 32 last season in just 236 at-bats.

"We're really excited that beyond this year the most dangerous run producer in baseball is going to be on our team," manager Tony La Russa said.

Big Mac is seventh on the career home-run list with 554, just 201 behind Aaron, and would have to average 67 homers in the next three seasons to tie the mark.

"It would be a pretty cool thing," McGwire said. "But it's a long ways away, so I hope I'm still playing then."

With an average salary of about $15 million, McGwire moves into a tie for eighth with Kevin Brown and Chipper Jones, trailing Alex Rodriguez ($25.2 million), Manny Ramirez ($20 million), Derek Jeter (18.9 million), Jeff Bagwell and Carlos Delgado ($17 million each), Roger Clemens ($15.45 million) and Mike Hampton ($15,125,000).

McGwire could command far more money if he became a free agent after this season, perhaps even top Rodriguez's record.

"The sad thing that we're coming down to today is it's all about money," McGwire said. "It's never about what the game's all about. We all realize that we're going to make just boatloads of money if you do the job, and you're out there every year, and you put up the numbers. But I just love the game and I love where I'm at. That's what it comes down to."

And that's why McGwire didn't hesitate to negotiate the extension himself. He called Cardinals Chairman Bill DeWitt Jr. in December, when his knee starting feeling 100 percent, and began the contract talks.

McGwire said he didn't feel it was necessary to go through his agent, Bob Cohen. McGwire and DeWitt finalized the details of the deal once the team began spring training two weeks ago.

Women's track

Four Iowa women's track athletes were named to the second-team All-Big Ten team Thursday.

Sophomores Sarah Arens and Katie Butler and freshmen Atalie Barber and Aisha Hume received the honor following their outstanding silver-medal finish in the distance medley relay at the Big Ten Indoor Championships on Feb. 24. Their time of 11:47.5 is almost 26 seconds better than their previous season-best time.

Arens also placed sixth in the 5,000-meter run, while Barber took eighth place in the 600.

"I am very excited for the four women — they ran with a lot of heart and deserve this great honor," said distance coach Sara Swails. "This is especially a great honor because of their youthfulness. We are very excited for the future."

All four athletes will try to continue reducing their times in the outdoor season. Iowa will open outdoor competition on March 17 at the Disney Relays in Orlando, Fla.

Women's gymnastics

This weekend: No. 14 Iowa travels to Illinois Saturday for its final regular season Big Ten meet. The co-ed meet, which will start at 7 p.m. at Huff Hall, will also feature the Iowa men's gymnastics team facing Illinois.

Last weekend: In their final home meet of the season, the GymHawks overpowered No. 22 Illinois State, 196.425-195.250. Iowa set a school record in the uneven bars (49.425), and sophomore Janna Alexandrova had the best balance-beam performance in school history.

Magnificent Maday: Freshman star Alexis Maday rose to sixth place in the all-around competition following a scintillating first-place finish against the Redbirds. Maday is also tied for eighth in the country in the floor exercise.

On Illinois: The Illini have struggled this year, posting a 1-6 record with no Big Ten victories. Illinois did defeat Pittsburgh on Feb. 24 by a 192.975-189.650 margin.

Iowa key's: The GymHawks need to simply keep doing what they've been doing. After three straight weeks of 196-plus scores and record-setting performances in every event, coach Mike Lorenzen wants to just keep things going. Iowa shouldn't have too many problems with a inconsistent Illinois squad, but the Hawks can't afford to look ahead to Iowa State, which they face on March 13.

Baseball

This weekend: Life on the road continues for the Iowa baseball team, as it travels to Evansville, Ind., to compete in the Evansville Diamond Classic. The Hawkeyes will tangle with Dayton, Evansville and Miami of Ohio beginning today. Today's game against Dayton and the March 4 matchup with Miami both begin at 11 a.m.; Saturday's matchup against the host Purple Aces is slated for 2:30 p.m.

On Iowa: The Hawkeyes are 1-2 after defeating Belmont in 11 innings for their first win on the season. Catcher Alex Dvorsky led the way in Iowa's opening weekend, knocking in a team-high five runs.

On Dayton: The Flyers are currently 0-3 on the season after finishing last year 23-32. Dayton left fielder Shawn Bolinger leads the offense with one homer and five RBIs. His .308 batting average puts him fifth on the team.

On Evansville: The Purple Aces, who defeated Iowa 5-4 last year, are led by the dominant pitching of Vince Serafini. In 15 innings of play this season, Serafini has yet to give up a run while whiffing 17 batters. Evansville is 4-2, with Serafini owning two of the wins.

On Miami: The RedHawks are 2-3 under fifth-year head coach Tracy Smith. Miami made it to the West Regional of the NCAA Tournament while going 40-23 last year. Jason Knoedler leads the way with a whopping .526 average, 2 homers and 4 RBIs.

Iowa's key: Coach Scott Broghamer said the team was hampered by its inability to practice outside before opening against Belmont. Hopefully, that series allowed the Hawkeyes adequate time to find their feet for this weekend. Iowa could wind up with two wins if its offense and pitching hold up.

Women's swimming

The Iowa swimming and diving team has one last chance in the 2001 season to perform in its own pool.

This time, the pressure of competition is off. Hawkeye fans may see swimmers performing out-of-the-ordinary events in the co-ed meet.

Iowa will host the Iowa Senior Championships today through March 4. The meet will feature high school and club-level swimmers from all over the state of Iowa.

Hawkeye swimmers will have the opportunity to better their times from regular season competition in a friendly rivalry setting.

The women's team placed eighth at the Big Ten Championships on Feb. 15-17, while the men's team placed ninth at the conference championships on Feb. 22-24.

Men's Track

This week: The Iowa men's track and field team sends a handful of Hawkeyes to Ames this weekend to compete in the NCAA last-chance qualifier. Iowa State hosts the competition today. Field events start at noon, while running begins at 2 p.m. at the co-ed meet.

Last week: Iowa finished 10th at the Big Ten Indoor Championships on Feb. 24-25. Defending team champion Wisconsin scored 114 points to win its 16th indoor team title. Iowa scored 41 points. Two senior throwers led Iowa in the competition: Jeremy Allen placed second in the shot put (61-11) and fourth in the weight throw (64-8), while Arno van der Westhuizen placed second in the weight throw with a career-best and school record 67-7. The 4x400-meter relay team shone with a third-place finish in 3:10.24.

NCAA qualifiers: Iowa will attempt to add to its current NCAA qualifier roster of seven. Senior Jeremy Allen qualified first for Iowa, earning the spot in the shot put and the weight throw events. Jim Costello was the second Hawkeye to qualify, succeeding in the weigh throw. Arno van der Westhuizen became the most recent Hawkeye to join the group when he tossed a qualifying throw in the weight throw. Four runners will represent Iowa at the NCAA Indoor Championships on March 9-10. Seniors Tim Dodge and Scott Williamson and sophomores Liam Card and Russ Peterson made the cut in the 4x400 relay with a time of 3:08.82.

Next week: The seven-plus qualifying Hawkeyes will travel to Fayetteville, Ark., for the NCAA Indoor Championships.

Women's softball

This weekend: The No. 12 Iowa softball team (4-1) heads to College Station, Texas, for the Aggie Invitational. The Hawkeyes open the tournament with two games today, an 11 a.m. contest against Syracuse and a 5:45 p.m. match-up with the host, No. 21 Texas A&M.

On Saturday, Iowa will play a doubleheader beginning at 3:30 against Illinois State — the only team to defeat the Hawks this season. Then they turn-around and face the Aggies again at 5:45 p.m.

On March 4, Iowa concludes its second tournament of the season with a match-up against Syracuse at 10 a.m.

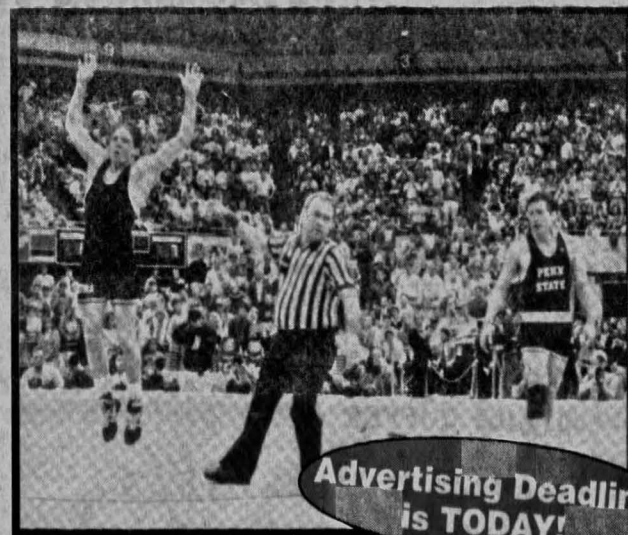

Already rollin': Juniors Alicia Gerlach and Kristi Hanks have the Hawkeyes off to a quick start. Through five games, Gerlach has a .429 average with a 1.071 slugging percentage and 10 RBIs. Hanks' has recorded 14 strikeouts in a little more than 19 innings and accumulated an ERA of only 0.71. To complement the bats and pitching staff, sophomore Katie Boney has been nearly unstoppable on the base paths, swiping four bases in five attempts.

Coach's comment: "I would fully project we will be further along offensively, and communication is always an aspect you work on," Iowa coach Gayle Blevins said. "We are a different team to play against when we play with high levels of energy. When we've got all the wheels rolling, we can play with anybody."

Arizona notches win No. 20

■ The Wildcats beat Oregon State, but Loren Woods has another bad game.

Associated Press

TUCSON, Ariz. — Another 20-win season for Arizona, another miserable night for Wildcats center Loren Woods.

Luke Walton matched his season high with 16 points as ninth-ranked Arizona beat Oregon State, 65-54, Thursday night to give the Wildcats a 20-win season for the 14th year in a row.

The 7-foot-2 Woods, in his next-to-last home game, had two points, was 0-for-4 from the field and grabbed two rebounds in 26 minutes.

Afterward, he expressed his frustration by admitting he wishes he would have left for the NBA after his junior season last year.

"Yeah, I regret it," Woods said. "Out of 59 players chosen in the draft, I can at least be 59th. I wish I would have left last year, because I at least would have gone out on top."

Arizona coach Lute Olson seems to have given up on trying to boost Woods' sagging self-confidence.

"His teammates and the staff have tried to buck him up with that, but if he doesn't want to then he doesn't want to," Olson said. "It's obvious it's not going to change now."

Michael Wright added 13 points and Gilbert Arenas 10 for the Wildcats (20-7, 12-3 Pac-10). Richard Jefferson had nine points and a season-high 10 rebounds as Arizona dominated the boards, 39-21.

Point guard Jason Gardner was scoreless for the first time in his two seasons with the Wildcats.

Walton pointed to his new Marine-style haircut, a far cry from his father's long-haired appearance in his playing days.

"That is what did it for me," Walton said. "I just wanted a new look for the tournament."

Deandra Tanner and Jimmie Haywood each scored 15 for the Beavers (10-18, 4-12), who lost for the 19th consecutive time at McKale Center. Jason Heide added 13 points for Oregon State.

"They have the ability to go to their bench, and we don't have that luxury," Oregon State coach Ritchie McKay said. "We are short-handed, and they are deep in their lineup with Eugene Edgersen, Justin Wessel and Luke Walton."

MEN'S GYMNASTICS

Hawkeyes to miss seniors

■ Kevin Agnew and Brian Christie will watch Iowa compete from the sidelines.

By Laura Podolak
The Daily Iowan

Senior gymnasts Kevin Agnew, Brian Christie and Troy Smith were honored at Senior Night with a spectacle of fog machines, spot lights and an opening ceremony. Interestingly, it wasn't the gymnasts' last home meet.

Today at 7 p.m. will be the seniors' last chance to perform in Iowa City. Unfortunately, Agnew and Christie, who are battling injuries will have to live vicariously through their teammates.

"There's kind of a dual perspective I have (going into the meet)," Agnew said. "Because on the one hand, it will be the last time that I'll be at a home meet, and I'm not competing in that meet. So it's not exactly the way you envisioned your last home meet to be. That being said, I'm a little nostalgic, obviously."

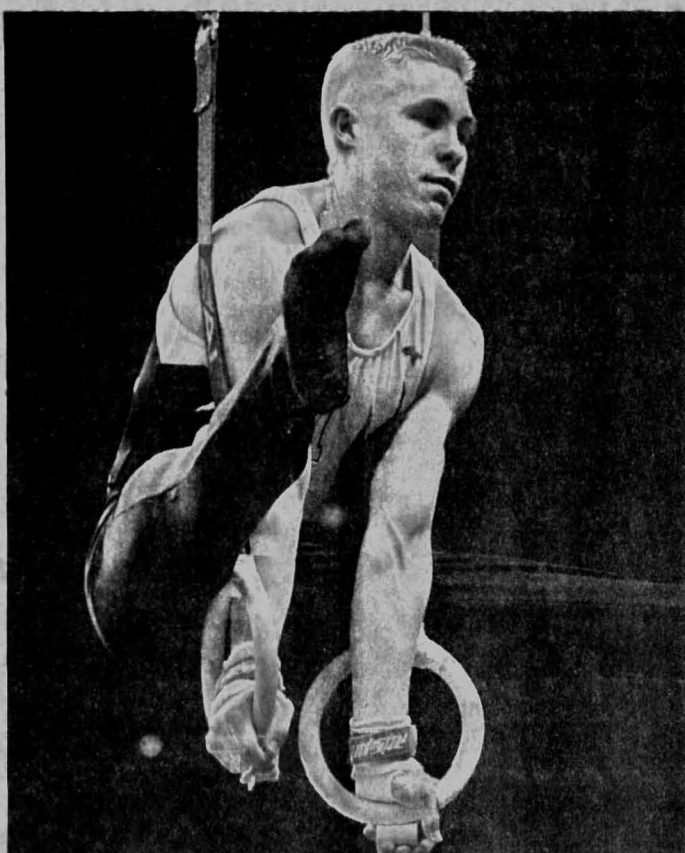

Agnew and Christie were voted co-captains this season, consequently sharing the responsibilities of leadership. However, Agnew has found it difficult to lead by example this season because of the injuries to his knees.

"It's been difficult since I have been injured. I have been kind of on my own schedule," he said. "So, it's been harder than I thought it would be to lead by example."

In comparison with Agnew and Christie, Smith has been a quiet contributor to the team for the past couple of years. Although rarely in the spotlight, the Beach Park, Ill., native has continued to be a steady benefactor, especially on the parallel bars.

So far, this season has not been so successful as last, but the team is also considerably different. Last year, the Hawkeyes were stacked with five seniors, three of whom were All-Americans. This year's roster boasts seven freshmen.

Agnew said that this change has affected the way he relates to the team.

Meghan Bruno/The Daily Iowan

Iowa's Mike Kelly performs on the rings on Feb. 17 at Carver-Hawkeye Arena during the meet against Ohio State.

"Actually, I found that my role this year has been surrendering my leadership role to the younger guys and having the other guys decide what they want their team to be," he said. "Because, it is not really my team anymore."

The home finale takes place far from the end of the men's season. The No. 7 Hawkeyes continue on the road with meets in Illinois (ranked third) Saturday, Michigan State on March 10 and California on March 16.

Agnew says there are both negative and positives to finishing the season on the road.

"The demands are that we are students, so that takes a lot more work when you are on the road," he said. "Especially when you are in the car for eight hours with 10 other guys, it makes studying a little difficult."

The same situation can also be transformed into a positive, because it forces the athletes to focus, Agnew said.

Tonight, Iowa will compete against a struggling University of Illinois, Chicago team. Although Illinois-Chicago has a history of being a solid program, Iowa coach Tom Dunn said, the program has had a down year.

Saturday will most likely be the larger test of the weekend when the Hawkeyes take on Illinois. The Fighting Illini are currently ranked in the nation, spots ahead of Iowa.

"I consider it as big as any meet we have," Dunn said. "We are scoring in a similar range, so it will be good to be on the same floor with the same judges to see how we compare."

Iowa will use the next three meets on the road to help prepare for the Big Ten Championships, which are March 23-24 at Penn State, and also for the NCAA Championships, April 6-7 at Ohio State.

For the time being, Agnew and Christie will have to rely on vocal encouragement to help lead their team to victory, as watch their last home meet unfold, from the sidelines.

WOMEN'S TENNIS

Iowa forced to deal with big loss

■ Hawkeye Sophomore Cassie Haas has a stress fracture in her foot.

By Nick Fircchau
The Daily Iowan

Only a few days after the No. 48 Iowa women's tennis team got a huge win over highly ranked Georgia Tech on the road, it received the harsh news that it will face the rest of the season without its No. 2 singles and doubles player, sophomore Cassie Haas, because of a stress fracture in her foot.

Despite the loss, the team hopes to improve its record to 6-2 on March 4 when it hosts Kansas at the UI Recreation Building at 11 a.m. in the Hawkeyes' first home meet since a 6-1 rout over DePaul on Jan. 27.

"Obviously, this is a big loss to the team," said Hawk coach Paul Wardlaw. "This is sort of our Luke Recker situation. But one of the strengths of this team is that we have enough good players so that we can continue without Cassie."

"I've always said that this team has 10 good players. Now, we have nine."

Senior Erica Johnson said that although no one on the team is expected to take Haas's place, she thinks the team is capable of carrying on.

"Cassie's a great asset to the team," Johnson said. "She brings a certain energy when she competes that we'll miss. But I think the rest of the women will step up."

The loss of Haas forced Wardlaw to once again alter his lineup, one week after changes were made for a road trip to Alabama. The team saw three new doubles teams for the Feb. 24 matchup against the Yellow Jackets and enjoyed enough success with the new pairings to grab the two doubles wins that eventually decided the meet against Georgia Tech.

Senior Megan Kearney, who missed the fall season because of an injury, will step into Haas's place at No. 2 doubles with freshman Jody Scheldt. Scheldt will also play singles for the first time this season, but Wardlaw said he has not decided at which spot.

Wardlaw said he is also concerned about the momentum the No. 65 Jayhawks may have coming into this weekend's matchup with Iowa. Kansas squared off with Texas last weekend and managed to walk away relatively unscathed, losing only by 4-3.

"People will definitely need to step up this weekend," Wardlaw said. "Kansas is a good team. But we can't think about an injury or anything negative going into the meet, because we still have to play after this one ends. We still have to play the rest of the season."

MEN'S TENNIS

No. 1 doubles squad powers Hawks

■ Tyler Cleveland and Stuart Waters are now ranked 32nd in the country.

By Nick Fircchau
The Daily Iowan

All eyes will be on the No. 1 doubles matchup this weekend as the Iowa men's tennis team plays host to Butler Saturday at the UI Recreation Building.

The Hawkeyes' top team of senior Tyler Cleveland and sophomore Stuart Waters made its way into the ITA national rankings this week, earning the No. 32 spot while posting a 5-2 record so far this season. The two will defend their new ranking when they square off against the Bulldogs' top team of Brandon Currie and Jimmy Borendine, ranked No. 38 in the country.

"We haven't had a doubles team ranked this high for quite a while at Iowa," said coach Steve Houghton. "This is very big for these two young men."

Earning the coveted doubles point has proven to be essential for the team's success this season. Iowa earned the point in crucial, close wins this season over Western Michigan, Drake, and in a 4-3 win on Feb. 24 against Illinois State. The Hawkeyes also earned the point against Kansas on Feb. 18 before faltering and losing four singles matches to lose the meet, 4-3.

Iowa has only lost the point once this season, during a 7-0 loss to Notre Dame.

"The doubles point is absolutely essential, I can't reiterate it enough," said senior Tom Buetikofer, who will play at the No. 2 doubles spot this weekend with junior Petar Mandic. "If you don't get it, it sort of takes the wind out of your sails, because you end up playing your singles match 10 minutes after losing. And if you're still upset about losing, then sometimes you can't play the tennis you want to play."

"But when you win, you put the other team back its heels,

We haven't had a doubles team ranked this high for quite a while at Iowa.

— Steve Houghton,
Iowa coach

because all you have to do is split the singles matches."

Houghton said he expects fireworks from the singles competition as well, where the 6-1 Cleveland and Currie will square off at the top spot.

"They have played against each other a couple of times," said Houghton. "Currie always gives Tyler a good match, and it's exciting to watch. They're both very good players."

Iowa has also received solid play from its second and third singles spots, where Waters and fellow sophomore Hunter Skogman have posted 5-2 records in dual meets this season.

Stiles breaks scoring record in SMS win

■ The senior scores 30 points in the effort.

By Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. — Jackie Stiles got the record she had been chasing, and Southwest Missouri State got a victory it needed.

For the Lady Bears, it was a grand night all the way around.

Stiles scored 30 points and became the career scoring leader in NCAA Division I women's basketball as No. 18 Southwest Missouri State beat Creighton, 94-59, on Thursday night.

She increased her career total to 3,133, breaking the record of 3,122 that Patricia Hoskins set at Mississippi Valley State from 1985-89. The record, fell when Stiles hit a 3-pointer early in the second half, giving her 3,123.

Stiles, who was averaging 30.8

points, needed 20 to break the record and the game drew a standing room-only crowd of 9,155. She sent them home happy as Southwest Missouri State (21-5, 15-2) stayed one game behind first-place Drake in the Missouri Valley Conference.

Drake plays at Southwest in the regular-season finale Saturday.

After scoring 13 points in the first half, Stiles wasted no time getting the record as the second half got under way.

She hit a pull-up jumper at the 19:28 mark to give her 15 points, stole the ball and made a layup for 17, then knocked down the 3, the crowd rising in anticipation as the ball left her hand.

Fans were still celebrating the record, chanting, "Jackie, Jackie, Jackie," when Stiles scored again on a jumper 34 seconds later. That made it 59-26, but by then, the score was incidental. Stiles had the record and the Lady Bears were going to win.

Ramirez is to play right field

■ The Boston slugger says he is more comfortable there.

By Howard Ulman
Associated Press

FORT MYERS, Fla. — When Manny Ramirez speaks, the Boston Red Sox listen and he says he wants to stay in right field.

So eight days after manager Jimmy Williams said he would switch his new slugger to left, he announced Thursday that Ramirez was uncomfortable there.

A few hours later, Ramirez jogged out to right field for Boston's spring training opener against Minnesota and made one error in his first two chances.

"That's been the position that he's played his whole career," Williams said before the game, "so you have to listen to him. He's a very important part of our club."

"He just said he just didn't feel comfortable down there at the (training) complex taking balls off the fungo and off the bat during batting practice," he added. "The main thing is to have Manny feel good on this team."

It was the second major development in two days involving a Red Sox star. On Wednesday, shortstop Nomar Garciaparra said he'd be sidelined at least two weeks with a right wrist injury.

Ramirez, who signed an $160 million, eight-year contract as a free agent Dec. 13, never played left field in 1997 games during seven-plus seasons in Cleveland.

He left training camp early on Wednesday to handle what Williams called personal matters. Williams wouldn't say what they were or if he expected Ramirez back in time for Thursday night's game.

Two fly balls were hit to Ramirez in the first three innings. He went back to make a catch on the warning track against Casey Blake in the second, then let a routine fly by Jay Canizaro bounce off his glove for an error in the third.

Ramirez brushed off reporters before the game, saying, "not now" when asked to comment. Troy O'Leary had no comment either even though he appeared to benefit from the development.

O'Leary was Boston's regular left fielder the past three seasons but was to spend time in right if Ramirez played left. Now the odd man out could be right fielder Trot Nixon.

He didn't play left field in any of the 274 games he appeared in during the past two seasons. In 1998, he started one game in left field while playing a total of 13. He also can play center field, but Carl Everett is entrenched in that spot.

"Manny's in right. That's fine," Nixon said. "There's nothing really for me to say. I'm here to play. It's still early in spring. It's not like I'm going to go out there and beat Manny out or anything."

The Red Sox acquired Ramirez to bat fourth. He hit .351 with 38 homers and 122 RBIs last year.

Defensive intensity carried over to both teams Thursday

Oliver and Joe Crispin's masterful defensive performance on each other dictated the tempo of the game. The two point guards combined for just two field goals in the first half, finishing with four points apiece.

The defensive intensity carried over to the rest of the squad, making the game sloppy and full of fouls. Players from both teams spent more time than usual on the floor, Rod Thompson even made a steal from down there.

A bloody Evans sat out two minutes in the second half, as did a bloody Jon Crispin in the first half. Abrasions, defense and fouls are what late-season Big Ten basketball is made of, especially between two teams separated by just a game in the standings.

But then Crispin decided he wanted to do what he does best and start launching 3-pointers from anywhere he chose. This opened up the offensive floodgates for both teams, as they abandoned the tight man-to-man defense in favor of 3-pointers and quick scores.

Heal up, Luke Recker. The Hawkeyes are just 1-6 with him out of the lineup, and they fizzled out down the stretch against teams they should have beaten in his absence. It is easy to speculate and blame Recker's loss for all of Iowa losses. He could have stopped that run with a basket that shifts the momentum ever so slightly, thus preserving an Iowa win. Neither Iowa's play in the last 10 minutes or Recker's injury can be held entirely accountable for the loss.

No one on Iowa's team guarded Gyasi Cline-Heard all game. He dictated play in the post, taking his time with shots and finding new ways to maneuver his way into an open look. Penn State has three players who average more than 15 points per game, so with Recker out of the lineup, Iowa could only answer two of Penn State's three go-to guys.

If Iowa's NCAA Tournament hopes are to materialize, the Hawks will have to get a lead, then more importantly, keep it Saturday against Wisconsin.

layup for the ending tally.

Many questions surrounded the call following the game with both coaches in the dark about the ruling. Iowa coach Steve Alford seemed to take exception to the call, noting similar situations he had seen this season.

While the call may have affected the outcome, it was an extended run by the Lions that put Iowa in its place late in the second half. With Iowa leading 55-47, the Lions strung together 16 unanswered points to take a 63-55 lead. Joe and Jon Crispin each drained 3s, while Iowa began a second half meltdown of poor passing and lack of execution.

"We lost the game on the 16-0 run," Henderson said. "The call may have had something to do with the outcome, but that's where we lost the game."

It was a bad ending to a game that started out well for Iowa. The Hawkeyes outshot Penn State by 9 percent in the first half, connecting on 39 percent of its shots. The teams continually exchanged baskets, and the match appeared to be a contest as the teams headed to the locker rooms deadlocked at 31 at the half.

A bright spot, if there was one for Iowa, was that the Hawkeyes held the Crispin brothers in check for most of the night. The pair finished with a combined 24 points, with older brother Joe tallying 15.

Iowa got strong performances from four of its five starters, as Reggie Evans, Dean Oliver, Henderson and Boyd all reached double digits in scoring. Boyd paced the effort with 19 while Evans recorded yet another double-double with 13 points and 16 rebounds.

The Hawkeyes, who fall to 18-10, 7-8 in the Big Ten, have a quick turnaround as they host Wisconsin Saturday at 1:30 p.m. Alford said it is clear his team must win on Senior Day.

Strittmatter will have some tough competition

WRESTLERS

Jody Strittmatter (ranked second at 125) will have a more difficult task — he will likely face Minnesota's Leroy Vega, who defeated Strittmatter two weeks ago during a dual.

"I don't see his confidence hurt at all," Schwab said. "He had a setback, but if he had to have one, that was the best time for it to happen."

Other Hawkeyes to look out for are Gabe McMahan (174), Mike Zadick (149) and Jessman Smith (184). All three qualified for NCAAAs last year through strong performances at the Big Ten meet. Ben Shirk, at 165 pounds, could also boost the Hawkeyes. The ninth-ranked junior will be competing in the first Big Ten Championship of his career.

Schwab said his teammates need to worry about their own performances and how well they wrestle instead of getting caught up in what the team is doing.

If everybody can carry his own weight, he said, everything will be all right.

"It's a team sport, but you got to be selfish this time of year," Schwab said. "This is what you work for all season; you got to get your job done."

Indiana's size poses threat to smaller Hawkeyes Hawkeye Arena.

Junior Lindsey Meder scored 17 points, freshman Jennie Lillis chipped in 16, and Peterson pulled down double-digit rebounds. Bluder hopes for a repeat performance from her team.

"We executed very well, especially defensively," she said. "The big questions are, can we duplicate that performance? and can Indiana bring a better game to the table on a neutral court?"

Led by the combination of Jill Chapman and Heather Cassidy, Indiana, under the guidance of first-year coach Kathi Bennett, brings a formidable offensive unit to go with its defensive presence.

In conference play, Cassidy was third in assist-to-turnover ratio, while the 6-foot-5 Chapman ranked high in blocked shots, rebounding and scoring.

But Iowa has encountered and triumphed over tall and talented forces before. Peterson, at 6-2, and Lillis, at 6-1, are not easily intimidated. "Off and on during the games, when we've needed to, we've been able to outplay or stop the bigger people from utilizing their size," Peterson said.

Lillis still expects teams, including the Hoosiers, to come straight at her and Peterson.

"It's something we will have to handle," she said. "Obviously, we aren't your typical big, beef-eater post players."

Should Iowa win tonight's quarterfinal contest, it will turn around and play Saturday at 5 p.m. against the winner of the Wisconsin-Illinois game for a shot at the championship. Sunday's final game begins at 7 p.m. and will be televised nationally by ESPN2.

Baseball players must adjust to new strike zone

■ Umpires are calling strikes on a wider basis.

By Ben Walker
Associated Press

DUNEDIN, Fla. — Raul Mondesi watched the fastball whiz past the Blue Jays emblem on his chest, and kept the bat on his shoulder.

He expected to hear the hiss of the heater. It was the other sound that surprised him.

"Strike three!" plate umpire Dan Iassogna shouted.

The Toronto star blinked and asked: "Is that what you guys are calling?"

After months of talk and a week of demonstrations, the start of the exhibition season Thursday provided the first real look at the strike zone baseball intends to enforce this season.

At Scottsdale, Ariz., there was even a light-hearted moment.

The first pitch of the game was a very high strike thrown by San Francisco's Livan Hernandez to Eric Young of the Cubs. Umpire Kerwin Danley called a strike, then took off his mask for a good-natured argument with Young, with both laughing.

At Peoria, Ariz., seven-time Japanese batting champion Ichiro Suzuki made his American debut and complained umpire Rob Drake was calling strikes on outside pitches.

"The third at-bat, the second pitch, was not a strike," he said through a translator. "The first at-bat, second pitch, was outside by 8 inches. If they're going to call what they came out here and taught us, then both

Lenny Ignelzi/Associated Press

Seattle Mariners' David Bell argues with home plate umpire Rob Drake after being called out on strikes in the fifth inning against the San Diego Padres Thursday in Peoria, Ariz.

those pitches should have been balls."

Seattle's David Bell was ejected for arguing an outside strike. Suzuki didn't argue the calls against him, but didn't think he would have been tossed if he had.

"It would have been no problem because I would have been speaking in Japanese. You couldn't understand me," he said.

Umps have been told to take away the couple of extra inches the pitchers often got on the outside and inside of the 17-inch plate. The high strikes, however, are getting the most attention.

At Bradenton, Fla., Pittsburgh star Jason Kendall also was not impressed.

In the first inning, Kendall was called out by big league umpire Marty Foster on a decidedly high pitch from Detroit knuckleballer Steve Sparks.

Some fans at McKee Field jeered, and Kendall and Foster talked about the pitch between innings. The Pirates catcher did not seem angry — rather, he appeared to be getting a further explanation.

"That was pretty ridiculous. It was by my chest. It was a ball," Kendall said. "But it shows they're really going to do it. I'll take striking out if our pitchers get that pitch."

"That pitch" is the one above the belt, which had been called a ball for as long as most major leaguers can remember.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Travel should be on your agenda. You can obtain a vast amount of knowledge if you keep an open mind and discuss your opinions with established individuals. Sign up for courses that will help you develop new skills.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be careful not to take on too much. You may feel competitive, but tackling unreasonable challenges will restrict you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You will want to spend time with your lover and will find it hard to control your emotions. Make plans that will allow you to express your intentions.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't push your luck with superiors or authority figures. Secret affairs will eventually backfire on you. You may not get your facts correct today. Double check before you make statements that could ruin your reputation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Your charming and outgoing nature will attract members of the opposite sex if you put yourself in a position of leadership at group meetings. Don't be afraid to speak your piece.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Travel will entice you, but curb any tendency to overspend. Deal with children's needs and participate in self-awareness groups.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your lover may be keeping important information from you. Sudden changes regarding your partnership are likely. Get ready to put time and effort into pampering yourself.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Legal matters may be pressing. Take care of your personal affairs yourself. If you take the time to help someone less fortunate than yourself, you will receive rewards.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will be thoroughly enthusiastic about your personal relationship. Embrace new experiences with open arms and an open mind.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Career limitations may set you back. Losses are evident if you become involved in joint financial ventures. Some people you work with may try to dump their responsibilities on you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You need to be entertained, so get out with friends. Look into ways to pamper yourself for a new attitude and a new you. It's your turn to be a little selfish.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Changes in your home will be unnerving. If you try to be accepting, you will discover that the situation is not as bad as you had first thought. Learn to go with the flow for best results.
