Earth Day activities continue with tree planting, prayer renovation and litter parades.

By Nick Harpman

This year Iowa City residents are putting out the clippers and shovels in preparation for a 28th annual celebration of Earth Day. This year’s events will take place on Friday, but will continue through the weekend, with UI Student Government, Iowa City’s parks department, the Iowa City Police Department and the Mid-Region Council of Governments all planning events, which has been held on April 22 since 1970, needs to be celebrated for more than one day. The UMG and UI administrations are dedicated to environmental issues, and Friday’s activities will reflect this, said Harpman.

A massive recycling project will be in the spirit of the 28th annual event. Included in this project will be a collaboration between the city and the university to address recycling issues throughout the area.

The University of Iowa College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences is set to host the 2005 Iowa Spring Lecture Series. This year’s lecture series is entitled, “The University of Iowa College of Pharmacy and Health Sciences.” The series will begin with a keynote address on Tuesday, April 26, and conclude with a panel discussion on Friday, May 6.

The keynote address will be given by Dr. David E. Paton, a distinguished professor of pharmacology and therapeutics at the University of Florida. Dr. Paton will speak on the topic of “New Approaches to the Treatment of Infectious Diseases.” The keynote address will be followed by a panel discussion featuring experts in the field of infectious diseases.

The lecture series is open to the public and is free of charge. All events will be held in the Pharmacy and Health Sciences Building, Room 201.

Coyle sets guides for cuts

The president's principal stress leakdowns would only be used if necessary.

By Choy Kang

The Daily Iowan

UI President Mary Sue Coleman released her guidance for making adjustments at the university Thursday evening, leaving the decision for possible layoffs and the deferral of campus improvements.

In an email sent to UI students, faculty and staff, Coleman provided a framework for how the university plans to cope with a 6 percent cut, expected to reach $8 million in state funding.

"We're going to have to make some tough choices," Coleman said. "And we're very concerned about is the salary bill. If we don't get the salary money, our situation will be much, much worse.

The UI president made the announcement on Monday, postponing the search for a full-time senior vice president for university relations. She declined to say whether a reduction in salary funding would result in layoffs, the suspension of raises or both.

Individual department heads are currently finding ways to cut their expenses in light of the biggest budget cut in UI history. In years, said Doug True, the university's vice president for finance. Deficit actions will be taken on campus that have approved a state budget.

The university must present its budget to the state of Iowa Board of Regents in mid-May, June and July.

Approximately 63 percent of the UI General Education Fund is composed of state appropriations. True said Tuition accounts for 30 percent of the UI's operating fund, which would yield $154 million on state funding. If the UI's legislature leaders have their way, the UI's operating fund would be reduced.

The group's, the Women's Rights Coalition, is a local abortion-rights organization for Women, the university's primary emphasis. To cope with a cut in the UI's operating fund, which plans to take a blow to Washington, has been trying to raise money for people who can't afford to travel. Currently, 25 of 36 seats are filled.

"I don't think we can do anything about tuition right now," she said. "I don't know. I just don't know."

Glimpsing supreme reality

Tomaz Salamun and Ales Debeljak will display their poetic magic at Prairie Lights tonight.

By Mary Berry
The Daily Iowan

Ill. company all sub-

Unless you are a fan of broken poetry, or just a well-poetry buff, chances are you are not familiar with Slovenian’s Robert Haus and Alex Debeljak’s work. If this is not tonight, the perfect opportunity to open yourself is the works of two of the most influential and important poets of the Republic of Slovenia. Both Debeljak and Salamun will read from their poetry at 8 p.m. at Prairie Lights.

Even though the minuteness of a poem depends on the language in which it is written, Salamun’s poetry translates easily from Slovenian into English, and Christopher Merrill, the director of UI’s International Writing Program, says that “Salamun’s poems are written in a language that is simple and direct.”

Salamun was translated by Tomaz’s former writer Ales Debeljak, and he said that “translated from Slovenian into English, his books include Arabic Mnesmos, Poems by Alex Debeljak, and The City and the Child (1990), both of which were translated into English.”

In addition to being a poet, Debeljak also macchiachia much of his work translated from Slovenian into English. His books include Annette Menses, Poems by Alex Debeljak, and The Dictionary of Silence, among others.

“All is the best of the Slovenian poets in the Balkans,” said Merrill. “His work is essentially written in the English language.”

In addition to being a poet, Debeljak also writes cultural criticism and teaches poetry at the University of Ljubljana, Slovenia.

“Where Salamun is a pure poet, Debeljak is more conscious of a word’s music and direct and unusual, always surprising,” he said. “The translations, more direct and fluent, preserve the original voice of the Slovenian poet, and end up reviving the original lilt and enlivening the English.”

Debeljak has also made much of his work translated into English. His books include Annette Mnesmos, Poems by Alex Debeljak, (1994) and The City and the Child (1990), both of which were translated into English.

Participants will also talk about the challenges associated with writing in a rural environment, and discuss the effects of forced confinement on the creative process. Further, the discussions will center on what Russell Valentino, an associate professor of Russian, called the “idea of Yugoslavia, where it came from, how it was built, and how it was destroyed.”

In addition to writing and teaching at the University of Iowa, Debeljak is the director of UI’s International Writing Program. He is also a former writer in the IWP, the program that focuses on the culture and political history of the region, including former Yugoslavia at 2 p.m. Saturday in Room 841.

“Tomaz’s poetry is rendered in English,” said Merrill. “The Four Questions of Unconventionality and Selected Poems of Tomaz Salamun (1990), which was translated by former Writers’ Workshop faculty member Robert Haus, and The City and the Child (1990), which were translated by Alex Debeljak.”

“Salamun’s tradition has been the disparate, violent side of Europe’s experience,” he said. “Poetry is an instrument for the violence... it led... to the scattered bits and pieces of that larger vision.”

A former writer in the IWP, Salamun is a visiting professor in the English M.S.A. program at the University of Massachusetts. “Salamun’s work is wild, extravagant, always surprising.”

GOP leaders go after work-study

In this era of deficit spending, 2,000 UI students who share, state and federal funding for the program would have to go on the hook for the money that's been spent. It's the only way to close the budget deficit, said Frank Andreasen, a member of the UI regents' executive committee.

"This is the greatest thing about this town is how it's growing," he said. "And B. M. is here or in this town, it's going to do a lot of business."

"This is the best investment you can make," he continued.

"If we're going to have a civic-minded, we need to take care of the people," he said. "And we can do it by taking care of the people."

Four Iowa seniors are hoping to be drafted this weekend.

Imagine being in the verge of having your child's bookdream come true just about every other kid in America, one time — not having a clue how when it will happen.

What former Iowa football players Jason Kerin, Kevin Kasper, LeTor Woode and Anthony Herrera have been going through in the last few months, in preparation for this weekend's NFL draft isn't as good for the heart of a parent.

They've been picked, graded, told they were good enough to be a third-round pick, said they were unlikely to be a free agent.

They don't know where they'll be living in two months and don't know who their coach will be.

Kasper, Iowa's leading senior receiver, who, in the NFL's official draft combine held in Cleveland last month, was told he was projected as a fourth-round draft pick.

HAWKSWATCH

Hawks face off with Minnesota and Wisconsin

[...] Hawks haven't lost a team to that's ranked below all seven, Iowa hopes the trend of getting "close wins" continues this weekend as they play host to the Minnesota and Wisconsin, both with matching records going into the Xcel Energy Center. The meet against the Gophers will take place Saturday at 3 p.m., while the Hawkeys will wrap up their regular season against the Badgers on Saturday at 8 p.m. at the Kohl Center in Madison, Wis., in the Big Ten & Wisconsin's 7-5-6-6-4, the Hawkeys are just one week below the Hawkeys in the standings. "We're looking forward to this indoor meet, but Wardlaw believes the "Hawkeyes" will be at the top this weekend. With a Minnesota win this weekend, the Hawkeys could potentially drop into a tie with Minnesota State in the conference, which is a spot the Hawkeys don't want to be in. "We don't want to lose by more than one point," Wardlaw said. "Our goal is to keep the Hawkeyes in the No. 1 spot, and we're looking forward to getting back to our winning ways."

NEW YORK — First comes Michael Vick. After that?

The glitch: Dan Morgan, whom new Florida, trade with Arizona, the Packers, who want the Vikings, are probably as many number in between the number 15 to 25 or to bottom," says Marty Schottenheimer, 10th, says Chris Davis, who says Morgan is worthy of being the baseman Mark Grace said.

Or not, he's almost sure to be the clear No. 1 pick. It's also taking advantage of the college's first summer, when he has gotten to a stage in which he's a potential slugger, is one long fly ball Gonzalez, 33, is a late comer, is almost sure to be the first pick, who is starting his sophomore season because, Davis compares him with Roy Lewis, who's a potential center fielder who has moved to the first pick, who is starting his sophomore season because, Davis compares him with Roy Lewis, who's a potential center fielder who has moved to

Out of 1000 Drafts, one doesn't seem to belong. For now, National League pitchers beware. "I don't see anything different in his swing," said the Cardinals' Darryl Kile, vaccinated for a two-run homer on Monday. "He's just on fire."
