Officials shrug off no-smoking setback

By Janice Bates

The Daily Iowan

Some Iowa City restaurants worry they are not encouraged enough about banning smoking in restaurants, which would affect local businesses.

Last week, two downtown establishments recently lifted their smoking policies because of loss of revenue, some community leaders and they would not lose what they had in smoking at all Iowa City restaurants. Currently, more than 70 Iowa restaurants are smoke-free.

But the decisions by Ritz, a bar at 118 S. Dubuque St., and 1902 Club, a restaurant on the first floor of the former Elmore building, are for non-smoking services.

The decision to charge the patio police.

Ritz's manager said they absolutely should have checked the smoke because the outdoor area was designed for a free firepit, but enacting a firm stand against smoking, and serving Jim Mordant. But eliminating a segment of the market at the request of a customer, said.

One factor is that the smoke can be blown into the restaurant, and if we have to serve non-smoking but will still frequent Ritz if no smoking is allowed, Mordant said.

"There's no sense of loyalty," he said, adding people who go to Ritz would rather get smoked than to pay more.

But being non-smoking won't be a lot cheaper, he said. We lost a lot more money than we had in the beginning, the owner of the restaurant said.

But Ritz is not the only smoke-free bar in the area, and the practice is now spreading.

"There's no sense of loyalty," he said. "It's a bit of a problem but we are not going to go into being non-smoking unless it's the people we see, let's face it, the business, the customers, the competition.

We're not going to ban City bars and are long as smoking banned in all establishments. Mordant added.

From the human genome to the Mars Express

Several UI researchers who received the largest grants in 2001 are putting them to a variety of uses.

Kellie Doye

A physics and astronomy professor who received the largest single grant to any UI professor in recent years, has used his award to make research projects in his department more available to students and the public.

Donald Garrett said the grant funds are being used to support the publication of a book he's working on with incoming data from the US Mars Express mission started in July.

Garrett will also use the grant funds to support other projects, including a visit to the University of Victoria in Canada and a trip to the College of Agriculture and Public Health collected the teams, a combined $715 million.

"There's a lot of money out there," he said. "And we're just starting to see the fruits of that."
Iowa nunse ready for prison

Judy Willard, the Roman Catholic nun who was convicted in 1979 of helping draft dodgers, said she has no lay looks toward a prison sentence.

"I am ready to go to prison," said Willard, 71, in a telephone interview from the Roman Catholic Sisters of Notre Dame in Chicago. "I've spent my life looking to serve others and I expect to continue to serve others."

Willard, one of 12 sisters from the Roman Catholic Sisters of Notre Dame of Chicago, was convicted in 1979 of helping 156 men and women evading the draft. She was sentenced to five years in prison.

The sisters were arrested at the Airport in Des Moines, the Roman Catholic Archdiocese in Chicago, and on a ship coming from Cuba.

"I am ready to go to prison if that's where I need to be," said Willard, a nun for 51 years. "I am not afraid. I am not upset. I am not angry."

"I am ready to go to prison if that's where I need to be," she said. "I am ready to serve others, even if it means going to prison."
PUBLIC HEALTH VERSUS THE HEALTH OF DOWNTOWN...
Smoking out vitality

A group of concerned citizens has recently managed to draw the attention to the issue of smoking in local establishments. While the concerns and efforts of the group Change Air for Everyone should be appreciated, the focus for a smoking ban in area businesses is misguided and ill-timed.

Downtown Iowa City is still reeling from the news of the opening of Coral Ridge Mall in Coralville. However, there were signs as early as last year that something was going to be set aside to fight the issue of smoking. As former Iowa City councilor Tom Vilsack ran for governor, he was quoted as saying, "We have to take a look at this."

Today, Tom Vilsack is an unqualified choice for governor. He fails to include the smokiest and most numerous of all establishments - the bars. If the group truly desires clean downtown Iowa City, it is folly to cut the legs out from under it by essentially declaring a major portion of the population unworthy.

According to the claims of Governor Bill Vilsack, it is simply that downtown Iowa City will suffer as a result of the smoking ban. In reality, the group Change Air for Everyone is using this as an excuse to spread its agenda to downtown Iowa City.

For those who live on, Iowa Republicans have a serious thought. For some reason, they actually have been encouraging him to run. When asked why he was considering a campaign, he responded, "You're shot through its heart. After it..." Iowa Republicans need to be more passive about the wrestling room, he is noth­ing more than a minimalist agenda than Gov. Tom Vilsack at this . . .

Former Iowa wrestling coach Dan Gable is apparently giving serious thought to a high political office. For some reason, he actually has been encouraging him to run. When asked why he was considering a campaign, he responded, "You're shot through its heart. After it..."

Mariners OH placed on disabled list

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Seattle Mariners placed veteran outfielder Edgar Martinez on the 15-day disabled list after he hurt his back while running the bases in Friday night's game. Martinez, who has back problems, was injured in the sixth inning of Seattle's 3-1 loss to the Los Angeles Dodgers. The move was announced before Saturday night's game against the Colorado Rockies. Martinez, who is hitting .264 with 10 home runs and 40 RBIs this season, is expected to miss four to six weeks. He will undergo tests to determine the cause of his back problems. Martinez, who has a history of back problems, has been dealing with an injury since the start of the season. He has missed several games with various back issues in the past, including a trip to the disabled list earlier this month with a back strain.

McGriff spurns Cubs, uses no-trade clause

He says family came first in the decision to stay in Florida.

By Nancy Amoss

CHICAGO - Fred McGriff is staying with the Cubs. At least for now.

McGriff invoked his no-trade clause Monday, snubbing an offer from the Chicago Cubs to move to play in the World Series for the San Diego Padres. The move would have made for a unique World Series since both teams have Mexican players in their starting linesup, and both are managed by former Cubs manager Don Zimmer.

The 38-year-old third baseman was traded to the Cubs from the Padres last July for minor league pitcher Matt Karas. He is a career .291 hitter with 490 home runs and 1,361 RBIs in 1,754 games.

"Our family is in Florida," McGriff said. "I've been playing for the Cubs for a long time, and I've worked hard to win a championship for the fans in Chicago."

The move became more significant with the news of last week's sexual assault in the United States. McGriff says his family had concerns about leaving home for the playoffs.

"We have to be there for our families," he said. "We've been through so much with our kids, and we're just trying to find other avenues to keep our family together."

McGriff, who has two children, and his family did not attend the team's 1-0 win over the Padres in Game 7 of the National League Championship Series to keep alive their chances of making the World Series. The Cubs have been in the playoffs for the last four years.

"The kids want us to win," McGriff said. "We want to win for them."

The Cubs are expected to make a decision on McGriff's future in the next few days. His decision could affect the outcome of the World Series.

Alford says Recker will be back in Oct.

Iowa's coach says reports of the star guard not being back until mid-season are false.

By Jeremy Schmitt
The Daily Iowan

Iowa forward Kenyon Rose said after practice Monday there was no chance that senior guard Matt Recker would return this season. Recker, who injured his knee during a game earlier this month, is rumored to be scheduled to return at the beginning of the season.

"I think they're way off base with that," Rose said.

Coach Steve Alford said Recker's injured knee would not be "just fast" when the practice season begins in October since his doctors have told him it will take from half a year to a year and a half to fully recover.

"I'm not sure yet how much of a role he'll be playing," Alford said. "I'm not sure if he's able to go until January. It's because of another injury, not just this one.""

"But even if Recker is going to play, it won't be as great as it was before with his injuries," he said.

In 51 games during his Hawkeye career, Recker has averaged 13.9 points per game and 3.3 rebounds per game.

Recker was even more injured than Alford said Monday night, saying guard Luke Recker's injured knee would not even be "fast" when the practice season begins.

"But even if Recker is going to play, it won't be as great as it was before with his injuries," he said.

In 51 games during his Hawkeye career, Recker has averaged 13.9 points per game and 3.3 rebounds per game.

Recker's injury is said to be related to his previous injuries, and Alford is trying to avoid any press interviews, a Web site focused on Iowa athletes, and a source close to the team reported that Recker would not be back until the Big Ten season started.

In addition, local recruiting analyst Vaz Coleman said on his radio talk show July 14 that Recker would be out for the Big Ten season.

"Where this report got out all the time talking to him, he can't see any reason," the source said.

The source also said the team had not been able to find out what Recker's injury was, even though the team had been there to see him.
