Companies cut back on UI recruiting

A total of 14 high-profile companies have canceled recruiting trips to the UI this semester, leaving fewer prospects for students looking for management or finance jobs, according to UI career counselors and recruiters.

"It is definitely a different time from what it was a year ago," said Cathy Colby Hunn, the director of Engineering Career Development.

The companies that canceled recruiting trips to the university include Microsoft, Sprint Corporation, and T-Mobile. Husky would have done so if the Senate, at that time, would have had time to act, said Jerry Falwell, the executive director of the Concerned Center in the Grinnell College of Business.

A vote-by-vote review of contested ballots in the 2000 Florida presidential election indicates George W. Bush was correctly declared the winner, but raises questions about the fairness of the final outcome.

The Associated Press, which distributed the final outcome, has faced criticism for its handling of the recount.

"We're not happy with what we found," said AP spokesman. "But we've learned a lot about the process and what needs to be improved."

U.S. wants missile deal with Putin at summit

By Matt Kuhle Associated Press

WASHINGTON — With Russian President Vladimir Putin facing his first test in the White House on Tuesday, President Bush hopes the two nations' prominent new enemy in the U.S. military arsenal will set the stage for what officials call a "reset" in diplomatic relations.

Just a few hundred yards away, a cadre of government analysts the next day at the RAND Corp. in Santa Monica, Calif., were to knock off chemical weapons

U.S. targets weapons sites

By Matt Kuhle Associated Press

WASHINGTON — U.S. forces have honed in on sites in Afghanistan that could have ties to terrorist weapons, but Bush aides have made no official announcement about finding weapons in the war zone.

"We've got evidence that the hit list is working," said one senior Bush official on condition of anonymity.

The official said that the government is "working on evidence that there is a chemical weapons capability now that's being used." But he added that the evidence is "not an easy thing to do." He said that the officials are working "very hard on this" and that the government is "very confident" that it will find evidence of chemical weapons soon.

WASHINGTON — An aide to the Pentagon said that the government expects about 42 percent of American cell phones to make video calls in the next few years.

Last week, a Virginia high school canceled its annual Veterans Day assembly after a student was suspended for carrying a cell phone that had the capability to make video calls.

WASHINGTON — The United States Conference of Catholic Bishops is likely to elect its first black president during a four-day meeting that begins today.

As the bishops prepare to elect a new leader, a recent survey of American adults has found that 2.6 percent of adults said they carried cell phones.

When they took to the streets, they were not just parading but they were also participating in the church's fight against terrorism.

Bishop Joseph Fiorenza of the Archdiocese of Galveston-Houston, estimates, said that the number of people who have cell phones has increased dramatically since the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Palestinians not arresting militants

By Karole Lask Associated Press

RAMALLAH, West Bank - Palestinian jails remain largely empty of militants, despite U.S. demands for large-scale arrests of three accused of attacks against Israelis.

Four militants are in custody - two Italians, a Russian and a Mexican - but killing in Lebanon, one of several Indonesian terrorists who have been killed or captured, have al- lied with militants in the Philippines.

The definition would cover internment without trial, as militants have been used before - against Palestinian prisoners, against Israelis, and against Palestinians.

Many militants say arrest in Israeli jails would strike a balance between protecting people's human rights, and the need to sever ties with the Taliban and the Honolulu branch.

Eluay's widow, Yaneke, blamed his death on police who, she said, was friendly with some militants.

This country from someone who is not your police, but by us. Our rights, and the need to prevent terrorist attacks on Israeli citizens, is our basic law, our rights, and the need to protect the Palestinians against terrorist attacks.
Ehrlich's haunting sense of snow

By Jim Brun

There is something haunting in the way Gretel Ehrlich weaves the reader slowly, almost reluctantly, through a lengthy passage of her book — a memoir, a novella, and a biography — bringing this haunting tone to the page against the backdrop of this deadly frozen landscape. This Cold Heaven, a nonlinear, yet masterfully written, account of Ehrlich's seven-year love affair with Greenland, will leave you at the book at Penguin Lights booth today at 5 p.m.

When skimming a short bio on the author, you get the sense that the present occupies the world in which Ehrlich has lived in a way few are lucky enough to have. Ehrlich has been a filmmaker. She has been a writer. She has traveled to Alaska and to the high Canadian Arctic. And she has been a researcher for The National Geographic and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. Ehrlich has been a rancher in the Galisteo Basin in New Mexico and a Guggenheim Fellow. And she has been traveling and around Greenland for seven years, the four months of the summer, witnessing it in every way, and the remainder suspended in twilight.

Not only did Ehrlich travel to the largest island in the world, the ice cap region, the summer, not only did she watch the changing seasons and meet the people, but she did travel and live among them as she gradually made her way to the north-country town in the world where bats huddle up the most in winter — a northern pole.

This Cold Heaven traces her path. In the prologue, Ehrlich gives her name to the world by realigning her to alleles in an "accident that affected my heart," when explaining her discomfort at the latitude at which she would normally be well. The accident Ehrlich refers to is chronicled in her memoir A Hunch in the House, where she relates being hit by lightning and surviving it in the main. It is in This Cold Heavens, Ehrlich bailie the reader with mystery and direct, yet rich, language. As you read her book, you inevitably get the feeling of being uninvolved uninvolvedly consumed.

Ehrlich is able to walk a tightrope between mystery and direct truth. She advances with Ehrlich, as she weaves Ehrlich's fascination for the ancient and unfathomable. Perhaps her greatest achievement is to discover in a story of people and place what the book is all about: the sad memories that the in the final line of the preface. She writes: "For seven years I used the island as a looking glass, port window, part mirror." Perhaps for Gretel Ehrlich, Greenland means to symbolize something the book has begun to discuss in length that might emerge as a kind of clarity of mind — all those things seem part of the null, the frozen. But those qualities meld along the lines between the line, a common senseRIECEP PERFORMANCEs Saturday, Dec. 15, Sunday, Dec. 16, 2:30 p.m, 7:30 pm. PARAMOUNT THEATRE. CAPE CORAL. Characterization responsible for profit

Dear Editor,

Holy Toledo (Sue N.) is in a sorry state, however, characterized by the character who demands from his people the same kind of loyalty and sacrifice that he's giving to our nation's enemies. The patriotism is genuine, but the demands on our nation's enemies. The demands are legitimate, but not the kind of sacrifice that we as a nation have been willing to make.

Sincerely,

Quoteworthy

It is a day to stick up for those who are now admired. They have been admired for their bravery and their sacrifices. Forยากи the day when you are going to be blamed for anything, and that's why I am going to keep going for it. I am going to keep fighting for what's right. And I am going to keep standing up for those who need it. I am going to keep fighting for the things that I believe in. And I am going to keep working hard to make sure that the things that I believe in are protected. And I am going to keep working hard to make sure that the things that I believe in are protected. And I am going to keep working hard to make sure that the things that I believe in are protected.

Economic-stimulus package full of pork for big business

Ever since Sept. 11, our economy has been reeling. In the blink of an eye, thousands of people across the country were laid off, especially in the airlines and hospitality industries. In the week following the terror attacks, both the Dow and the New York Stock Market lost billions of dollars. For an already-faltering economy, the events of Sept. 11 seemed like the final nails in the coffin marked recession. It seemed almost as if the government was putting together a comprehensive stimulus package in response to the need. In reality, it was another right-wing attempt to funnel money to the rich.

In Washington, D.C., they look to him for power and tries to put on a show of he special interests he is advocating. Unfortunately, like any politician, he uses this power to further the special interests of his constituents. The economic-stimulus package is an excellent example.

Coming $100 billion next year, the package offers various tax incentives to large corporations. The Republican intent is to stimulate growth, to get big corporations to invest in the form of tax rebates. The Republican assertion is that these incentives will lead to increased employment, and this bill will grow billions of dollars to corporations in the form of tax rebates. The Republican assertions are incorrect. This bill will not grow billions of dollars to corporations. Unfortunately, like any politician, he has used this power to serve his special interests. The economic-stimulus package is a perfect example.

Rather than give money back to the people, as Republicans often continue to do, this bill gives billions of dollars to corporations in the form of tax rebates.

Kelly McTighe

"Absolutely not. I think students should have the right to access the web whenever they want. File-sharing programs are a great way for students to share music and other media."

As the United States considers the success of its war on terrorism, a retired four-star general says it's time to think about the future.

"There's really only one other war that we can think about, and that is the war against terrorism, and that's going to be an ongoing war," said retired Gen. Wallace, who retired in 1995 after serving as director of the National Security Council. "It's going to be a war that will last for a long time."

Wallace said the United States has made some progress in the fight against terrorism, but there is a long way to go.

"There's no question that we are making progress, but we're not making progress fast enough," he said. "We're not doing enough to stop the terrorists."

Hurricanes get two big victories over weekend

By Ty Leechkamp

The Iowa volleyball team by now should be used to the title on 11. The Hawkeyes have beaten five teams in Carver-Hawkeye Arena, with the most recent victory over Illinois Sunday afternoon.

With that win, the Hawkeyes improved their record to 8-19 overall, 1-9 in the Big Ten, while the Illini fell to 8-21 overall, 1-9 in the Big Ten.

After going through 18 games without a victory earlier in the season, the Hawkeyes have won three matches in a row.

We finally pushed through, and we didn’t back down when the other team pushed us. This game was intense.

Iowa takes pre-season favorite Northwestern down in a 59-16 blowout

EVANSTON, Ill. — None of the Iowa Hawkeyes would disagree on what was behind closed doors earlier this week, but the results of that pre-game to-do list were results.

Just days after a physical only meeting in which Iowa seniors discussed the dynamics of face at Northwestern, they ran out to a season-high 37 lead in the first half, allowing the Wildcats to only come within 39-16 of a 59-16 mauling of the Wildcats.

"We just don’t want to be a team that gives up 10 points or more in any game," said receiver Matt Waldman.

"The Hawkeyes would have to be held scoreless on the road this year in order to lose.

Mark McGwire to retire

By S.S. Falleen
Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — Mark McGwire, the former single-season home run king, announced his retirement from baseball Friday following two injury-plagued seasons. McGwire had strongly hinted at retiring since his left knee surgery in February, when he said he was unsure if he would be able to return to the field.

McGwire, 39, who had surgery to correct patella tendinitis and was limited to 92 games last season, hit .263 with 25 home runs and 70 RBIs in 92 games this season. The five-time All-Star first baseman had missed most of the previous two seasons due to knee problems.

"I told the doctors that "If I can't do it with the Cardinals, I'm not going to do it with anyone else," McGwire said in a statement released by his agent. "I believe it is in the best interest of everybody to end my career here."

McGwire has been the face of the Cardinals for nearly two decades. He was traded to St. Louis in 1989 and reached the World Series in 1996 and 1999 with the team. He was also named the NL MVP in 1998 and won the NL batting title in 1999.

He is the all-time leader in career home runs with 583 and is second in career RBIs with 1,965. McGwire, who has been a Hall of Fame candidate for several years, is expected to be elected to the hall in 2022.

The announcement was made Friday in St. Louis, where McGwire had his greatest success. He spent 16 seasons with the Cardinals before being traded to the Oakland Athletics in 2001. He then spent one season with the Chicago Cubs before finishing his career with the Los Angeles Dodgers in 2005.

Jordan misses first 14 shots in horrid night

WASHINGTON (AP) — Michael Jordan missed his first 14 shots Monday and has a losing streak for the first time in 35 years after the Washington Wizards lost to the Boston Celtics, 98-84.

Jordan finished with a season-high 40 points and 12 assists, but the Wizards fell to 3-3 on the season. They haven't lost a game since 1980, when they were still in Washington. The Wizards made just three field goals in the first quarter, one of them on a three-point shot by Jordan.

He missed 21 of 28 shots, including seven in a row at one point, that he decided not to shoot, two reverse layups and an open jumper that Beno Udrih specifically drew him to. When Jordan made his first field goal, a tip-in with 4:27 remaining in the third quarter, the face gave definition to a half-full arena.

"It's a great feeling, but it's a great feeling because we won," Jordan said. "I don't want to shoot three shots and make all of them. I don't want to make three or four or five, but I want to make 20/30."

By announcing his retirement before the season even begins in October, McGwire allows the Cardinals to pursue a replacement. Jason Giambi, McGwire's batting coach in Oakland, is now the market's top slugger on the market after the San Diego Padres traded him to the Cleveland Indians before spring training.

For a season, I have had my share of anxiety about winning and losing and I know this will hurt my chances of winning and losing."

McGwire's playing career ended in 2001 with the Oakland Athletics, who replaced Big Mac. McGwire captured the nation's imagination in 1998 while hitting 65 home runs to break Roger Maris' 37-year-old record. It was a short-lived success as Barry Bonds hit 73 home runs this season, but McGwire's career was ended by a bum right knee.

McGwire, who began his career with Oakland in 1989, won the World Series with the A's in 1990 and reached the postseason six times. He was traded to St. Louis midway through the 1993 season and was a key part of the Cardinals' championship team that year.

"For some I have had my share of anxiety about winning and losing and I know this will hurt my chances of winning and losing."
