UI adjacently recruiting-visit rules

Guidelines for prospective athletes and their student-athletes:

- Eligible to participate in team activities, but not to compete in meets
- Eligible to attend practices and training sessions
- Eligible to practice and compete in open tournaments and exhibitions
- Eligible to attend meetings and training sessions

Athletic Director Bob Bowlsby said the guidelines, which were the result of a review by the assistant athletic director and the Iowa State University athletic department, were established to improve the recruitment process and to maintain the integrity of the program. The guidelines were revised to ensure compliance with NCAA regulations and to provide a framework for prospective athletes and their student-athletes to understand the expectations and responsibilities associated with visiting the campus.

Golden Eagle, Tigerhawk look too much like birds of a feather, UI complaints

BY NATE GREEN

It appears there is a new "birdy on Parade." But this bird is not as easily being rooted out by the UI athletic department.

The Community Chronicle

Mississippi introduced a new logo for its athletic department on January 30, 1984 as part of a marketing program. But the version of the logo that was introduced by the University of Mississippi, says the Southern athletic department's new logo is a "Golden Eagle." The logo is set to be used throughout the athletic program, and it is intended to be a symbol of strength and pride.

Studio 13 says it did not exploit loophole in code

The downtown bar takes a 30-day license suspension instead of 60-day

BY JIM BUTTS

The review of Studio 13 on Monday revealed no evidence of criminal behavior, and the bar's license was suspended instead of revoked.

A Studio 13 employee, 13-15 Linn St., pleaded no contest to a 30-day license suspension on Oct. 26, 1984, in which alcohol was sold to a minor. The first fine-payment reduced the fine from $250 to $100, and the second fine-payment reduced the fine from $100 to $50.

On June 4, Dean Scanlon, representing Studio 13, sought suspension instead of criminal license, rather than administrative law, to duck a $20-coupled fine.

It's a case of the court of the court, if the bar is suspected of selling alcohol to a minor, the bar to get a visitation.

In the case, the bar is alleged to be selling alcohol to a minor, and the bar is cited for violating the law.

The bar's license was suspended for 30 days, but the suspension was reduced to 10 days after the second violation and an additional 20 days for a third violation.

Criminal law estimates that the first conviction is a $250 fine, and the second conviction is $500.

But on June 2, Scanlon and officials from the Iowa Attorney General's Office agreed on a 30-day license suspension, rather than a criminal conviction.

The bar's license was suspended for 30 days, but the suspension was reduced to 10 days after the second violation and an additional 20 days for a third violation.

For Christmas, Harris, building houses on a personal piece of land for Habitat for Humanity while learning new skills and meeting new people.

Harris, a single mother of four, is in the process of moving to a tiny white, 5-bed, 2-bath house she is building herself on a house on Aug.

"They will never have to move again," she said, adding that her family has been working on the house for the past nine years.

Harris completed more than 300 hours of volunteer work while working the Iowa City Habitat for Humanity office in 2003. To qualify for the selection process, Habitat volunteers must work a total of 100 hours to build housing for other families. She also worked an additional 200 hours for Habitat before moving into her home.

In her Habitat home, Harris will never have to move again. She said the house will be "like a dream," and that "better than when we moved in.""I never would have thought I could do it," she said.

"I was able to make new friends," she said.

A weepy meditation on love

FILM REVIEW
by Laura Jensen
The Notebook
12:30, 3:30, 7:20, and 9:30 p.m.
Good Hope 1

The Notebook is just as advertised — an unabashed romcom. It features strong performances and gorgeous cinematography, but its slow and leisurely pace, its extended love scenes, and its harrowing storyline (about owners of Noah and Alley Bedford (Rachel McAdams, James Marsden) and their lifelong suffering) do wear thin. The Notebook is, however, an enjoyable love story that will leave you feeling warm, but not necessarily smarter or wiser.

The Notebook is a family-friendly romantic drama about a man named Noah (Ryan Gosling) who falls in love with a woman named Allie (Rachel McAdams) and their lifelong suffering. The film is set in the 1940s and 1980s.

The Notebook features several actors who have already had success in other roles, including Ryan Gosling (The有所不)，Rachel McAdams (The Beautiful) and James Marsden (The Disappearance).

The Notebook was directed by Nicholas Sparks, who has also written the novels on which the film is based.

The Notebook is a tale of love and sacrifice, and it is also a story of self-discovery. The protagonist, Noah, must learn to let go of his past and move on with his life.

The Notebook is a film that will appeal to audiences of all ages. It is a heartwarming story that will leave you feeling grateful for your own life and loved ones.

Go to see The Notebook for a memorable and touching experience.
Sick of health-insurance talk, talk, talk

With the quadrennial presidential campaign comes a familiar battle cry from both candidates: how to make health care affordable for all Americans. More than 46 million Americans are without health insurance, a problem that Ben Kerry, D-Mass., points out in his standard stump speech. Both President Bush and Kerry offer vague plans to address the problem.

However, it's a real question that continues to feature the typical campaign patois, promises not to cut, more promises not to cut. Politicians continue to point to studies that already exist, claiming their candidate's plan will improve on the previous plan, for a purportedly larger population.

Kerry has recently tested his plan, which, he notices, will cut and reform and create 95 percent of Americans. Without mentioning how other similar plans will work, he's ready to put his theories to the test, perhaps because it's election year.

Bush has a plan just as suitably named, and it would be much to help those who need insurance the most. Last year, Bush announced a plan for replacing the employer-based system and creating tax credits and health savings accounts. The approval of this plan means the assumption that people can afford to pay for their health care bills out of pocket and wait a year to get their money back in the form of a tax refund — either that, or find that free check to check and even affording a conventional savings account will cost less.

The present employer-based system not only leaves millions without coverage, but the present premiums are rising at unsustainable levels for those who do have insurance — 12 to 15 percent per year — and business are bashing their threshold of affordability, either cutting back coverage offered to their employees or dumping it completely. The solution to this problem will come from one political party or one single piece of legislation. Asking voters to believe this only demonstrates the uncertainty of such promises for change. Providing health-care coverage for all Americans will take incremental steps. Kerry's plan to extend the Federal Employee Health Benefits Program would only be a start. Voters should demand action from their lawmakers while the issue has its present time in the spotlight. Nothing will be done until the winter elections.

Past time to rethink prison sentences

Bush in America has a one-in-three chance of landing in prison the next 15 years — it's a frightening and sobering reminder of the size of the prison system in this country. Bush's only policy seems to be: lock 'em up and let the rest of the world sort out the mess.

WIMBLEDON, England — The sounds of People’s Sunday rang through Court.

Electronic clapping and stamping from the stands reflected the words, "Come on, "Now that the game was too far back for their voices to carry.

Wearing T-shirts and shorts, advanced with red wristbands, the hot and fast crowd pushed Wimbledons to express their support. The second in the third in 127 more match texts were played on the middle Saturday.

The championship match was on fo un-seen line to give Britain in first two of the 1973 All England Club since 1868, reaching the round of 16 by beating No. 32 Hicham Arazi (6-4, 6-4, 6-2).

When you walk out on the court, just the heat and the excitement is incredible," the fifth-seeded Henman said. "I needed it from the start.

Inside the competition for the White Sox manager role is about the same as their role in the NL Central.

One本土 native, a local boy raised in the Chicago suburb of Naperville, and one from another state, a native of Oklahoma, are in the mix.

Will one of them get the job? The Sox feel that such a move is possible and that they don't need to hire someone outside the organization to fill the void.

The Sox are looking for a manager who can help them break a losing streak and get back on track.

The team is currently sitting at 5-11 in the AL Central and 22 games back of the Kansas City Royals.
