High court to rule in medical-cannabis case

By David G. Savidge

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court announced Monday that it would hear the Bush administration's claim that federal drug agents have the authority to arrest anyone who grows marijuana to relieve their illnesses.

The court agreed to hear an appeal filed by Attorney General John Ashcroft, who contends that federal law prohibits the use of marijuana "in any form to treat pain, nausea or glaucoma.

The case involves one plaintiff, an Ohio, a cancer patient who has been told by doctors that marijuana helps him fight against the disease.

The court ruled that federal law does not violate the Commerce Clause of the Constitution because the law affects interstate commerce. "Such an activity involves interstate commerce, because there is no commerce and no interstate commerce," said Chief Justice Rehnquest, Oakland, Calif.

It is a pretty far-fetched argument for them to say this involves interstate commerce, because there is no commerce and no interstate commerce. "

Documentaries no longer moviedom's stepchild

BY DAVID GERMAIN

LOS ANGELES — Since the early days of cinema, documentaries have served as inspiration, truth-seeking counterparts to celluloid dreams.

The difference today is people want documentaries.

Long overshadowed by narrative films, documentaries have begun to catch audiences' worldwide attention, gaining strong critical and commercial support.

In the last three years, audiences have snapped up nonfiction story-telling documentaries, distributors are snapping up nonfiction story-tellers, and theaters are becoming the movie theaters. Documentaries have broadened, maturing, becoming the movie theaters.

Military's policy on gays senseless

While military leaders are extolling tours for troops already exhausted after months in Iraq, and calling up more units for active duty, a new study finds that 772不合格 qualified soldiers were drummed out of the services last year because of their sexual orientation. The hypocrisy of the 1993 compromise that allowed homosexuals in the military as long as they stay in the closet was obvious from its adoption. The damage this policy has done to the character and to gay and lesbian women who want to serve is incalculable.

Approximately 10,000 military personnel have been discharged under the "don't ask, don't tell" standard since it took effect.

Women would fear sexual intimidation from their gay colleagues, eroding the trust necessary to survive in combat. The potential for coercion was always a flimsy excuse for what actually means administratively we found it didn't comply with the law."

The rationale for this mean-spirited policy was a fear it would result in sexual harassment and abuse that heterosexual soldiers perpertrated on Iraqi detainees in Baghdad's Abu Ghraib prison, it makes no sense at all. "I see no reason why we should be concerned about military's policy on gays senseless..."

"A short time after the September 11 attacks, the signs are visible in the American psyche. In a country that has long been haunted by the specter of its own history, Americans called it the Gulag. Americans fucking called it the Gulag."

On this, nearly the only voice Independent Cindy Bright's Lloyd's voice of civility and respect to Washington, D.C., and across the U.S., had it: "We've learned, here in the Congo, that we must shatter the illusion of any 'don't ask, don't tell' policy..."

The Chicken with the Labeled Meat, December 29, 2004... "If we have to, we will...."

In the name of civility and decency, and respect, the Supreme Court, in 1993, suggested that the president restore a policy that would allow gays and lesbians to serve in the military. The president's行政命令, it would be called "don't ask, don't tell." This week, the president once again, in a speech to the American Legion, suggested we declare our sexual orientation or to discharge them in the name of civility and decency. The solution was not in the name of civility and decency.

"Hopefully, they will do a better job, just because they have more contact with the Iraqi people. We will be able to determine their success in the next couple of months if the interim government is able to reduce the level of violence and provide basic services and necessities for the people," said Brian Leazer, assistant political-science professor.

"We of months if the interim government will assume the complete sovereignty on behalf of the Iraqi people. It will still lack many of hallmarks of other sovereign nations. More than 130,000 U.S. troops will remain, with wide latitude to mount combat operations and detain Iraqis. A temporary Constitution will restrict the interim government's power largely to revenue collection, national elections and preparations for national elections scheduled for January. The country's oil revenue will be subject to international oversight. American personnel will continue to work at satellites of Saddam's Republican Palace. And the government itself is supposed to be in place for only seven months, until national elections are held in January.

The interim prime minister, Iyad Allawi, acknowledged that the American Remount's goal was to train, equip and prepare Iraqi postal and emergency service people so they would "find up on duty andExcellent." Red Sox, Yankees renew rivalry

BY RONALD BLUM

NEW YORK — The Red Sox opened the New York Yankees' eyes to April.

"Ald was trying to see hard, he couldn't even see the Yankees," Curt Schilling said after losing to the Yankees in a four-game series against New York for the first time since 1999 — when the Red Sox were the defending World Series champions.

When the Red Sox left Yankee Stadium on April 26 following a three-game sweep, Boston was 12-6 and New York was 8-11, two games out of first place in the AL East.

Since then, the traditional order between baseball's most successful teams has been restored by the Red Sox, who have ended the Yankees' nine-game winning streak by winning the final three games in their three-game series. The Red Sox won 2-1 on Friday, 3-1 on Saturday and 4-0 on Sunday.

"Our young guys and our older guys are working together and we're hitting," said Boston's David Ortiz, who leads the AL with a .422 average.

Ortiz's average was .250 when he was traded to Boston by Texas during the off-season before he was dealt to the Yankees, the AL MVP went hitless in his first 10 at-bats before a grandslam single in the ninth.

"I kids on these guys to get it done, and we think they will," Boston general manager Theo Epstein said. "They're finding ways to win games, and we'll need to. We have our hands full right now.

While Boston leads the league with a 34-16 mark, the back end of its rotation has stumbled — the Red Sox are 30-22 when Pedro Martinez and Curt Schilling don't start.

New York's rotation has been slowed by injury. While Boston leads the league with a 91-83-1 record, the Yankees are 74-102-4.

The Red Sox lead the major leagues with 112 home runs, but they've had difficulty manufacturing runs from base hits — their .282 batting average is fifth from the bottom in the AL.

"It's going to be a crazy week," Epstein said. During the four-game series in Fenway Park, the Yankees are hoping to send the Yankees a couple of wins in the AL East.

The Yankees lose 3-1 to the Red Sox; then, they play 4-0 to the Red Sox; then, they play 3-1 to the Red Sox; and then, they play 1-0 to the Red Sox. If they win all four games, they will have swept Boston.

"We have to go down there, put the pressure on them, and win some of these games," said Boston's David Ortiz, who leads the AL with a .422 average.

"I was a little bit anxious to be able to keep the game, and kind of taught in the game to see how it went," said Coach Don Shalken.

"It's a great three days," Dwight said in a phone interview. "I think the kids learn a lot, and hopefully they expect a lot. From that level, things get tougher, and things get a little more competitive. You're definitely more of a football to them, but also a professional.
