After presentation, council scraps 21-ordinance

BY JESSICA SEVESKA
The Daily Iowan

A majority of councilors on Wednesday decided to scrap a new 21-ordinance, which would have limited students under the age of 21 from being in bars or offering alcohol for sale.

The ordinance had been written by four councilors: Vice Mayor and Councilor for District C Erin Fulcher, Councilor for District B David Ortiz, Councilor for District A Karen Whitaker and Mayor and Councilor for District E Brian Haver, according to The Daily Iowan.

The ordinance would have restricted bars from offering alcohol to anyone 21 or younger, which proponents said would decrease underage drinking.

But those supporting the ordinance were backed by the University of Iowa’s Health Promotion team, who said that this was necessary for the health and safety of students.

However, a majority of the council was against this. It was decided that bars would still be able to offer alcohol to anyone 21 or younger.

The ordinance was scrapped in the end by a vote of 11-2.

The University of Iowa is a state-supported institution and operates as a public benefit corporation, meaning that it is not for profit, according to its statement on the University of Iowa’s website.

The ordinance was dropped by the councilors after it was made clear that it would not pass.

Franken, Leach trade opinions in Tipton

BY NICK PETERSEN
The Daily Iowan

TIPON - Second Congressional District candidates presented their differences on abortion and gun control, among other issues, in the second forum of the Cedar County Community Center last night.

Leach, a 42-year-old retired Navy officer, said that the president’s proposals to increase gun control would hurt the average American.

Franken, who is a 53-year-old lawyer and U.S. senator, said that he would support gun control and questioned Leach’s support of the National Rifle Association.

Candidates differ over jail solution, 21-ordinance

SHERIFFS CANDIDATE 21-ordinance

Seventy-six percent of voters said they would support the 21-ordinance if it passed. Yet, a law to raise the drinking age to 21 is not a new idea in Iowa. The proposal was first introduced in the 1971 Iowa General Assembly.

The two candidates for Johnson County Sheriff and four candidates for county supervisor all said they would support a 21-ordinance if it passes. This is an election year, however, and the candidates are looking to gain votes for their campaigns.

“Voters said they were concerned that underage-drinking problem was a serious issue and that something needed to be done to address it,” said6 Lauk, a Democratic candidate for Johnson County Sheriff.

Lauk said he believes the bars should move to Ankeny, Clive, Urbandale, and Altoona, and that the bars should be closed by 3 a.m.

On the other hand, Republican candidate Sherwin said he does not support the 21-ordinance.

“Underage drinking is not just an Iowa City issue,” said Sherwin. “It’s a countywide issue, and it needs to be addressed on a countywide level.”

Sherwin said he believes the bars should be closed by 2 a.m. and that the bars should be moved to another location.

Bush inks homeland-security bill

The president then...Kerry on national-security issues

By JENNIFER LOVEN

WASHINGTON - President Bush signed legislation Monday that gives the Department of Homeland Security approximately $33 billion to shore up the nation's borders, protect against ballots...in the election, and thus the small percentage of votes that were keeping Gore in the running.

Homeland Security Secretary Tom Ridge and members of Congress were among those looking forward to the day the nation's borders are finally sealed off from international terrorism and illegal immigration.

Brooks, a Republican from Washington state, said Sunday there was no guarantee that the bill will pass the Senate. He said Democrats might oppose it if they believe it gives too much power to the president.

Brooks said he expected the Senate to vote on the bill late Monday or early Tuesday morning.

Bush vetoed a similar bill in August, setting the stage for a veto override in the Senate to become law.

Brooks said the House would immediately consider a compromise version of the Senate bill after it passed in the Senate.

Bush signed the bill after leaving the White House for New Jersey, where he delivered a speech on homeland security.

The president, who has vowed to make the issue a top priority, was joined at the Oval Office event by Sens. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, and Richard Durbin, D-Ill., and House Speaker J. Dennis Hastert, R-Ill.

Bush said the bill gives federal agencies and state, local and private security forces the tools they need to protect the nation.

Bush said the bill would help close the gap between federal and state and local security agencies and help states boost their own spending on homeland security.

The administration has repeatedly pressed Congress to pass the homeland security bill, which is one of the president's top priorities.

The $33 billion measure, which would be the largest single appropriation in the bill, would go toward new equipment and training for emergency responders.

The measure also provides $4.1 billion for the Transportation Security Administration, which is responsible for protecting public transportation systems.

The money would be used to improve national security by outlays for port security issues.

The National Intelligence Estimate said last June that it was likely al Qaeda would attack the United States with a nuclear weapon within the next 15 years.

However, the Senate passed the bill last month with a 99-0 vote and the House has approved a version of the legislation with a 392-0 vote.

Democratic leaders have repeatedly urged the Senate to pass the bill.

Bush signed the bill Monday after approval by Congress.

The president, who has said he wants to keep the nation safe from terrorist attacks, signed the bill in the Oval Office.

Democratic and Republican leaders in both chambers of Congress have praised the measure.

Democratic leaders have praised the measure, saying it will provide the necessary resources to protect the nation.

Republican leaders have praised the measure, saying it will help the nation stay safe from terrorist attacks.

Students who choose to leave their home country and move here to further their education are often-times spurred by factors such as job opportunities, family concerns, or political policies as much as any under this American sky. They are expected to merge in with the rest of the population and make the United States their home away from home while spending large sums of money on their education and transportation costs and transforming cultural and natural diversity to those around them. Why, then, do they not own the right to vote and have a say in the processes of their perception to America's ways of governance? After all, the world is in one state—so—global platforms, so this could be the first step to appreciating and amalgamating cultures in the true sense.

The current policy for international students stipulates that those who have lived in America for five years or less are normally granted only limited degree of representation. That means they pay federal tax on income received from America, which includes any scholarship or grant that covers rent and board, and wages from any American job that are off- or on-campus, including teaching assistantships and graduate assistantships. Whatever happened to the concept of "no taxation without representation?" Wasn't this a key reason for being against the Federalist papers? There is no compelling reason to keep long-term international students from integrating successfully into American society while they study here. Is this a country where I can call home?

Tate, Schlicher win conference honors

Tate was named Big Ten Offensive Player of the Year and Schlicher was Big Ten placekicker of the year. Both were recent Iowa football seniors.

The Hawkeyes finished the year ranked No. 16 in the AP Poll and No. 18 in the Coaches' Poll, the highest ranking in school history.

The team finished the season with a 7-5 record, including a 4-4 mark in Big Ten play.

BACK FOUR AGAIN WITH THE CORRECT ONE, 28

BY TED MCCARTAN  THE DAILY IOWA

As a sprinter on the track team, Derrick Burma does the black and gold of the Hawkeyes, but it's a relief that in Iowa City nothing in his wardrobe could get him killed.

Burma grew up 1,100 miles away in Sacramento, and that's the half of it.

He's a senior on the Iowa men's track and field team, and he has released a rap album called "New Player," produced by Baton Entertainment, under the stage name Burma.

Rapping got his mind off the tough streets he grew up in, where many of his friends are still Crips. He realized times when he and his cousin rode their bikes through the streets met with blue rags hanging out, counting theODY.

"When I was young, that's all I saw, so that's what I wanted to be," Burma said. "That was like my role model, to be a big-time gang boss." He would hang out on 21st Street, where he could see as much as red as you could on a Dodger fan. The Crip logo hung out from 21st to 29th Street, commonly referred to as his neighborhood. Burma and his friends found themselves met at that crossroads.

"Sometimes, people don't understand that "gangsters" turn to a gang because they come from broken homes or their parents are addicts. The gang becomes their family. Because Burma's dad was "in and out of" home and prison while he was growing up, his mom took to both parenting roles. She passed away from lung cancer on Sept. 1.

Burma has released three other albums, which have been well-received by fans.

"My main inspiration is the life of my dad," Burma said. "I've never met a parent who didn't have a drug problem. My dad was a drug dealer, but he used to be a Crips." He added, "I'm just trying to get my message across."
Which undefeated
NFL team will win the Super Bowl?

In the NFL, coaching can cost you a long way, and the Patriots' fortunes are no exception. In the league has Bill Belichick. But Andy Reid has a great head coach, but he hasn't been able to carry his team to the Super Bowl this year. In every one of potential out of position, Reid will not have the best talent in the league, but he will put up for it with heart and the desire to win.

While not blessed with the same talent as the Patriots or New England, the Patriots are nonetheless capable of winning championships. They have won five Super Bowls, but only once in the last 15 years. The Patriots have the most unshakable quarterback in the league, Tom Brady. Their defense is solid of first-half touchdowns but with an injured right shoulder this Wednesday won't be decided until

USC and Miami take top BCS spots

Southern California took the top spot Monday in the season's first bowl projections, big computer ratings, and, surprisingly, Miami is ahead of Oklahoma in a close race for the second spot.

USC is No. 2, followed by Miami, which is No. 3 in both the Associated Press and computer rankings, and surprise, surprise, Miami is ahead of Oklahoma in a close race for second overall.

The No. 3 Miami Hurricanes (9-1) are ahead of Oklahoma (10-0), which is No. 4 in both the AP and computer polls. While Oklahoma is No. 4 in both ratings, Miami is No. 3 in the computer polls.

The AP and coaches' polls are only one-third of a team's total score in the BCS standings. The other third is made up of computer rankings, and that's where Miami made up the difference. The Hurricanes are ranked fourth in the AP polls and third in the coaches poll, but have the second-best points in the computer polls.

"I think it's obviously very important that we can be an exuberant team," said Miami head coach Butch Davis. "I think we have a team that can be an exuberant team this year."

The AP coaches were surprised, to tell you the truth, at the top two teams.

The Hurricanes are ranked fourth in the AP polls and third in the coaches poll, but have the second-best points in the computer polls.

"Our philosophy is that the only way we're going to win is to play," Miami coach Larry Coker said. "We're going to do whatever we have to do to win, whether it's our ranking or our standings."

Davis said that Miami was ahead of Oklahoma in both polls and computer rankings by having very few losses and a strong schedule.

"Several of them use a human-computer formula, and our team from its own enthusiasm, its own growth, its own development, is doing very well," he said.

Davis said that Miami's schedule will help the top two teams in the final BCS standings because of the number of big games.

The champions from the Atlantic Coast Conference, Big East, Big Ten, Big 12, Pac-10 and Southeastern Conference make up one of the eight bowls in the four BCS games — the Orange, Sugar, Rose, and Fiesta bowls. The other two spots go to wild-card teams.

Finishing in the top six in the BCS standings also guarantees a team a BCS bowl bid. A top-10 ranking in the final BCS standings is necessary to be eligible for one of the wild-card spots.

Three Rutgers players hurt in car crash

Four people, three of them Rutgers players, suffered injuries in an accident on Route 18 with a drunk driver Oct. 16. Safety DONNIE ASBERN suffered a spine fracture and remains in critical condition. Cornerbacks LESLIE COLLINS and CADEN GORDON were released with facial and head injuries.

Rutgers coach Greg Schiano said he drove Collins and Gordon would play when Rutgers travels to Pittsburgh on Saturday. They're strapped up. We'll know more as the week goes on," Schiano said. None of the players are expected to be released from the front seat.

The driver of the SUV, 32-year-old James Berger, was charged with drunk driving and reckless driving. He was not wearing a seat belt and was partially ejected from the front seat.

Miami, at the first spot, was left by an average of 11.8 points in the standings, took the lead after beating Florida State and Louisiana, two ranked teams that moved the rankings in the Hurricanes.

Jerry Rice got

The accolades, like her path, just keep rolling in for Sorenstam.

Sorenstam, a three-time winner on the LPGA Tour (the first woman to win six tournaments in a season) in 2000, was named Woman of the Year by the Women's Sports Foundation on Monday at the Waldorf Astoria.

Sorenstam, who had the highest career earnings among female athletes and the highest LPGA career earnings among women, was not a surprise pick by the Women's Sports Foundation.

And neither was the selection of Sorenstam's caddie, Brandy Lovan, as Assistant Coach of the Year.

"She's an outstanding young woman," said Sorenstam, who was named Player of the Year by the LPGA.

Sorenstam and Lovan are listed as co-winners in the Women's Sports Foundation's "Women of the Year" list.

"It's about thinking and planning," said Sorenstam.

Red Sox triumph over Yankees

On the heels of the 1996 World Series, the Red Sox took on the mighty New York Yankees in what was expected to be a series of thrilling gameplay. With the home crowd cheering, the Red Sox emerged victorious, showcasing their skill and determination against the formidable Yankees. The game was a testament to the Red Sox's resilience, as they fought through challenges and emerged triumphant in a close game.

Greatest Show On Turf is back

While the baseball world was buzzing with the Red Sox-Yankees series, football fans were also treated to a thrilling game. The Bucs challenged a strong opposing team, but their strategy and teamwork proved to be too much for the competition. Their victory over the St. Louis Cardinals in the World Series solidified their status as a formidable force in the NFL. The Bucs' strength in defense and their ability to seize opportunities made them a formidable team to watch, and their fans celebrated every touchdown with the same fervor as baseball fans celebrated every win.
