The UI Task Force on Graduate Education released its report Monday with ratings and recommendations for reorganization of several graduate programs, including the 14 with the lowest evaluations. Those programs will undergo further assessment in the coming months.

Russell Valentino, the head of the university’s cinema/comparative literature department, said people in his program have begun brainstorming ideas, but they would need substantial time to evaluate any success. He expressed anxiety that rushing changes could lead to greater problems.

UI creates institute for twice-exceptional

A new UI institute will aid an under-represented student population.

By MITCHELL SCHMIDT

The identification of giftedness and talent is trying to help a unique group of students: those who are both gifted and twice-exceptional — for whom being smart is not enough.

New UI Vice President for Student Affairs and Director of the University's Office of Student Life, Dr. Dale Locke-Davis, and administrative and faculty officials gathered at the Blum Center to discuss the creation of the University’s Initiative for Twice-Exceptional Students.

"The initiative is primarily funded by an annual university gift of approximately $200,000, which will grow to $500,000 in the next year," said Locke-Davis. "The purpose of the initiative is to create an institute that will serve twice-exceptional students by providing them with the resources and support they need to succeed in college.

The initiative is being led by Dr. Sarah Delp, associate dean of the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences, and Dr. David Leck, associate dean of the College of Education.

"Twice-exceptional students are those who are gifted in one area and have a learning disorder or disability," said Delp. "They are often overlooked and may not be identified as twice-exceptional until they enter college. This initiative is designed to help these students succeed in college by providing them with the resources and support they need to succeed in college.

According to the National Education Association, there are approximately 1,200,000 students in American K-12 schools who are twice-exceptional. The National Institute for Twice-Exceptional Advocacy and Research (NITEAR) predicts that the number of twice-exceptional students will increase to 2,000,000 by 2020.

The National Institute for Twice-Exceptional Advocacy and Research (NITEAR) predicts that the number of twice-exceptional students will increase to 2,000,000 by 2020. The institute plans to support this increase by providing resources and support to twice-exceptional students in K-12 schools.

According to Delp, the institute will provide resources and support to twice-exceptional students in K-12 schools by creating a network of twice-exceptional student advocates and providing professional development opportunities for teachers and administrators.

"The goal of the institute is to create a network of twice-exceptional student advocates and provide professional development opportunities for teachers and administrators," said Delp. Panel wants school without borders

Task force aims to increase student diversity and the number of those studying abroad.

By SAM LANE

A task force report released last Friday by Provost Wallace Larroche’s organization for diversity and "without borders." As internal conversations around the campus become increasingly diverse internationally, the university will need to expand its efforts toward internationalization, the Task Force on Internationalization said, according to UI senior Michael Appel, who served on the task force, and international coordinator for the program.

"We can only benefit from becoming more culturally diverse," the political-science major said. "It’s an essential if we want to become a greater university."

Larroche praised the group’s many efforts, including the creation of five task forces to explore how the university could help increase the number of those studying abroad.

"The goal is to become a "24/7/12" university," Larroche said.

"Strengthening international and diversity is a pressing issue," Larroche and Diversity said.

"We have the capacity.‘ We’re really already part of that goal," said task force head and music professor David Gee. "There are things that are already happening here."

"I think we’re on the precipice of some very exciting new things," Larroche said.

The task force suggested:

• Increasing retention for the first-year students by 10 percent

• Focusing each first-year student on a learning community by 2014

• Promoting lead trips, group maps, and peer and faculty learning communities

• Creating the Student Success Center on campus

• Considering the par- chase of property for new residence halls

• Opening a First-Year Experience Office

• Increasing the six-year graduation rate for every specific population

• Increasing the six-year graduation rate for all students

More UI outreach recommended

A task force’s plan includes forming stronger academic partnerships with community colleges.

By JORDAN FRIES

The UI should strengthen its sustainability efforts and reach out more to community colleges, the UI Task Force on Public Outreach and Civic Engagement said on Monday.

The change, however, could add to the workload or travel expenses of UI professors who have to commute to other schools.

Steve Carpenter, the public-information director at Kirkwood Community College, said community colleges’ relationships with the UI allow students who learn at a different pace to “broaden their options.”

State Board of Regents’ President David Miles said earlier this month that he approved of state universities partnering with two-year institutions.

“The most important component of sustainabil- ity is community and recognizing one’s impact in that community,” said Liz Christiansen, the director of the Office of Sustainability and a member of the task force. “We want our program to be a meaningful, valuable resource to all Iowans.”

The theme of an enhanced community was prevalent throughout the 31-page report.

Other suggestions the task force made to UI officials include:

• Promoting the arts and cultural community by determining permanent sites for Hancher Auditorium and the UI Museum of Art.

• Expanding technology and media use, including the development of a website advertising the university’s national and international outreach programs.

• Quickening the development of Iowa’s working age-population. Task force members want to increase the 14.7 percent of Iowa adults who possess a bachelor’s degree.

A report calls for focusing research on eight areas, including biomedicine and communication sciences.

By SAM LANE

A UI task force on Monday noted eight areas of research focus it said should act as a guide when contemplating funding in the future.

The 50-page report from the UI Task Force on Research and Creative Excellence is in response to Provost Wallace Loh’s initial charge to extend the university’s strong tradition.

Since then, the task force has worked to find ways to improve the university’s interdisciplinary research. Members said they wanted to make sure the university “recognized as a major research institution” becomes a “real-world research environment.”

“We got a lot of input from people across campus in areas where we could potentially build,” said Vicki Grassian, a UI chemistry professor. “Now we have opportunities to enhance these areas.”

The following were some of key recommendations outlined in the task force's report:

- Provide an adequate information-technology support staff and necessary facilities.
- Build or purchase any necessary infrastructure or equipment to create a proper universitywide research environment and increase administrative support.
- Establish a facility on the East Campus that would facilitate inter-, multi-, and transdisciplinary research.
- Develop a university-level policy by July 1 that specifies faculty research incentive plans for each UI college. In addition, create faculty incentive plans to address research differences across departments.
- Produce and maintain a website, which lists all UI outreach activities, and include UI researchers and scholars on outreach committees. Consider outreach and civic engagement in new faculty hires.
- Form eight areas of research focus: biomedical diversity, communication sciences, developmental and aging studies, the expressive arts, global health, sustainability, transformative and translational technologies, and writing and scholarly engagement.

Shifting focus to those areas would include implementing the suggested changes in those fields.

Grassain said these eight areas are key to the UI’s international distinction.

“If we think about problems that are facing mankind right now, they’re complex and require many disciplines to help solve,” she said.

Snow emergencies illustrate need for more effective city parking policy

Snow emergencies in Iowa City provide a chance for students to miss school. As US students are yearning for a snow day, this year more than ever, the citizens of Iowa City are looking for communication during snow emergencies which has been lacking.

Two snow emergencies this winter, one of which occurred last week, the city has brought in $38,500 in parking ticket revenue, an amount is deposited into the city's general fund. Although, the city issued 775 citations during the two snow emergencies that lasted, together, four days. Public Works Director, Fosse said.

Taxpayers expect their city's infrastructure to be effective and efficient. Errantly parked cars obviously create a wrench in that. But raising snow-citation fines from $15 to $50 this year suggests the city could plan a larger revenue from parking in fear of public reaction. After all, the city is taking in millions of dollars in last week's snow emergency were breaking the law. Who can argue with that?

"The $15 fine was not covering our costs," Fosse said. "We also wanted it to be high enough to serve as an incentive to more cars, if you are in an area that the tow trucks may not get to.

But there seems to be a direct lack of communication between Iowa City and its public. The city is in town which parking a scarce commodity. This parking issue has created an atmosphere of outrageous expensive parking spots available only to those who want to create a mess of purgatory involving many wasteful hours of circling and walking parallel to the parking signs. It's time the city re-examines their parking fee and charges.

We understand it's a daunting task for the city to deal with a population of both longterm residents and the ever-increasing number of the city's strategy of parking parking stipulation — snow emergency parking aren't good enough. Nor is an e-mail/text message alert program always working, while some city residents and students will subscribe on their own.

If Russell agrees to travel from Des Moines and we'll—sorry, I'm not going to discuss that. It's a decision the city council makes. We should be aware of it, and I'm sure the city council is aware of the safety and the efficiency of the plan.

I have Russell accepts and takes this opportunity to educate

“I always knew I wanted to go off to the big city and be around a real arts community, be among the freaks. There aren’t that many freaks in suburban Dallas,” Clark said.

Despite the rapid growth, which she is humbled and thankful for, the reality of touring keeps the combination in check. “It’s all very exciting, and I do hate to leave the city behind, but on the road the city is not nearly as show business,” she said.

Iowa City mayor Michael Sokoloff sits in his office in the East College Street residence on Sunday. Sokoloff, who originally studied modern dance, has worked in myriad performance spaces, ranging from tents in Chicago to Broadway. Sokoloff, who is very good at visual and perceptive to what is occurring on the stage, thinks violence is the answer when it comes to especially graphic scenes or situations, he’s worked in spanning shows on Broadway. Sokoloff swooped into a play until it’s on its feet,” Sokoloff said. “You’re not going to know it if you’re not in the room. You’re going to be saying to yourself, ‘How did I miss that?’” He approaches work in the theater as a director by being very prepared and perceptive to what is happening on the stage. “He’s a sharp director who is very good at visual depictions to get the audience in a certain direction,” said Linda Lindhard, an actor who met him in 2000 while working on the show “Debutante.” Lindhard was not only an actor in Sokoloff’s productions, she worked behind the stage with him as well. “He taught me a lot about directing from him. She said: “It’s a great privilege to work with him. He’s a theater person’s theater person.” Sokoloff is passionate for the arts has been a long-term relationship, who has taken him to many places and allowed him to meet many people. “I think the theater is one of those things that is in your blood,” he said, adding, “I love learned so much working with him in such a short time.”

The UI employs around 300 postdocs per year. A married man of almost 50 years who moved to the Postdoc, is also a playwright and fiction author who has also worked in fight choreography. “I believe on a little life of great accomplishment,” he said. Sokoloff’s foundation for that, which aids his life in fights — in modern dance. He studied modern dance at the UI and later trained privately in New York, is a playwright and fiction author who has also worked in fight choreography. Iowa women's gymnastics coach motivates her team with 'brutal honesty.'

By ROBBIE LEISHMAN

Larissa Libby is a straight shooter when it comes to coaching, according to the women's gymnastics team. Libby, a head coach at the University of Iowa, is known for her no-nonsense attitude. Libby, a former Olympic gymnast, is known for her strict coaching methods.

"We have our own little motto here," said Dyer. "You have to bring your best every day. You can't take any day off, and you can't have any half-assed performance."

Libby is known for her honesty, even if it stings. "She definitely tells you what you're doing wrong, and she lets you know what you can improve," said Galau. "She's not going to sugarcoat anything." Libby's tactics over time. Libby is known for her honesty, even if it stings. "She definitely tells you what you're doing wrong, and she lets you know what you can improve," said Galau. "She's not going to sugarcoat anything." Libby's tactics over time.

"We need to keep our intensity on defense, because we lost the last two games, we have to make sure we get that little bit of a fire in the defense," said the team's head coach, Libby. "As far as the rest of the team goes, they're not all menial tasks."

"We probably wouldn't win if this was only one way you could play on the court," said Miles. "We want women's basketball to be as hard as ever to over- come." The team knows that they can take what they learn from the Wildcats coaches and players and apply it in intramurals. "We're not fake about it," said Dyer. "We're not going to lie to you."

"I'm brutally honest, usu- ally because at the end of the day, I don't want there to be any question," said Libby. "Sometimes we want to know it. If you don't want to know, just ask, because I'm going to tell you. They get tough, but because of it, or because they're honest."

"I want my athletes to have the best possible experience," said Libby. "I want them to enjoy the game, and I want them to be successful."

"I want them to respect the game, and they're respectful of the game," said Libby. "I want them to understand the rules, and I want them to be a part of the team."

"She's a really good coach, and we appreciate her," said Miles. "She's not going to let you off easy, but she's there to help you."

"She knows her gymnasts so well, they can do anything she asks," said Galau. "She's good at getting them to give their all on the floor, and she's good at getting them to give their all in the gym."

"She's a hard coach, but she's a good coach," said Dyer. "You can tell she cares, and she cares for you."

"She's a great coach, and she's there for you," said Galau. "She's going to push you to your limits, and she's going to make you better."
Iowa junior swimmer Christine Mauro stands the water in a photo during the pre-meet in Muncie. She transferred from Arizona State University, and she will swim for the Hawkeyes at the upcoming Big Ten championships.

"I think he's capable of impressing the Wisconsin coaching staff and rapid rise to success," said sophomore Erik Sowinski, who transferred from Arizona and will swim for the Hawkeyes at the 2010-11 season, ongoing dual meets from Jan 16.

"I'm excited to be racing for Iowa," she said. "It's all just nervous right now, but I'm part of the team. I'm excited to be a part of that, and I can do it best."
In a week when Kansas State climbed to No. 1, its highest ranking in nearly five decades, the St. John’s Red Storm was elevated into the AP poll at No. 25 for the first time since January 1989. It’s just the fourth time in school history that small private school has been included in the poll.

The St. John’s (14-12), 9-7 in conference, fell to No. 8, followed by Ohio State, which has won four straight and six of its past seven including a 75-64 victory over Georgia Tech on Feb. 13.

The last five teams were Temple, Baylor, and newsmakers Wake Forest, Texas A&M, and Richmond. The last five teams were Temple, Baylor, and newsmakers Wake Forest, Texas A&M, and Richmond.

Wake Forest (13-5), which has won four straight and six of seven including a 75-64 victory over Georgia Tech on Feb. 13, moved in for the first time this season including one week at No. 1, in one spot in the ACC. Texas A&M (18-6) was ranked for four weeks earlier this season, and in A&M moved back in behind Vanderbilt and Xavier, who lost to Miami and Wake Forest last week, dropped to 1-5 in ACC.

On Monday night against Texas A&M, the Big 12 conference, they accomplished what they had been working to accomplish, and we’ve been very open with our accomplishments, and we’ve been very open with our goals about this, that it was something that was not going to happen just because of the hard work and dedication that the March Madness is there for the first time since Janu- ary 1997. It was the fifth-successive week. It was only the third
