As much summer as sweet corn

By LISA BRAHMS

A white truck with a large window covering one side pulled up to Charles Bloom's grandparents' house in Iowa City over the weekend, a crazy noise echoing throughout the neighborhood, signifying to neighborhood, signifying to children farther down the street, "The Entertainer" announcing his presence to children farther down the block. "I'm an 'Entertainer' guy myself," Bird said about the most popular of the four songs heard blasting from his truck as he drove through an Iowa City neighborhood that he recently visited for a child's birthday party. During a two-hour drive throughout Iowa City on July 17, Bird handed ice cream over to around 15 kids during five stops. Finding children to serve requires more strategic thinking these days because of the modern predilection to stay indoors with air conditioning and video games, as well as more parents sending their kids to daycare. "You just don't see the kids out and about anymore like they used to be," Bird said as he stopped for a four-year-old who ran out of his house to pay Peppy's for two Snickers Ice Cream bars before quickly heading back into the "safety" of his air-conditioned home. A $4.5 million offer may guarantee the University of Iowa the property now serving as the Iowa City School District's central administrative offices. This past week, the university made an offer to purchase the district's central administrative offices. School Board member Mike Cooper. "University officials approached us and asked if we were interested in selling the building, and we said yes," said School Board member Mike Cooper. "We were interested in selling it before the ordinance went into effect June 1."

Local ice-cream truck brings smiles to local children.

By COLLEEN KENNEDY & GRACE SAVIDES

A local ice-cream truck, in business since 1988, brings smiles to local children. Four years ago, Bird and wife Denise Bird took over Peppy's Ice Cream, which started in 1988. Bird said Peppy's, which can draw as in much as $280 per day, can spend half that amount daily just on ice cream for the 21-ordinance. Vets’ BBQ gives benefit information

A barbecue drew vets of wars from World War II to the Gulf War.

By Tyler Harris

World War II veteran Warren Thompson and John Sherrin ate across the table from each other on Sunday afternoon, enjoying a meal together at the Vet’s Center in Cedar Rapids. Thompson, 90, and Sherrin, 88, are both World War II veterans, and they enjoyed meeting each other for the first time.

Disability compensation and pension, life insurance, and specialty benefits, such as mental health care. However, unlike past years, this year’s event did not include speakers allowing veterans to simply ask questions to representatives of Veterans Affairs.

The event also included a tour of the VFW’s facilities, and their family members were included as well, including a VFW Post 1777 friend, owned by World War II veteran veteran Mark Heine.

While the VFW has 42 locations throughout the Midwest, 15 in Iowa and 20 in Illinois, 14 in Indiana, 13 in Missouri, and 11 in Kansas, the organization is dedicated to serving veterans and their families.

The magician of pain

John Macatee is one of the country’s few doctors who specialize in Osteopathic Manual Treatment. Read more.

John Macatee

For about 40 years, Osteopathic manual therapist John Macatee has been helping people with pain. He sees patients at the University of Iowa’s Orthopaedics Clinic in Iowa City.

Dr. Macatee performs a counterstrain technique on a patient on his first day of work.

Dr. Macatee says he’s had patients return to him because of the pain they have suffered over the years and because of a growing concern.

"I found [osteopathic] to be a very powerful tool," he said. "It’s something that’s been around for a very long time, and it’s something that people have used for a very long time." Dr. Macatee adds that he uses the technique in his practice to help patients who have had surgery and who are returning to him because of pain they have suffered over the years.

Dr. Macatee’s technique, which he calls "the Macatee Method," is a type of osteopathic treatment that is used to treat pain and other conditions.

"It’s a technique that is used to help people with pain," he said. "It’s a technique that is used to help people with pain." Dr. Macatee’s technique is based on the belief that the body is a natural system, and that by understanding how the body works, pain can be reduced.

ed three tenants fail to make their rent this month. And not all are sure, he noted, with one such tenant owning a retail store that has been in Iowa City for almost 18 years.

He said his properties have been affected by the lack of downtown traffic, and he believes it will ultimately affect all downtown businesses.

“That’s what [the City Council] doesn’t understand,” he said. “It’s the core of the city. It’s the shops. It’s the restaurants. It’s everything that students might go out and do.”

Iowa City City Council member Regena Bailey said she is not surprised that bars are losing money, because the change from under age patrons brought in a peak of early funds.

“We can develop a viable downtown space, it’s an opportunity for all ages to participate in downtown activities,” said Bailey, the only councilor to oppose the ordinance. “But it might require some establishments to change their approach.”

Change, but keep 1st in nation

In the vein of national politics, Iowa is not known for much other than its continuing role of wooing out some of the nation’s most prominent presidential candidates. Iowa is one of the states that, with its hectic schedule of elections, has become a kinder and gentler place. The most recent presidential candidates have walked the line between candidates and a raft of jobs that have been created specifically to help the nomination process by pouring out in droves, to see the candidates and primary back to February in order to have states vote in “clusters” or later in the process, the Republicans (and not just the Democrats) ought to consider before the August 15 deadline.

Finally, the issue of superdelegates continues to be a major point of contention. Democratic National Committee chairman Howard Dean has been an outspoken advocate of reducing the number of superdelegates, arguing that they give too much influence to the party establishment and too little to the rank-and-file party members. In its August vote, we hope the Democratic National Committee will decide to reduce the number of superdelegates, allowing more input from the grassroots and less influence from the party establishment.

In the end, the issue of superdelegates may be the most controversial of all the changes that are currently being considered. While some may argue that reducing the number of superdelegates is necessary to ensure that the nomination process is fair and representative, others may argue that reducing the number of superdelegates will make it more difficult for the party to unite behind a single candidate. As with any political issue, there are no easy answers and the debate over superdelegates is likely to continue for some time to come.

Louis Oosthuizen hugs the trophy after winning the British Open on the Old Course at St. Andrews, Scotland, on Sunday.

A short while ago, “peace flotilla” did not even exist. But to bring peace to the troubled Middle East, the Middle East, the Middle East.

Sharon decided that he was tired of the conflict between Israel and its neighbors. He decided to start a peace flotilla to go into the Gaza Strip and bring in aid to the Palestinian people. Sharon was killed in a helicopter crash, but the peace flotilla continued.

Oosthuizen runs away in British Open

Louis Oosthuizen hugs the trophy after winning the British Open on the Old Course at St. Andrews, Scotland, on Sunday. He ran away with the tournament, setting records and breaking the hearts of his competitors.

“Nobody was going to stop him,” said Rory McIlroy, who finished second. “He was just too good.”

Oosthuizen, a 27-year-old South African, had never won a major before and entered the tournament with a triple bogey into the gorse on the 12th hole. But he came back with a 67, including an eagle on the 15th hole, to win by five shots.

“It was a proud moment for us,” said his mother, Janine. “We knew he could do it, but we never thought it would happen.”

Oosthuizen had to overcome some early struggles. He had a double bogey on the second hole and a bogey on the third, but he stayed in the hunt with several birdies on the back nine.

In the end, he finished with a 69, a score that would have won most tournaments. But not this one.

“I told him he’s got to get in there and be more determined,” said his father, Bob. “I told him he’s got to show a bias. But I didn’t flinch today.”

It was his seventh top-10 finish of the year in the three majors, blown away the field. He is the first African to claim a major. He just had no idea it would be this easy.

He never let anyone get close, not even Tiger Woods, who had been struggling with his game. But he responded with a 1-under 71 for a three-shot win.

He had won the British Open in 2010, his only visit to the UK. And in fact, he had been struggling with his game. But he responded with a 1-under 71 for a three-shot win.

“I never take for granted the fact that I’m a farmer,” said Oosthuizen. “I always have to work around my schedule. Call us for more information: 800-965-6520 ext. 111.
