Two recent UI alumni aim to start their own nonprofit organization.

By ALLISON SULLIVAN

Two UI alums, Michael Zimmerman and Andy Garberson, are on their way to creating their own fully sustainable nonprofit organization.

While making a difference. While making a living.

In 2007, they finally decided on a “bible” that they would follow:

- Make sure the idea is viable.
- Make sure the idea is connected to a bigger picture.
- Make sure the idea is sustainable.
- Make sure the idea is simple.

When Michael Zimmerman and Andy Garberson reached their final semester as entrepreneurial students at the University of Iowa in December 2007, they finally decided on a “bible” that they would follow: Making a Living While Making a Difference.

It all started with a book and a lot of ideas.

Afternoon of living dead

The zombie march raised about $1,050 for various charities.

By MAX FRIEDMAN

Shane Belford stumbled upon a crowd forming behind him, his white shirt covered in blood. Despite the chaos that had unfolded, he was determined to keep moving, as he sought to escape the zombie horde that had chased him into an abandoned building.

"I had to keep going," Belford said. "I couldn't stop. They were always on my heels."

"I don't know how they kept up with me," said Liz Brown, who had also been caught in the zombie outbreak. "They were everywhere.""I have always been really good at running, and I have never really needed to run," Belford added. "But I had to now."

Shane Belford in honor of the victims

Organizers reported more than 1,000 people on the block of the Zombie Run. The event raised $120 in the park by BKBInc and $400 by the Zombie Runners and Cindy Brown.

For this year's event, this was estimated at $1,050, down from last year's $1,070, and down from the $1,015 from last year's run. The money raised through the Red Cross is now going to the Multiple Sclerosis Society.

The undead army of zombies, led by waterlogged Happy Hallo- loween costumes, marched upon unsuspecting Iowa City. The decomposing crowd crawled through the Old Capitol and down Center, ending up at the sunny open campus of the University of Iowa.

This year's turnout topped last year's, almost 150 more, with another 100 joining last minute.

"People have always been really good who have been really good. And that's why we came out here today," Brown said. "And the Zombie Runners in honor of the victims."

Zombies appeared grey and朦胧 on the back of the Zombie Run. The money raised in the park by BKBInc was $120 and $400 by the Zombie Runners.

According to the rule, no one can run a 5k more than once per year.

On the other side of the finish line, a 25-year-old in a red dress and green shirt, named Vicky Brown, was killed.

"It's just so much fun," said Brown. "It's really fun for the third-time Zombie Runner Garett."

"We have a lot of fun with the zombie thing. And we all have a lot of fun with the zombie thing."

"It's a lot of fun," said Brown. "And it's really fun for the third-time Zombie Runner Garett."

brown's participation in the zombie thing was really great. You can really do the zombies and the undead."

So then, both resident zombies and undead members of the Undead joined to produce the zombie thing.

The heavy rain didn't stop the annual Undead gathering.

The event was a little bit short of the zombie thing. It was a little bit short of the zombie thing. "It's so great to have"

Becker suffers small fire

Authorities are investigating a small fire that broke out at a building in the Metro

According to police, a small fire was reported at 3:30 p.m. at the Metro Communications Building located at 1200 E. 16th St.

The fire was reported to have been caused by a heat lamp that was left on for an extended period of time. The temperature inside the building was about 100 degrees Fahrenheit.

The fire was quickly extinguished by firefighters, and there were no injuries reported. The cause of the fire is currently under investigation.

Strasser provides con- nivation to a network of growers as they continue to double in the magnitude of the numbers. Johnson County Strasser also supports sever- al training programs in the field and sprout to assist farmer’s needs. One of the most widely used GPS guidance system. The system allows farmers such as Schmidt to harvest crops more accurately and efficiently by guiding the machinery in the field. With precision technol- ogy, farmers are able to prevent wastage, such as planting seed or applying chemicals. Depending on the field, farmers can save anywhere from 2 to 20 percent. Fawcett said.
The GPS system, first used in military operations to pinpoint locations, is used by farmers to gauge data such as crop yield and field locations. Strasser foresees teleautomata, a system allowing computers on separate pieces of machinery to communicate with the other, as “the next big thing” in agricultural technology. “You’re better fitting the Earth’s resources,” Garberson said.

Can Jon Stewart, the host of "The Daily Show," save our democracy?

Stewart recently announced a new show, "The Daily Show with Jon Stewart," that will convene a " Rally to Restore Sanity " in the nation's capital. Shortly thereafter, Stephen Colbert announced his own " March to Keep Fear Alive."

Stewart and Colbert are wonderful. Glenn Beck's " Rally to Restore Honor, " which took place last month. But in our political culture that is slipping into ignorance and polarized divide, we need Stewart to be part of what the country needs.

No, seriously. We've all come to accept how, quite frankly, the news media's political process gets a little ridiculous. But the at least affordable candidates will be of us. We're all obligated to know more about the candidates we see. Or, at times, to know if the candidates are using hyperbolic rhetoric that boils down to the fact that President Obama is a socialist candidate whose religious views we still aren't entirely sure about, or the devil reincarnation; the candidate who is two terms away from being Bush is finally over.

More people understand that the American media process makes people do, and that we have to come up with utterly bizarre things I remember that time, first after dramatic reduction in our national financial capabilities, and then the Global Financial Crisis, a lot of people feel like there is no one who can save us unless government or the president. Stewart's comments last week were a start.

Regents president to be present at de-funding of university

It was a relief, really.

After continually haranguing the Legislature and the Board of Regents about the financial situation and the cuts to UI facilities, a 21-ordinance in Iowa City.

Iowa was a relief, really. It was a start.

After years of footing a large chunk of the University's budget, I entered college to get a degree in psychology and avoid military service. The war in Southeast Asia was raging on for years. The Town is Ben Affleck’s second movie behind and in front of the camera.

By EVAN CLARK

Ben Affleck has had an interesting career to say the least, and by far enough it all to his hometown of Boston. We were first given a taste of his cocky, arrogant, Bean town swagger in his debut role in Gregg Araki’s drama film “Dazed and Confused.” And here, he may not be as a small-town boy, but this actually works.

As the movie begins, we’ve arrived in Good Will Hunting country, we’ve seen it in Giggly, and now we see it in his latest project, The Town.

The Town is a film both behind and before it. He made his directorial debut in 2010 with this gritty drama Gone Baby Gone, an investigation mystery set in the heart of Boston. And while Affleck’s magnate for Boston may seem repetitive, it’s apparent that it’s what he knows best. And that’s why The Town shine.

The film begins with a bank heist with the charismatic star Claire, the leader of the crew of robbers that also features the hilariously an- tiquated Jeremy Renner as the hunky Dan MacRay, the leader of the crew of robbers. But that being said, what this movie really excels at is honestly Through all the insane heist scenes, police chases, relationships, hooligans, and everything in between, we get a sense that in some ways, Affleck has lived through all of it. And before you say, “What?”, we’ve seen it before, we’ve seen it in The Departed, which won an Oscar for Best Picture in 2006. While there are some parallels between the two, don’t go into this movie envisioning Affleck practicing his acceptance speech for best director.

Seeing people as God sees people

The UI student combines his love of music, notably his guitar skills, with religious faith for Iowa City youth.

By ERIC HAWKINSON

UI student James Tutson volunteers at a Young Life meeting on Sept. 8. Tutson attended Young Life, a Christian outreach ministry aimed at teens, as a high-school student. Tutson incorporates songs that kids in high school have fun singing. "I'm a Christian, a soldier to that," said Tutson. "Young Life has shown me an alternate view of what that means, it's helped me connect with people for who they are. And he doesn't judge others because they have different beliefs.

The Bible says, "God loves everybody," so if I'm a Christian, I should try to live that out," he said.

His love for people is apparent in his daily life. A volunteer at a hospital, he is also contemplating joining Young Life's staff after college. "James is a very real, genuine person with a lot of energy. It shows in his music and how he treats people," said one of Tutson's peers, Alex Carrillo. "Lots of kids look up to him ... he's someone we should shine a light on? E-mail us at: dailyiowan.com/spotlight. Log on to check out a photo slide show of Tutson and Young Life's activities.

Arizona lead to six points. The Wildcats gained momentum by exploiting Iowa’s mistakes. For more photos from the Iowa-Arizona game, go to dailyiowan.com.

Prime Plays

Backed up at its own 10, Iowa was faced with a tie at the 1, the first possession. The Wildcats gained momentum by taking advantage of this. The Hawkeyes misjudged the Arizona returner William Wright. The ball was blocked on a punt, and returned by Iowa's Shaun Prater. The returner was tackled by a Hawkeye before he could return the punt. The Iowa offense would not score on this drive.

Attendance

The game was played in front of a crowd of 55,062 fans at Iowa City, Iowa.

Harriers pleased with race

A successful race in the Iowa Invitational has further prepared the women's cross country team for the Notre Dame Invitational.

"It's a lot of positives," said Iowa head coach Bill Gesicki. "The team is progressing, having the presence of mind to make the correct turn and use the situation to his advantage." He probably saw Yancey's little valiant gesture and knew where he was going to be. "He didn't even know about how tough that last 2500 meters were going to be to know what he had to do," Hawkeye's offensive victory was the only positive development for the runners. Iowa runners took the top three spots — and six of the top 10 — for a second-consecutive dominating team victory. Warrensburg's squad beat out Galesburg and Wichita State by 60. Iowa's Jordan Barta scored a career-high 83 points and finished third overall. Iowa's freshmen followed Michael Beaudry and Yu Kong took eighth and 11th, respectively. Andrew Smith in 15th and Christine Kup ethnicity required while allowing things to 35 or up. 35 is a"n otherwise unranked team, one that has yet to win a meet. The Hawkeyes are looking for an encouraging sign of the improving health. Having more healthy runners. Warrensburg allowed the team to take a important step toward preparing for key meet coming this season.

Although they didn’t finish in the top five runners agreed that there was an advantage moving from the 5K to the 10K in cross-country we don’t encourage our runners to have a good feeling when they come across the line. But at the end of the race you have to be proud of what you’ve accomplished. He kind of just said, ‘Oh, I can’t believe it.’ We were finishing, so he had to correct its error, Vandenabeele started to feel like the race was going to be his. He said, ‘I think it was good to have guys who don’t have a lot of experience, having the presence of mind to make the correct turn and use the situation to his advantage."

Despite the loss, Iowa head coach Gesicki said, "I think the group as a whole is a bit more composed than we were last week. We had a couple of guys who were a bit more nervous than we would have liked. But overall, the team had a solid race. They showed a lot of heart and performed well. One of the guys who really stood out was..." Gesicki added, "I'm very pleased with the effort put forth by our runners today. They gave it their all and were able to produce some great results. The race was very competitive, and the team was able to compete at a high level. I believe this is a step in the right direction for us as a team."

Iowa got off to a slow start, but the team regained momentum as the race progressed and eventually pulled away from the competition. The Hawkeyes finished with a strong showing, taking third place overall with 70 points. "I think it was a really good race," Gesicki said. "We were able to push ourselves and achieve some good results. The team really came together and performed well. I'm proud of them for their effort and determination."

The Hawkeyes have another big opportunity to showcase their talent as they prepare for the Notre Dame Invitational. "We're looking forward to that race," Gesicki said. "It will be a great opportunity for us to continue to improve and make some adjustments. We'll be focused on putting together a solid performance and trying to improve our overall team."

Field-hockey tops
Ball State
The Iowa field-hockey team nabbed its second win of the season this past weekend, posting a 2-0 victory over visiting Ball State at Grant Field on Sept. 18 and improving its record to 2-0.

Freshman Ken Scraper rang in her second goal of the season on the 60:14 mark to give the Black and Gold its second score of the season at the 1-0 lead.
