UI meets potential music architects

Regents: “unsolved issues” remain with the building's site.

By SARI LANKE

University of Iowa officials met Thursday with the four architects who are finalists to design the new music building.

However, despite indications beforehand that the final decision might be made as early as Thursday, the meeting was “still in pro-ess” as of 5 p.m. and USU spokesperson Tom More.

He said the chosen firm will be made public in a press release.

Because the committee was still meeting, none of the members were able to comment.

More out.

The committee, according to the head of one of the final groups, was a “tsiquable group” made up of officials from the school’s planning director, and the state Board of Regents.

According to a report given to the regents at their most recent meeting in December, the committee was formed in June and is located at the intersection of Burlington and Clinton Streets and construction is scheduled to be completed in December 2013.

Minority enrollment in science majors at the University of Iowa is increasing, but some students and professors say black students are still underrepresented in the field. And a group that’s trying to showcase the work and research minority students have done is meeting at the UI this weekend.

The UI chapter of the National Organization for the Professional Advancement of Black Chemists and Chemical Engi-ners, one of only two such chapters in the nation, will host the Midwest Regional Conference for the first time.

It took Jessica-Leigh Arends six years to graduate high-school seniors need to look at college.

And that’s a common problem, said City High guidance counselor Eric Wood said, counselors put retention in their aspiring career field, be it medicine or carpentry.

“Some kids are just not academically oriented,” Nemko said. “They need to be out learning with their hands and in the real world. To force those kids to go to college has just ironically the opposite effect.”

But college attendance and completion has taken center stage in recent years, and President Obama has called for the United States to once again have the most college graduates in the world by 2020. University of Iowa officials have set increasing retention goals.

So far, University of Iowa officials have set increasing retention goals.

COGS state's only grad-student union
The UI's graduate-student union recently asked for an increase in funding from the state Board of Regents.

By ARANDA WITT
The University of Iowa College of Education's graduate students on Nov. 4 asked for a higher state appropriation raise from the state Board of Regents. UI graduate students are the only ones in the state who can bring this way.

Although graduate employee unions are uncommon on state campuses for the institutions that have them, the UI is only regent institution to have one.

"The University of Northern Iowa and Iowa State University do receive some money from the state Board of Regents, but they are the only regent institution to have one," said Michael Lewis, the dean of the Graduate College of the University of Northern Iowa, and he says he might seek to join this union among the schools' employed graduate students.

"As far as I know, it's an interesting debate you're having. I've never had this but as far as I'm concerned I think it's a good idea," said Iowa State University's Tim Hinchley, who is the college's graduate student union leader.

"I will definitely consider it," said Lewis. "I think it's a very interesting idea and I think it's something we should look at."

After bowling competitively throughout high school and making it to a few state tournaments, Huggins was unsure where he should attend college.

“Tough choice,” Dell said. “Iowa over Wichita State, I decided to go to college.

But the University of Iowa was in the process of creating a club. His team won the state championship, and as he reflected on the experience, he said, “It means a lot for him to continue what was started just a few years ago,” senior teammate Nick Lemke said. “If we didn’t have the individual we have that, then I know I appreciate it a lot.”

Harriers upbeat before regional

Women's cross-country heads to Peoria, Ill., to compete in the NCAA Midwest Regional, where the Hawks will attempt to keep their season alive.

By MAGGIE CUMMINGS

Before the start of the season, the Iowa men's cross-country team had one firm goal: qualify for the NCAA championships. The team is one of only four in the Big Ten region that have done that consistently over the last few years. Now, as the team looks toward the NCAA Midwest Regional meet on Saturday at the University of Nebraska in Lincoln, they have one goal in mind: win.

They ended their season on a high note at the Big Ten meet and are looking for the same result this weekend. "Winning the Big Ten is one of our main goals," head coach Layne Battista said.

The team agreed there is no reason they should not perform well. Expecting the team to perform well is a normal part of the season, but Iowa's goals are loftier than most.

"Every year we have had a real shot at the Big Ten championship, and this year is no different," Battista said. "I think we are a little bit better this year than we have been in recent years, and we want to see if we can win.

The Hawks are ready to race, said Jeff Thode, who has been named to the All-Big Ten team.

"I think this team is very talented, and given the right day, I think we have the potential to surprise ourselves and a lot of other people," Battista said. "If everyone's feeling good, I think it's realistic to have Hardesty

Hawks try again with pesky Wildcats

Northwestern has beaten Iowa in four of the last five meetings.

BY IAN MARTIN • IAN-MARTIN@UIOWA.EDU

Shawn Prater didn’t hide his feelings toward Northwestern. Surrounded by reporters outside the Hayden Fry Football Complex on Tuesday, the junior cornerback didn’t need to be reminded of Iowa’s lack of success against the Wildcats in recent years.

He remembered the 17-10 loss in 2009 that ruined the Hawkeyes undefeated season, and snapped a 13-game winning streak, as well as the 22-17 loss of redemption heading into Saturday’s sold-out game in Evanston, Ill., having beaten Iowa in the Hawkeyes’ struggles — a glaring difference that has resulted in a major improvement for the Northwestern (6-3, 2-3) enter in the Hawkeyes’ efforts such as Julian Vandervelde didn’t discount the importance of playing the way you’re supposed to play and win.

Turnover margin has been a factor motivating the team, senior linebacker Kirk Ferentz said there is one thing that has made a difference that has resulted in the Hawkeyes’ success.

The goal for us … is to get back to the way that we’ve played in the past, with fewer turnovers and a focus on ball security. "All the motivation that we have is within ourselves and the way that we played in the past," Vandervelde said. "We get glimpses of what we could be in the Michigan State game, and then we kind of fall off of that when we went down to Minnesota. The goal for us … is to get back to that level of play that we had against Michigan State."

around the big ten

Power rankings

1. Wisconsin (Perennial #1): The Badgers are hoping to prove that this year’s version is the real deal, but all of Wisconsin’s remaining games are against teams in the bottom half of the Big Ten.
2. Iowa (2): The Hawkeyes suffered a hangover after knocking off Indiana after dominating Michigan State. Poor Northwestern awaits.
3. Ohio State (3): The Buckeyes cruised in the two games following their loss, but now Penn State comes to town riding a three-game winning streak.
5. Penn State (5): Sophomore quarterback Matt McGloin will make his second career start. There is no time like the present for McGloin and a trip to the Horsehoe.
6. Michigan (6): The Wolverines offense can carry the load, but the defense was touched again in a victory over Illinois.

Offensive impact

Name: Matt McGloin
Position: Quarterback
Year: Sophomore

McGloin, Penn State’s starting quarterback, needed the starting job from under-performing freshman Rob Bolden to continue his second career start. Unfortunately for the Penn State signal caller, it comes on the road against No. 8 Ohio State.

McGloin has seen action in the Nittany Lions’ last three contests, and he led the team to a come-from-behind overtime last week against Northwestern. The former walk-on threw four touchdowns passes as Penn State rallied from a three-touchdown deficit to give head coach Joe Paterno his 400th victory.

McGloin is a 6-4, 33-year-old with a strong arm. He has to keep his passes sharp on Saturday if the Nittany Lions have any hope of upsetting the Buckeyes.

Defensive impact

Name: Ryan Kerrigan
Position: Defensive end
Year: Senior

Kerrigan, Purdue’s standout defensive end, will be an integral piece to stopping Michigan’s high-powered offense Saturday. While Ohio State Robinson still continues to put up big numbers on the ground, the Wolverine quarterback got off the line and ran the ball game against kerrigan, throwing for 209 yards on just 15 completions.

Enter Kerrigan. The Chuck Bednarik Award candidate—this year given to the national Defensive Player of the Year—will be the focus of Michigan’s offensive line because of his ability to break tackles so far this year.

Kerrigan has recorded a sack in every game but the first four, and after being shut out against Wisconsin last week, the senior will be gunning for Robinson on every drop back.

Where will you go?

Key highlights: Wisconsin continues to be the Big Ten’s best team, and Ohio State, Michigan State, and Iowa will hope to keep the Badgers in line. Wisconsin running back Jalen Hurdle is questionable for the game against the Hawkeyes, but Weslley Ball picked up the slack last week, rushing for 127 yards against Purdue.

Key highlights: Michigan put on an offensive clinic last week against Illinois. The Wolverines racked up 607 yards and set a school-record for most passing yards in a single game with 617. As if that wasn’t enough, Junior quarterback Denard Robinson returns from his concussion-like symptoms finally, Michigan should put on an absolute show.

Games to watch

Penn State is riding a three-game winning streak behind sophomore quarterback Matt McGloin, a former walk-on. But now McGloin’s second career start will come in the Horsehoe. Ohio State will counter with the nation’s third-best scoring defense led by defensive end Cameron Heyward.

Mr. Playmaker

Tyler Sash continues to be the ultimate playmaker for the Iowa defense. By JORDAN GARRETSON jordan-garretson@uiowa.edu

Tyler Sash rolls off the names of some of his favorite NFL safeties. Former Hawkeyes Bob Sanders and Sean Considine are among those who come up, along with Pro Bowler Troy Polamalu and Ed Reed. It’s difficult to narrow the list down to just one. “There are so many different types of safeties.”

What type is he? “I don’t know,” he answers. “I’m just trying to fit in. I’m just trying to play the best football I can.”

He goes on with a grin, “That’s for (the media) to decide what I am.”

But what Sash won’t say, his teammates will. “He’s a playmaker,” sophomore cornerback Micah Hyde said. “He’s Tyler Sash. Everybody knows about Tyler Sash.”

The junior safety’s 13 career interceptions rank fifth all-time in Iowa history, and his 392 career interception-return yards is the fourth-highest total in Big Ten history.

This season, Sash has recorded two interceptions and 54 tackles, and he is one of 10 semifinalists for the Jim Thorpe award, which is given annually to the nation’s top defensive back. The Oklahoman native has started 30-consecutive games at strong safety, but he put his uncanny athletic instincts to use long before becoming a Hawkeye.

The Oklahoman years

Oklahoma High varsity football coach Darrell Schumacher refuses to classify Sash’s heady playmaking propensity as having a “knack.”

That would be a disservice. In 33 years as a high-school coach, he hasn’t seen any player like Sash.

He knew exactly where everybody was at the field," Schumacher said. "He knew exactly where to cut. If there was somebody coming at him, he would try to run over him because he didn't have any options.

"There were so many times where he cut back and didn't do what he was looking at, but he sure knew where he was going. That's an athletic awareness — not everybody has that.

You name it, Sash did it for Oakalasoo, although most of his fame came from his plays at running back and receiver. Without a favorite position, he said, "I just liked when I got the ball" — which probably explains why Sash preferred the idea of playing quarterback under Shuman.

"I don't think we want to do that," Schumacher said and chuckled.

By the time Sash graduated in 2007, he held or tied 28 school records, including total career touchdowns (63), total yards (4,330), and single-game rushing yards (324). As Schumacher put it, Sash "had so darn many highlights, I don't know what to tell you.

The 6-1, 210-pounder wasn't limited to the gridiron.

In addition to being a Division-I football prospect, Sash also had numerous offers to play D1 baseball — which he describes as his first true love. Schools such as Iowa State and Nebraska were hoping to acquire his services at pitcher.

But then Kirk Perroz called.

Sash was on his way home from the 2006 state track meet in Des Moines, having just competed in another sport at which he excelled.

"I always loved basketball," Sash said. "But as long as I got offered by Iowa — my dream was always to go to Iowa and play some sport. It didn't matter what sport. It just as happens that I'm playing football now.

Now, after undergoing surgeries to both of his shoulders in each of the last two off-seasons, basket-

Senior Tight end and Allen Raine — who also played basketball in high school — joked that Sash has become a star.

"He's a little older. He was a little more elusive. He weighed a little less," Raine said with a grin.

Sash quips in return: "I can't even move my arms, that's probable who." Still, he believes there has been carryover from the hardwood to the gridiron.

"If you're guarding a quick point guard, you have to anticipate a lot of things," he said. "If you want to get a steal, that translates to playing defensive back, I think."

His father, Mike Sash, said he believes his son's sports diversity is what helped him develop as an athlete.

Sash played on the Martin Brothers' squad with the likes of Matt Gutens and former Washon-sian Jarrod Bohnen.

"I just think playing competition at a high level, even though it wasn't football-related, was so helpful to play against a lot of kids that are very, very gifted and athletic. I'm sure has just helped him a lot."

Mike Sash said.

"You're Sash always seems to be around the football. It's happened so frequently — see his three-interception performance at Iowa State in 2009 as an example. And it has happened in strange fashion — see his pick-ball� that makes him a star.

Mitch Smith

defensive

Name: Adrian Clayborn (end of the Iowa defense)
Year: Senior
Position: Defensive end
Breakdown: After facing a pass-heavy Indiana offense last week, the Hawkeyes will once again match up against an offense with a knack for throwing the football.

Northwestern quarterback Dan Persa is second in the Big Ten in passing yards per game (264.9), just behind the Hoosiers’ Ben Chappell. But there’s one major difference between Chappell and Persa – the ability to run. The Wildcats’ quarterback had a big role in ending the Hawkeyes’ undefeated season in 2009, throwing a touchdown pass and leading the Northwestern with 67 rushing yards.

He has become a much more versatile quarterback since then, and he will certainly present a test for the Iowa defense, especially Clayborn and Company along the defensive line. The game up front will likely have a hard time of pressuring Persa, who gets the ball out of his hands quickly.

“He presents a lot of challenges just with being able to run the ball and throw the ball well,” safety Tyler Sash said. “It’s just something that we were going to have to key on him more than usual.”

offensive

Name: Dan Persa
Year: Junior
Position: Quarterback
Breakdown: After backing up Mike Kafka in 2009 and playing mostly in running situations, Persa has evolved into one of the nation’s most efficient passers. Besides Ohio State’s Terrelle Pryor and Michigan’s Denard Robinson, Persa’s the most versatile quarterback in the conference.

Persa ranks 10th in the nation in passing efficiency, completing 73.36 percent of his passes. He averages 264.1 passing yards and 5.1 rushing yards per game and comes off a 199-yard and performance against Penn State – his largest output of the season.

His ability to throw and run should keep the Hawkeyes’ defense guessing. The Wildcats will sometimes run a formation of four wide receivers, only to have Persa run a draw play for a big gain.

“He gets the job done,” Iowa defensive coordinator Phil Parker said.

“However he needs to score touchdowns – whether it’s throwing or it’s on the run – he’s done it. He’s been a heck of a player for them.”

2008
November 8
Coming off a heartbreaking 27-24 loss to Illinois, the Hawkeyes gamed 16-7 Ferentz one of the signature wins of his career – a 24-23 victory over No. 3 Penn State. It was the first of 13 consecutive victories for Iowa over the next two seasons.

1902
November 8
Iowa lost, 107-0, to Michigan, marking the largest deficit in program history. Second place on that list is an 80-0 loss to Illinois, which also occurred in 1902. Not surprisingly, it was head coach Allen Knipe’s last season.

1935
November 9
The Floyd of Rosedale was born. On the morning of the game, Minnesota Gov. Floyd
Olson sent a telegram that read, “Tell my wife they will be prized hog against Minnesota wins.” Iowa lost,
10-6, and an award-winning
pig was sent from Fort Dodge by Adam Loomis, the owner of Rosedale Farms.

1990
November 10
Ohio State scored on a last-second touchdown to beat the Hawkeyes at home.
A win would have made Hayden Fry’s squad 6-1, but Iowa wasn’t easily derailed from its special season; it played in the Rose Bowl against Washington.

1960
November 12
Legendary Iowa coach Ferentz’s Hawkeyes
beat Ohio State, 17-10,
and an award-winning
pig was sent from Fort Dodge by Adam Loomis, the owner of Rosedale Farms.

DID YOU KNOW?

- Northwestern head coach Pat Fitzgerald was a first-team All-American linebacker for the Wildcats for two seasons (1995-96). He won the Bronco Nagurski and Chuck Bednarik awards in both those seasons, becoming the first player to ever do so.
- Iowa quarterback Ricky Stanzi ranks third in the Football Bowl Subdivision in passing efficiency (179.10). Northwestern's Dan Persa is 10th (160). Stanzi's 25 career wins are sixth-best among active bowl-division quarterbacks.
- The Hawkeyes have committed nine turnovers in the teams' past two meetings, losing those games by a combined 12 points. The Iowa-Northwestern series started in 1995 with a 21-6 Hawkeye victory. Iowa holds a 46-22-3 advantage over the Wildcats.
