Earlier drinking, bars close in IC

After its first semester on the books, the 21-ordinance has prompted some students to drink earlier and caused some bars to close their doors.

Iowa City police and UI police officers speak to a man they arrested after he allegedly assaulted a 21-year-old outside the Summit, 10 S. Clinton St., eager to attend the bar’s Friday-after-class Christmas-themed event.

Police citations, people staggering into bars to close their doors.

Police cited spinning, people staggering while attempting to walk, and vomiting are still occurring at the downtown Iowa City bars. But now they’re occurring before 10 p.m. in front of Summit, women in reindeer ears and high-heel shoes stand in line at 8:45 p.m. Around 9 p.m. on the Pedestrian Mall, a crowd stood in line in front of Union while a man vomited on the brick walkway in front of Brothers.

On Dec. 4, more than 100 people crowd-died into Jake’s after 10 p.m. to celebrate the bar’s final party.

Some UI students said they won’t make the trip after this year’s season.

Some ho-hum about bowl

If the University of Iowa basketball team has no plans to attend the bowl game, then the Hawkeyes officially accepted the invitation to Tempe, Ariz., on Sunday evening.

During a disheartening season, local travel agencies are booking fewer bowl-game trips, though they expect fewer reservations than last year.

Even before official announcements Iowa’s pairing against Missouri in the Dec. 28 Insight Bowl, some University of Iowa students expressed disappointment.

“Tough to deal with, especially in a result,” said Simon Stachowiak, a computer science junior and the coordinator for the University of Iowa’s Center for Assistive Technology Education and Research.

UI grad Kizzy Marco proposes to make a blanket for the UI Children’s Hospital on Dec. 3 in the Therapy Hour. This is the second year Marco has sponsored the UI Project Linen effort, a nonprofit organization that helps to provide blankets to patients with busy hospital lives.

UI grad Kizzy Marco makes a blanket for the UI Children’s Hospital on Dec. 3 in the Therapy Hour. The 22-year-old helps make and details 79 blankets last year and volunteered 77 hours as a volunteer. Marco’s success was “not low because of the opportunities that the hospital volunteers had,” she said.

“it never occurred to me not to.” Marco said when asked if she would continue to volunteer for another year.

One person who came to help make blankets Dec. 3 was Patricia J. Hawkins. “Hawkins never met Marco before. “I don’t see Marco’s as a person and not a volunteer,” she said. “I think that’s important to give back to everyone.”

Official should support passage of Dream Act

It would be a controversial move, no doubt. But, Political momentum or not, University of Iowa leaders should throw their weight behind the so-called Dream Act in the future.

The Dream Act is a law being written as part of the Defense Authorization Bill, the Senate and House must vote on before the end of the year. We've editorialized in support of the law in the past and the authors and elected officials in both parties should embrace the legislation; it would benefit the nation economically and reassure thousands of students' intellectual development would not be adversely stymied.

The legislation would grant legal residency to children that entered the United States illegally if they met a laundry list of criteria. The children would have had to have entered the United States in the past 15 years, be under 30 at the time of legislation, and have been accepted into a university. In addition, they would have to have a clean criminal record and be subject to periodic background checks.

The bill would beneficent administrators across the country have vouched their support for the bill, including UI President Bruce Harreld.

Many are graduates and professional students; all carry a deep understanding about the benefits of the Dream Act next week, and US leaders should support the legislation that exceeded 300 words in length must be arranged with the Opinions editor at least three days prior to the desired date of publication. Singing and dancing shine

Despite unoriginal plot, Burlesque shines thanks to fun song and dance numbers.

By JESSICA CARBINO

A naïve small-town girl, Ali (Aguilera) leaves her hometown to make it as a star in Hollywood. While auditioning for a job, she comes across a club, Burlesque, and explores it. There, she becomes infatuated with the stage, dancing, and scandalous costumes. Her goal is to be on the curtain dramatically going up and move. Cher and Aguilera's performances are at their best when they're showcasing Cher's amazing vocal prowess and dancing. Cher's behind on mortgage payments, so her ex (Jackman) finally gives her a shot to strut her stuff on stage. On top of financial problems, she is at her acting career, though? No, the songstress should stick with what she does best, singing and dancing. Cher and Aguilera collaborated to create the basic film staples — friendship, love, hate, sex and scandal. Her acting talents are capable enough to shine through a subpar plot line. Burlesque wouldn't stand out as one of the best plots when you've seen your fair share of these. Should Aguilera continue her acting career, though? No, the songtress should stick with what she does best, singing and dancing. Cher manages to prove that her acting talents are capable enough to shine through a subpar plot line.

Though bar-goers filled the establishment on the first day of the 21-ordinance, said City Councilor Regenia Bailey. "We didn't say we were going to change behavior to the point that everyone stopped drinking," Brotherton said.

She noted it's likely that the alcohol-related problems that might arise from earlier drinking. "The area is in a state of transition," said Susan Mims.

Police also said the new ordinance because there were fewer people downtown after the 10 p.m. deadline. Though he doesn't know what strategies could be used to counter drinking that may occur after 10 p.m., "the goal was to limit access to alcohol," said Iowa City police Lt. Mike Brotherton.

"If we were going to change drinking behavior to the point that everyone stopped drinking," Brotherton said Iowa City police have had run-ins with underage people in the bars past the 10 p.m. deadline. Though he said he can't think of why anyone would risk paying the more than $700 fine, he said he cited two women at Firewater, 347 E. Market St., on the evening of Dec. 3.

But Brotherton said overall, things are quieter.

City High wrestlers expected to recover from rollover bus crash

The City High junior varsity wrestling team was involved in a bus crash over the weekend.

Derek Delaney expects his son to wrestle next year.

“I’m out for the rest of this season,” the 14-year-old freshman said. “But I hope to wrestle next year.”

John Bacon said in a statement that he was hopeful the athletes would recover and thanked all those involved.

“We’re just waiting for his Yamaha to be fully recovered, but it’s still too early to know, both medically and mentally,” Bacon said.

The causes of the crash are still being investigated, but the Washington County Sheriff’s Office said icy roads may have played a part in the crash. Those other accidents, including two other rollover and one rollover with injuries occurred around the same time in the area, authorities said.

Derek Delaney did not know how many other City High wrestlers were injured to the University of Iowa Hospitals and Clinics in Iowa City, and most have been released, said Dennis Delaney, Derek’s father.

“My heart just jumped out of my throat,” Delaney said. “That’s the last call out of my throat,” Delaney said. “For the most part, my heart just jumped out of my throat,” Delaney said.

The lost of a loved one is something no parent wants to get.”

“We’re very grateful for the help he’s received. From the doctors and the nurses and the other athletes, coaches and parents demonstrated,” he said. “They stayed calm and helped each other every step of the way.”

Delaney said he was scared and worried about his son when he received the call, especially because he could not talk to him at that time.

More parents buying homes for students

Experts say the number of college student homeowners could increase in the buyer’s market.

By ALISON SULLIVAN

With snow in the forecast, University of Iowa students and parents should check weather reports where they park their cars—or face a $50 fine—and city officials say they want to increase awareness about regulations.

In November 2009, the Iowa City City Council voted to increase fines for violating the snow-emergency ordinance from $15 to $50, the amount needed to tow a car. Many UI students and faculty members of the rules were surprised to find their cars towed last winter. Between January and November, the city issued 777 citations, with 95 percent of the fines paid.

Though a year has gone by since the changes, it seems many students are still uninformed.

City Councilor Staci Stiles said the plan is to contact city staff today about getting alternate parking, calendar information, and e-mail alerts. “So when snow does occur, students and parents will have information prior to the storm.”

City officials recently established a Twitter feed dedicated to announcing parking information online for the text and e-mail alerts. “So when snow does occur, students and parents will have information prior to the storm.”

Missouri seen as similar to Ohio St.

Iowa will matchup with No. 14 Missouri in the Insight Bowl on Dec. 28.

By SCOTT MILLER

Three-consecutive-losses saw the Iowa Hawkeyes 5-6-4 win one of a return trip to another Bowl Champions Southeast Stuckout. But on Sunday evening, the Insight Bowl extended the program’s circulation to play No. 14 Missouri 10-2-2 Big 12.

The Insight Bowl kicked off at 9 p.m. CST on Dec. 20 in Tempe, Ariz. — sparked a potential match-up between Iowa and Nebraska, which would have jammed-starter the “Farmageddon” rivalry a year ahead of schedule.

Instead, the Hawkeyes will face the Tigers, who finished in a tie with Nebraska atop the Big 12 North.

Both the Outreach Bowl and Gator Bowl passed over the Hawkeyes, choosing Penn State and Michigan, respectively Iowa beat both of these teams in the regular season, and Athletic Director Gary Barta speculated the Hawkeyes’ three-game losing streak probably contributed to that.

“I’ve heard everybody. I’ve heard coach Kirk Ferentz and the speculation surrounding his team’s best destination. ‘... it’s just now good to know where we’re going and who we’re playing. And we’re excited about both of those things.’

Iowa will have an allotted 11,000 tickets to sell. Pam Finke, the UI director of ticket operations, said the Hawkeyes sold 2,000 tickets before the team’s destination ticket operations, said the Hawkeyes sold 2,000 tickets before the team’s destination.

“I think it gives us and surrounding his team’s bowl destination.

The Iowa men won the race, setting a meet and pool record with a time of 1:20.93. The team consisted of Ryan Phelan, Duncan Partridge, Devon Meeks, and Sean Hagan.

RYAN MILLER/THE DAILY IOWAN

"We have a lot of guys who can do things, and Coach (Fran) McCaffery is confident in everyone on this team. Even people who haven't yet reached their potential – me, (Andrew) Brommer, Archie, Stoermer, the guys on the bench – everyone's progressing. I don't think we've seen the best of anybody. The best is yet to come."

— Melsahn Basabe, Iowa forward, on the men's basketball team

Thoughts I’ve had on the Campus:

When will these freshman learn the “earthly” stance of never walking? I think my backpack just got annoyed.

No, Gulf Rittinger-To-Nap, I don’t think the Campus will have WiFi.

Are we listening to Irish drinking songs right now?

Really, dude? You’re pulling the “Stop Requested” in the MFawfaw Shuffle isn’t going to stop me at all!

What do those signs mean? No standing? No turn around? No waiting? No 100 beds allowed?

Yes, the idiot who won’t move past the back entrance, even though you can see their room ahead there and free seats in the front, why don’t you tell me you already read all the fine print above for making no late for class.

I just want to spokes through here... if only I could stay in this in the back because I know there are five more signs ahead of me. I can see you... yes, there you are... just pass by please—Name-me-Would-Cause-Per-Faking-Me-Late-For-Class.

No, Sheathing-Cashmere, I will not move out and make room for the last person trying to get on at the Campus stop only to get off at the Pappagallo. I will cause their stressful solo ride.

Too thin... too short... too handsome. I don’t think you’re the type that was a doll or a chick forever.

One that. One that I do. You’re finding a 36-14-80 Student Sphere For! to ride the bus that has as much confusion the campus is planning on to have that night.

California... and maybe I like glad when they’ve met.

Think twice on any sign you here.

Then, you pretty funny I think it’s time to be too early.

NO, you think it’s time I just go to the library and read a book. No, I’ll give up, but maybe contact you for more.

If we think it’s good, we’ll run it — and you think you’re pretty funny? Prove it.

If you wondering what to do next. Ride out the storm, and wait to see what will make others happy will allow you to manipulate matters and you should do all you can to set yourself up for a position that interests you. Put a little extra time in to make and enjoy on the event with someones capricorn.
