GOALS OF THE PLAN:

RECRUITMENT
Attract high school students less likely to be high-risk drinkers in college.

EDUCATION
Support students with alcohol education and alternatives.

ENFORCEMENT
Protect students, the UI, and the community by helping high-risk drinkers.

ACCOUNTABILITY
Hold high-risk drinkers accountable – possibly remove students from the UI.

A grant provides $15.7 million in funds for construction.

For years, the University of Iowa has struggled with ongoing drinking issues and a party-school reputation. Today, the university is unveiling a strategic plan in hopes of fixing the problems once and for all.

Iowa City city councilors are scheduled to decide whether to accept a grant for the construction of three levees at tonight’s City Council meeting.

In just three years, 15 percent fewer University of Iowa students will be binge drinkers. At least, that’s one goal of university officials under a new, aggressive plan to reduce harmful student drinking and rid the UI of its party school image.

The Alcohol Harm Reduction Plan — expected to be presented today at a UI Faculty Senate meeting and obtained in advance by The Daily Iowan — is the result of nearly a year’s worth of meetings by a 26-person committee. It is the final draft of a document that has gone through numerous revisions.

Previous versions, obtained by the UI Faculty Senate will discuss today. Read the plan yourself.

To view a PDF of the most recent version of the plan, visit dailyiowan.com.

For the final draft, however, the committee, appointed by UI Vice President for Student Services Tom Rocklin, removed certain ideas, clarified others, and laid out a set of four goals to begin tackling the university’s alcohol problem over the next three years.

Council Ponders Roosevelt

More than a year after the Iowa School District council members visited Roosevelt Elementary, two options for the building have evolved: one as an elementary school and another as a community center.

Council members are scheduled to attend Roosevelt in the near future.

One option discussed during the council's work session was to use the building as a day-care/after-school training facility. Jefferson Principal Jeff Harmon's interest in the building, along with another option to build a day-care center with the private organization, ArtReach, appeared to be fading.

ArtReach specializes in enrolling young children into after-school and summer programs for elementary and middle school students in a supportive partnership with the Iowa City Community School District.

Several options exist for the building, including a Fire Department training facility or a space for local artists.

Roosevelt Elementary was originally designated as the City's elementary school in 1929, but was closed in 1977. The building was sold in the community's 1986 bond election.

In June 2009, School Board members voted unanimously to convert Roosevelt to an all-grades community center.

The decision was made because of the building's poor condition, which was repaired, and the poor condition of the Iowa City school board, according to Currey. The school building was opened in September 2006.

The group planned to open the building for a day-care center in the fall, but due to a lack of available funds, the group was forced to abandon the idea.

Student reactions to plan split

A poll of the student newspaper on Monday was split in its opinion that the plan would change things on campus in the future. Of the 16 students who took the poll, the newspaper was split almost evenly, with 8 saying the plan would help curb the problem and 8 saying it would not.

Remember who brought you the weekend

The buffer sticker — you’ve seen it all. “The people who brought you the weekend” — the tagline that is a familiar sight at the bottom of the AT&T cell phone bill. It is a reflection of the history of how a telephone bill is generated.

But that has not worked. In fact, some businesses have even adopted this as a business model. The company that makes a buffer sticker has even been successful in the business world.

Some businesses have even taken it to the next level, creating a business model that is based on the use of a buffer sticker. These companies are known as “buffer sticker” companies.

They are fighting for all of us — health-care workers, teachers, and many others. They are fighting for everyone. They are fighting for you.

We need to remember who brought you the weekend.

The Republicans seem determined to make the economy worse for everyone. They are fighting for the rich, and they are fighting for the rich people. They are fighting for the rich people, and they are fighting for the rich people.

But that is not how it’s going to work. The Republicans are going to slash the Bush tax cuts for the rich people. They are going to slash the Bush tax cuts for the rich people. They are going to slash the Bush tax cuts for the rich people.

attract diversity comes at a time when Iowa City is making plans to do the same. Earlier this year, Iowa City officials invested $40,000 in a feasibility study to evaluate the economic climate of downtown, suggesting it would benefit from more diversity.

A little more than a decade ago, in 1998, downtown Iowa City was directly affected by the opening of Coral Ridge Mall. The large mall immediately changed the economic landscape for downtown.

“It was the beginning of a really difficult time for downtown,” said former Iowa City Mayor Jim Bredo.

But officials aren’t producing the Iowa River Landing project to have the same effect on downtown.

“Typically, the downtown type of shop fills more of a niche and more of a need of the district than they see in the suburban area,” said Iowa City Public Works Director Kevin Kehr.

The project is also one that advanced the feasibility study for Iowa City earlier this year. Pilkington said the Iowa River Landing will probably bring more retail activi-ity and trade to the Iowa City and Coralville area.

Wendy Ford, Iowa City’s economic-development director, said she is not worried about the future of downtown Iowa City and has not heard any negative feedback from business owners.

“I think it’s going to be a great thing to go from downtown in any way,” she said.

She said downtown Iowa City businesses have its own distinct personality and place in the commercial landscape. In fact, she said, the Iowa River Landing may include, along with a hotel and retail, some “very careful engi-dering phase are significant for the project but said he wasn’t concerned about a few design plans as long as the council ended up providing a levee.

While the project won’t be completed until 2012, some University of Iowa students are indifferent about the proposed $1.5 million. U. S. supermarket giant Kroger will most likely sink with shopping in Iowa City.

“I think shopping with some independent stores and supporting the local economy is really important to us,” she said.

The 2005 Heisman winner Tim Tebow and running back LaMichael James were two of the nation's top running backs. Newton and James were the owner of a scouting report with a four-year NCAA investment, but it doesn't feel like it. “We're all on the same playing field, and we all play the same game. Looking on the paper, you could say we're 9-2, but I don't feel like it.”

The coach expects Auburn quarterback Cam Newton and quarterback Jarrett Stidham of Jackson State to make an impact. "I've been noticing we're a team that always fights,” Newton said. “I think the [chants in Times Square] shows our determination in Times Square. We like to compete, and we like to beat people."

BASKETBALL	CONTINUED FROM 10

The youth of the group doesn't seem to be an issue for him. "I don't consider each other rosesprouts or anything," Newton said. "We all play so well together. People that think otherwise, I can't see why."

"Everyone is always there for each other, but no one is ever mad or upset if they don't do well," Partridge said. "We supportive," Partridge said. "We support each other in the relay team, and we believe in the group."

Will Iowa beat Missouri in the Insight Bowl?

No

The Hawkeyes are heading to Arizona to play in a slow game. Unquestioned as the nation's top team, the Hawkeyes gave fans a winning season, and with just two losses, they expect The Trojans to make a run in the Insight Bowl. The game will be on Sunday, Jan. 9 at 10:30 a.m.

Not thrown for a loop

The eight throwers on women's track and field team are using weightlifting and technique work.

By AMY TIFFANY

All eight members listed on the Iowa women's track and field roster under coach Scott Cappos have improved significantly this season, though they are not yet up to the level of experienced members of the Big Ten standing.

"I ask for anything better than that,"said head coach Scott Cappos, who said winter will definitely take some getting used to.

Redshirt freshman Rachel Curry tossed a personal best in the shot put at 16.92 meters. Taylor said for an intrasquad meet that she couldn't "ask for anything better than that."

Sophomore Kelsey Taylor also tossed a personal best in the weighted throws, recording a distance of 16.92 meters. Taylor said for an intrasquad meet that she couldn't "ask for anything better than that."
