Rolling a doobie as Steely Dan's "Bra- son Blue" played in the background is how University of Iowa sophomore Daniel Williams spent the last minutes before his arrest. When he opened his door to find out why his friend had been gone so long, Williams found a parade of police officers. He was charged with possession of marijuana and found himself facing a $1,010 fine from the University of Iowa Housing & Dining.

"I wasn't hurting anybody, and I wasn't stealing from anybody," Williams said.

The power of words to change the world

I’m not sure if I can adequately express how much the words of God are able to save us all.

I, however, have often heard people say that the power of words is not as great as we think.

It is true that words can be powerful, but I believe that the true power lies in the way we use them.

Our words have the ability to hurt or to heal, to offend or to comfort. It is up to us to use them wisely.

I believe that the power of words is greatest when they are used to encourage, to inspire, and to uplift others.

When we use our words to lift others up, we have the power to make a positive impact on the world.

I hope that you will choose to use your words with care and kindness, and that you will find joy in the power of the words you use.

Thank you for listening.

Tough year for labor

By CHASTITY DILLARD

As the Labor Day week-end approaches, labor advocates in eastern Iowa say the past year has seen struggles for workers’ rights in the state.

“We’ve had a tough year for labor, and that’s because there’s been a lot of political sentiment,” said Patrick Hughes, the president of the Iowa Federation of Labor. Labor debates sparked across the country this year when at least a handful of states attempted to cut public-employee compensation in order to close budget gaps. In Wisconsin, for instance, an aggressive Republican-sponsored bill died in the Senate.

Hughes said if the bill had died in the Senate, where Democrats have a majority, “a lot of frightening things have happened,” said Jennifer Sherer, the director of the University of Iowa Labor Center. She said unemployment and Worker-Fireplace

Em西洋’s compensation will help bridge budget gaps. Sherer said, “We’ll be out knocking on doors and wearing out our shoes, trying to get people out to vote that support our issues … As you see in downtown, we will be out knocking on doors and coming back even stronger than before.”

“I hate it when I want to go somewhere and I can’t find a place to park,” she said. Providing adequate parking downtown is not only important for businesses and people who shop downtown, she said, but for those living in the area’s apartments and condominiums.

“I guess the biggest [problem for businesspeople] is that still exist here.”

Iowa’s working families have all of the local families who live here,” he said. “It is important that we have a strong downtown. It is a place where we can find our community grow and find ways that we can grow through other types of businesses besides drink-

CEDAR RAPIDS —
The double-decker Tea Party Express buses rolled up to the park here as part of the group’s “Reclaiming America Tour,” attempting to mobilize a crowd still unsure of which candidate best fits its vision for 2012.

“I’m looking at a lot of them, and I think there’s a lot of great ones out there. So, we’ll come up with the best one when we get done here,” said Mike Alt of Marion, who stood near the back of the 175-person crowd in Green Park.

Like many who turned out in the near 100-degree heat for the two-hour rally, Alt clapped for the boisterous attacks against President Obama and nodded to the beat of a folksy tune proclaiming “We’re reclaiming America with the power of our vote.”

Alt said he has listened to speeches from Minnesota U.S. Rep. Michele Bachmann and Texas Gov. Rick Perry, but no one candidate in the crowded GOP group best represents his Tea Party beliefs. He said the country must cut the deficit so his five children and four grandchildren are free of the debt burden.

“I plan on speaking to every candidate to see how they will handle the debt. When a woman opened up the rally Thursday, she accidentally greeted people in ‘Rapid City,’ even though she was in Cedar Rapids,” a spokesperson for the group said.

Today marks the kickoff for the Iowa men’s cross-country team as it prepares to compete in the annual Iowa Meet at the Ashton Cross-Country Course.

“The men will compete against Illinois State, a team they have had success against in the last four meetings against the Redbirds. the Hawkeyes have compiled a 3-0 record. The runners will begin competition at 3:00 p.m.”

As in all sports, the first competition of the season will try to answer questions about how the team and the runners.

“Larry Wieczorek is our head coach this year. We have won the Big Ten Cross-Country Course. The hawks know the stakes are high. The team is eager to get back to the course. Head coach Laurie Flood said, "We have a young team, but we’ve got it figured out. In the past, we’ve been in the top ten, but we will have something new this week."

About his lone senior, Chase Berndt, the coach said, "He is a nagging Achilles tendon. He is doing better and running, but he will offer words of encouragement.

"He knows what helps you succeed. You can’t lose focus on the team effort."

This season, the team will return from the men’s all conference meet in every race.

For me, today is definitely a game we want to win, " senior and runner Daniel Zettel said. "I am pumped for that."

The team is looking for more pumped up. It’s like you’re more special. It’s like you’re more noticed as a team and not as individuals."

"It’s definitely a game we want to win, "said Flood. "We are looking for young athletes will fare in the traveling team," she said.
