The Iowa Film Office was shut down in 2009 when $25.6 million of Iowa taxpayers money was fraudulently abused under the Iowa Film Tax Incentive.

John Watkins cringed as he doubled over in pain. The University of Iowa theater graduate student performed a scene from The Farm, a movie that will be filmed in Iowa later this spring.

Local filmmakers said the project could be the first step in boosting the Iowa film industry.

"Filmmaking creates jobs and helps train Iowans in the industry, involves talented and young professionals who may otherwise be forced to move elsewhere," said Kimberly Busbee, the casting director and producer for The Farm.

Former Iowa Gov. Chet Culver shut down the Iowa Film Office in 2009 after Iowa Film Tax Incentive recipients misused funds exceeding $25.6 million in tax credits. No one has been charged with fraud to date.

Films in Iowa

Several major motion pictures have been filmed in Iowa:

• 1962: The Music Man
• 1973: The Sting
• 1995: The Bridges of Madison County
• 2000: Farm
• 2009: The Blind Side

It was a major scandal that created a big problem, not just for Iowa but for the whole United States film industry," said Dave Danielson, the program director and producer for The Farm.

Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad and Iowa Film Tax Incentive recipients generated approximately $120 million when they managed the office from 1994 to late 2002. The Farm is part of Project Cornlight, which is being funded by UI alumna and Hollywood actor Tanna Frederick, (The Daily Iowan/Terry Harris)

The University of Iowa had 14 students enrolled in film and video production in the fall of 2011 and 29 in film studies, according to the UI Office of the Registrar.

Police officials advise students to use the buddy system when looking to rent an apartment. There, the alleged victim told police she had made arrangements with an unknown male over the phone to show her apartment for a sublet agreement, the release said. The victim was showing the apartment.

Police and city officials stressed the need for precaution when looking to rent an apartment, and issued an arrest warrant for sexual assault on West Benton Street on March 20 at approximately 6:17 p.m.

Passion & competency

Claudia Baldes uses her passion for art to enrich the lives and talents of all students ages around the Iowa City community.

In the basement of North Hall among wax paper, cans of paint and pastel palettes, Claudia Baldes sits at her desk. The art teacher is perusing paintings used for a dress for her desk area. "Part of the reason I am so lucky about being here is because you have balance, it is too much of a one-sided approach," Baldes said while sitting in her desk area with a smile. "In addition, my students are so well balanced."

She has an extensive background in the art field, and she has taught at North Hall for 17 years. She started out in graduate school at the University of Iowa and then moved on to teaching.

When a position opened in the art department of the program, Baldes jumped at the opportunity to have her children get to know her.

According to baldes, she is organizing the program, and she is currently teaching four classes for 12 students. She said, "I love being a part of the department, it's still growing, it's still developing," and Baldes said, "I was so thankful to have a 17-year-old daughter who is a student here.

Baldes, the director of the Visual Arts at the University of Iowa, said, "I enjoy being able to help students and have a positive impact on the community."

Child abuse down

By BETH BRATOS

The number of Iowa child abuse complaints or neglects is on the way down, and Johnson County is following the trend.

An Iowa Department of Human Services report released March 20 cites a nearly 7 percent decrease in the statewide number of children subject to abuse last year, following two years of increases.

In Johnson County, the number of children subject to either "founded" abuse or a lesser term "confirmed" abuse dropped from 357 to 325 from 2010 to 2011, also following two years of increases.

A confirmed abuse is minor, isolated, and the caretaker involved will unlikely allow the incident to occur again. In a confirmed abuse, potential harm is to a child and identified and fixed right away, and the caregiver is not placed on the child-abuse registry, said Roger Munns, a spokesman for the Department of Human Services.

A founded abuse is more serious, and the perpetrator is placed on the child-abuse registry.

Though Munns is unsure what has caused the decrease, he said the unstable state of the economy can be one factor.

"Generally speaking, when we had economy crises as stress on a family, that adds a potential harm to a child, whether it be neglect or physical abuse," he said.

Munns noted that up to 79 percent of total child abuse cases in both Johnson County and the overall state last year were physical abuse and presence of illegal drugs in a child's system were the next most common in the county.

According to the Child Welfare Information Gateway, studies show one or two out of every three cases of child maltreatment involve at least one of these two variables.

Case workers now look at the safety of the child's environment, Munns said, and what actions constitute abuse.

Iowa City police Sgt. Denise Bonham said.

"Awareness is important," she said, "Often abuse is a result of a situation going on in the family.

One of the biggest risk factors is substance abuse.

She said the department work closely with the families where opened cases in cases of child maltreatment because substance use are important.

The department works directly to Perera's questi- tion, citing her concerns over a recently passed House bill to include the 2nd Amendment in the Iowa Constitution.

This new law – that the Senate will not do – will make every place more dangerous place to be," she said. "I worked on that bill, and they are very hard to fight for more legislation.

The legislators at the forum – all Democrats – agreed with Perera that the right to bear arms has become a dangerous new law.

"We're never going to eliminate crime," she said. "The whole premise is if they really thought that there was a potential that they were going to be (harmful), I think it would reduce crime.

"I believe the 'Stand Your Ground' bill went well," Rep. Dave Teske, D-Johnston, said. "I am afraid what happened (with Trayvon Martin) is what many of us predicted would happen."

"I have noticed lately there have been a lot of cases with domestic vio- lence," she said, when working on a school proj- ect in the area.

"We're never going to make a law that's going to make the streets safer." she said. "I worked on the Senate will pass. We will continue to try to get a law to put on the streets."

"We're never going to make a law that's going to make the streets safer," she said. "I worked on the Senate will pass. We will continue to try to get a law to put on the streets."

"This is a catch-all cate- gory," he said. "Very com- mon in that category are parents, whose judgment is normal, in that category are parents, whose judgment is normal, in this case.

"When you hear it, see it, or sus- pect it, report it. It's really important, she said. "When Zimmerman was arrested, he said he was suspicious. Munns is unsure when Zimmerman con- fessed.

"If a person has a hand- gun in a home, the likely- hood of it being used against a family member or a friend is 10 times greater," she said. "That is not going to make anybody safer. It makes no sense at all for us to be pushing for more dangerous new laws."
With USG elections this week, the consequences of these decisions are now at hand.

That is to say, nothing will change. Until now, USG has been able to get by on the resulting good will. USG has not been an active participant in the student government elections for years because no one spoke up to protest the results. Now, 3,000 students have voted and nothing will change.

Pettibone wants to take a stand against the election. In doing so, he will be the only USG member this year to vote against the election. USG has been the poster child for apathy in the student government elections for years.

Pettibone will have to defend his actions to the campus community and the campus community will have to make a decision about their representation. The campus community will have to decide whether they want to have a voice in their student government and whether they want to be represented by someone who is not afraid to stand up for them.

The student government elections are important not just because they determine who will represent the students but also because they are an important part of the democratic process. The student government elections are an opportunity for the students to have a say in their representation and to ensure that their voices are heard.

The student government elections are also an important part of the democratic process because they allow the students to have a say in the future of their campus. The student government elections are a chance for the students to vote for candidates who will work to improve their campus and to make it a better place to live and learn.

Renting going up

There are three multifamily/mixed-use buildings under construction in Iowa City.

By KRISTEN EAST

Across the nation, more people are moving into rental housing and multifamily apartments than ever before, and local and national experts attribute the increase to the younger generation.

According to the real estate services firm CBRE, rentals nationwide increased roughly 5 percent in 2011.

Though real-estate agents say young adults are driving the market, several rezoning proposals before the Iowa City City Council would target both student housing and multifamily units.

But one real-estate expert in California said she hasn’t noticed a trend of cities limiting the number of people or bedrooms in a housing unit.

“There is a market for people to live in apartments,” said Melissa Prandi, president of Prandi Property Management. “Everyone needs a place to live.”

According to a 2011 report by the National Multifamily Housing Council, the national vacancy rate for apartments was at 5.2 percent in 2011, while the local vacancy rate for multifamily units within a mile of the Pentacrest was less than 2 percent.

“People use apartments to save money or after they graduate,” Prandi said. “They’d rather rent a home for one-third of the cost than buy one.”

While owning a home was the “American dream” for today’s generation of 40- to 50-year-olds, Prandi said, that dream is fading.

“That’s not their mindset,” she said. “The younger generation likes to be mobile, and they’re very used to having things in an instant. They’d much rather rent than be tied down to a mortgage.”

Gay stifled the Hawkeyes explosive offense in Sunday's opening game, limiting them to seven hits and pitching out of bases-loaded situations three times. But Iowa's smart baserunning and ability to get on base helped the Hawkeyes push their Big Ten record to 4-2.

Gay started throwing to the outside corner of the plate and continued to pitch progressively further from the center of the zone. The Illini struck out Iowa with the bases loaded in the bottom of the 10th inning on Sunday by making her a base out.

Gladden said she realized Gay was doing well, though, and stepped into the batter's box prepared to keep looking for 'Terry pitch' during that at-bat, but she never got it — so she took the walk.

"I know I needed to get on base," Gladden said. "And if I knew at that point I got to first base, we would score more runs in the inning." Gay started her at-bat by hitting a poor perform-
