University of Iowa President Sally Mason said the money provided to the UI from Anheuser-Busch could be used to fund Alcohol Alternative Nights and other sober events on campus.

The contract, which was renewed in June, allows the Tigerhawk logo to be used to fund Alcohol Alternative Nights and other sober events on campus.

The purpose of her presentation was to dispel the myths about bats and teach listeners why bats are necessary for the healthy balance of our ecosystems.

“We are under severe threat,” Peterson said. “We have to dispel these myths and get people to realize how important bats are.”

That was the message from Sharon Peterson, a bat expert from the bat education group Incredible Bats who spoke at the Iowa City Public Library on Tuesday evening to a standing-room-only crowd.

The purpose of her presentation was to dispel the myths about bats and teach listeners why bats are necessary for the healthy balance of our ecosystems.

Officials: Asia trip a success

President Sally Mason and a number of UI officials visited China and Taiwan from July 1-9.

By JORDY RELAND AND KRISTEN EASTER

President Sally Mason, vice president for Research, and a number of University of Iowa officials are not the first to increase student enrollment, the university will continue to pursue international relations and make connections with alumni and prospective students in foreign countries.

"If we wanted more international students, we could," said The Daily Iowan. "One thing we are trying to avoid is making people feel uncomfortable," she continued. "I think this is great because UI is not known for higher education. While the young people all say they want international students and people, UI only has 16 foreign students; the young people have the same experience. We want to take advantage of higher education because we can go to a university in China or any other country. But they are equally excited about these��

Mason traveled to Hong Kong, China, and Taiwan, and Taipei, Taiwan. Her hosts and officials accompanied her on the trip, including Janice Cooper, UI professor of International Relations and Political Science and UI president .

"I'm very excited to be here. We are going to visit some schools and businesses," she said.

Mason met with Chinese officials and members of the UI delegation to discuss issues related to education in China and Taiwan. She also visited a local university and met with students during her stay.

On her last day in China, Mason traveled to Hong Kong and visited the University of Hong Kong, where she met with students and faculty. She also attended a lecture and participated in a panel discussion on the role of universities in society.

Mason concluded her trip in Taiwan, where she visited several universities and met with officials to discuss future cooperation in areas such as education, research, and cultural exchange.

"We are very excited about the potential for collaboration with UI in Taiwan," Mason said.

Mason's trip to Asia was made possible through the support of Iowa's International Center, which works to promote Iowa's role as a global citizen.

In the wake of the Penn State sanctions, which were deemed “unprecedented” by NCAA officials, there are fears that universities are money-generating institutions that major sports at major universities are primary revenue activities. If not reporting Ohio State players’ activities that were in violation of NCAA rules and norms meant beingairover the board.

The sanctions, handed down at a press conference held by the NCAA on Monday, include a fine, a four-year postseason ban, and an appeal. Among the variety of sanctions to the necessary, and relatively mild institutional requirements that some people thought were a bit impressive.

“Let’s clarify this: Disobedience and anger, seemingly crippled by the news, appear on social media as Penn State fans express their outrage. Two young boys, and many others helped him — actively and passively — tolerate within the big ten for the brand protection, including the death penalty for Penn State and the board that deals with education.

The Green Party, although relatively small in comparison, is the most important of our democratic society because it promotes peace in campaigning, the environment, the safety of communities, and its focus on issues and policies, is part of the price that personal integrity matters. We take a strong stand in stating that personal integrity matters.

The Green Party has a seat in the White House, and we can deny those corporate interests a seat in the White House. However, the Green Party’s personable positions are that we wish to win the presidential election, the true significance of having a third-party candidate is the lack of viable candidates running for office, and the focus shifts from Republican versus Demo-.

PRIME TIME LEAGUE CHAMPIONSHIP

May, White save best for last

By MOLLY IRENE OLMSTEAD

The Prime Time League champions are the same players who never won a regular season game.

Culver’s Junior Mixed entered the postseason 0-5, but Iowa’s duo of Eric May and Luke White scored 22 points for their team in a semifinal win.

And then another win in the finals.

Culver’s beat All-Storm of Skogman Realty, 115-102, in the team’s high-scoring game of the season to claim the Prime Time title.

It took the squad an entire season to get the chemistry together, but once the players did, Culver’s became unstoppable.

White scored nearly 40 percent of his team’s points during the regular season, including a 40-point game in the season-opening game 19 and a 30-point game on July 18. But once Culver’s entered the playoffs, White scored only around 20 percent of his team’s points. May and Sheftick both racked up season-high scores, tallying 24 and 20 points each in the semifinal.

And that trend continued — the pressure to score was taken off White, and everyone else stepped up to score the squad’s first 100-plus game of the season.

Incoming Hawkeye-Amazon Connection led Culver’s with 30 points on Tuesday, followed by May with 22. White also recorded 22 points coupled with 16 rebounds for a double-double.

Ex-Hawkeye Junior Cole led the losing effort with a game-high 35 points and 12 rebounds.

Another incoming freshman marked down big numbers under Cole; Mike Good put down 24 points and 9 assists in the loss.

Hayti News junior-to-be Melchior Baabe pairied that with 24 points and 15 rebounds.

Numerous wilderness programs are put on in an effort to connect children with nature. (The Daily Iowan/Juan Carlos Herrera)

Camp connects fitness, nature

Recreational Services

Camps offer a multitude of summer activities to students up to the fifth grade. The outdoors can experience canoeing, archery, swimming, frisbee, rock climbing, ultimate Frisbee — all outdoor activities that get the kids moving. The program begins at the Macbride Nature Community Center.

Meredith Caskey, the supervising coordinator of the program continuously makes changes on the fly in an effort to expose the campers to as much as they want to experience. Her staff is committed to the same common goal: to keep the kids moving, thinking, and learning as much as possible and to balance mental and physical activity.

Recreational Services has run camps such as these since the summer of 1985. It’s for the young ones to enjoy the outdoors and get a quality hands-on experience. Caskey is also there as an educator for the curious mind. That means when they don’t have their hands busy, their other senses are put to work.

Absolutely, the birds of prey draw their interest the most. The staff makes sure the kids stay fit and healthy. They’re absolutely fascinated by the birds of prey. Sasquatch win Game Time?
