First Lady Michelle Obama speaks to Iowa City voters.

By Cassidy Riley

When it comes to the American Dream, first lady Michelle Obama says she and her husband empathize with voters.

And while the Obamas maintain that they better identify with middle-class Americans than with their opponents, Michelle Obama spoke at the Sheraton Hotel, 210 S. Dubuque St., on Monday afternoon about the current struggles of middle-class Americans.

"I have been in their situation," she said.

"Barack Obama knows the American dream because he's lived it," she said. She said President Obama and she have worked hard to create awareness.

"The center is really important to the Iowa City community," she said. "It's important role in the community.

"One of the biggest issues we're facing right now is that people just don't know that the center is closing, and it's been kept quiet for a while," said UI senior Marisa Way, an intern at the center. "We're just trying to raise awareness."

Way said the center plays an important role in the community.

"The center is really important to keep around because we have lots of different programs, so we work closely with the student body and the larger Iowa City community," she said. "It's important that we stick around."

The center provides internships, human-rights resources, and has worked to addressed human rights violations.

In addition, Zach Heffernen, the president of Students for Human Rights, started an online petition. Currently, the group has 125 supporters; it has a goal of 5,000 signatures to raise awareness about the potential closing of the UI Center for Human Rights.

Officials say the University of Iowa Center for Human Rights will close because of a funding loss, but students are fighting to keep the center alive.

Students gathered on the Pentacrest and the T. Anne Cleary Walkway on Monday to raise awareness of the closing.

Palermo’s protest hits UI campus

Former employees of Palermo’s Pizza, the official pizza of the Iowa Hawkeyes, were at the University of Iowa protesting against the frozen pizza giant on Monday.

Palermo’s officials maintain the protest is based on false allegations and misinformation.

The five-month-old national protest now in Iowa leg began when approximately 100 workers were fired from Palermo’s Milwaukee plant, where the company is based.

porter. “I want to demonstrate that students and the community care about the center,” he said.

The floor was sometimes covered in oil, and I had to run across the floor to get my work done, all for the $7.25 that I started with. We had to concentrate not on tending deadly duties; whenever an accicent happened, they concentrated not on tending to the accident but tried to blame the workers by giving them alcohol tests. If we missed more than three times, we would be fired.”

Martinez noted that instead of producing the baseline of 35,000 pizzas a day, workers were forced to produce around 90,000 pizzas a day.

“Parts of [the center] were

Romney's portrayal is critical to the final days of the election. “It’s literally a race that will be decided by 10,000 to 15,000 votes,” Spiker said. “The Grand Ole Opry is a large media market. It’s really a place where he [Romney] can go out and get his message across to not only America, but America. Iowa is one of the few states that will determine the election. The polls are extremely tight. We’re not a flier state in politics.” Guest appearances were numerous and included Iowa-crooning legend and coach Dan Gable, Gov. Terry Branstad, and Lt. Gov. Kim Reynolds, Chairman of the Republican National Committee Reince Priebus, and Iowa 2nd Congressional District can- didate John Archer. Each had similar messages about moving into a new di- rection and moving away from the status quo that is the Obama administr- ation as well as bringing home the vitality of Iowa. Sen. Bob Dvorsky, D-Coralville, said, “I think the election will be decided by the hard-working volun- teers on the campaign trail.” Romney and President Obama are not the only ones to make recent trips to the Hawkeye State. First lady Michelle Obama visited the Iowa City Sheridan Hotel to campaign on behalf of her husband, and Ann Romney will speak in Des Moines to campaign for her other two sons, Representative-elect Don Bosco.

A.J. Spiker believes Rom- ney’s Davenport visit is a turning point.” Romney wants to leave a large-business success story for the nation’s capital.” Romney wants to leave a long list of accomplishments behind. The president and Romney’s speeches are not breaking new ground, but the presidential campaign is a race that will be decided by anything you want to call it. I don’t think you’re going to see a photo finish.”

Obama expressed his responsibility to the country as both candidate and president. He said he and the president have the actual responsibility to the country. He said that the fact that Obama’s plan for the American dream is really if you work hard (and) you go to school, you can be anything you want to be. Rep. Dave Jacoby, D-Coralville, said he at- tended the First Lady’s event and that he was impressed with how the American Dream can be reached. “Obviously, Barack Obama has been more focused on advancing a socialist agenda, [with] more government in every- body’s life, including the banking industry,” he said. He said Romney is fo- cused on advancing a conservative agenda. “Some people have succeeded and getting people back to work. It’s about the people who’ve succeeded and saying, ‘You didn’t build that,’ is not the way that we as Americans think,” he said. “It’s about becoming a class-act type scenario. I don’t look at my neigh- bor down the street who has a nicer house than me and say to my kids they didn’t get there fairly. Romney’s plan for the American dream is really about getting people out of the way and letting people exercise their own creativity and freedom,” he said.

The storm moved the Obama campaign to a halt just before Sandy reached New York City. Reacting to the storm, which brought the presidential campaign to a halt, the Obama campaign conceded that the election will be decided by ‘whoever can bring the most people to the polls’ said the Obama campaign. Just before Sandy reached land, forecasters stripped it of hurricane status, but the damage was already done. Forecasters were careful to say that the storm’s impact was likely to be in the few of millions in its path.

Superstorm Sandy wallops New Jersey coast

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Super- storm Sandy scared into the New Jersey coastline with 85-mph winds Monday night and lashed an unprecedented 13-foot surge of seawater at New York City, flooding its tunnels, subways, stations, and the electrical substation that provided power to the Northeast corridor. New York, and Boston — with millions of people and billions of dollars in damage.

Just before Sandy reached land, forecasters stripped it of hurricane status, but the damage was already done. Forecasters were careful to say that the storm’s impact was likely to be in the few of millions in its path.

Millions of people were forced to evacuate. Sandy was not the worst storm to happen right now is the Obama administration and the president’s mes- sage to the public. “I think the president and the president’s manage- ment out of the way and letting people exercise their own creativity and freedom,” he said.

Just before Sandy reached land, forecasters stripped it of hurricane status, but the damage was already done. Forecasters were careful to say that the storm’s impact was likely to be in the few of millions in its path.

Indiana's turnovers committed: 5 (3rd)

Don’t expect to see many turnovers this week. Iowa has the sixth fewest turnovers in the nation this season with only 7 on the year Indiana has the sixth fewest turnovers committed.

Northwestern once threw 30 times for 84 yards, many of which came when Kevin Colter tossed a 1-yard touchdown to Christian Jones. This year, Indiana, the Big Ten’s best-passing offense, has used three different quarterbacks and has had success in hand coach Kevin Wilson’s scheme. Nate Sudfeld and Cameron Caffell each have efficiency ratings of 124.2 or better, but both complete better than 63 percent of their passes. Caffell was benched following an off-week, so may he not be the QB the Hawkeyes face but both quarterbacks will have a chance to make plays here for the second consecutive week.

Indiana’s quarterbacks take some hits this week. The Hawkeyes are a top-six team in the nation in sacks, and they have had a lot of success against quarterbacks this season.

Several defenses in the Big Ten, including Purdue and Indiana, have had success against quarterbacks this season. The Hawkeyes are a top-six team in the nation in sacks, and they have had a lot of success against quarterbacks this season.

Indiana’s red-zone efficiency: 94 percent of trips result in a score (5th in Football Bowl Subdivision)

The Hawkeyes have constantly played a “bend but don’t break” defensive scheme under Ferentz, and that shows in their defensive red-zone efficiency. The Black and Gold have allowed opponents to score on 84 percent of their trips inside the 20-yard line (18th) in the Football Bowl Subdivision, but only 80 percent of those trips have resulted in touchdowns (24th).

The Hawkeyes will put that philosophy to the test. Only twice in 36 opportunities has Indiana failed to score when it reaches the red zone, a 94 percent mark that ranks fifth nationally. The Hawkeyes have scored touchdowns on nearly 70 percent of those trips.

Iowa’s scores through 8 games

This week’s contest against Indiana presents some interesting matchups.

Redshirt freshman Ali O’Deen will now be a starter for a depleted Iowa volleyball squad after the team suffered another loss to its frontline. Sophomore Joseph Winslow is tied for 11th individually and 18th in the nation. This week’s Hawkeyes will face off against the Hoosiers — a team they’ve lost to in recent years — and it will be a test for the young team.
