The importance of being Ernst

Republican Senate nominee Joni Ernst was praised by many of her state opponents as being easy to dismiss; they don’t make a difference,” said Schmidt, also a member of the US Chamber of Commerce. “But when you get it from the endorsement, it speaks to voters.”

Un ‘free’ summers to continue

The University of Iowa will continue the free-tuition summer program next year.

By ERIK HANSAU

Underclassmen have an additional incentive to help them stay on track to graduation in four years.

The Summer Hawk Tuition Grant is offered to all students who were freshmen at the university in 2013.

The program, which the University of Iowa is offering for the first time this summer, will be offered again next summer to students in the class of 2019.

The university won’t know how well the program worked until the class of 2017 graduates.

Initially, the goal was not to increase our four-year graduation rates, said Associate Provost Beth Ingram. Instead, “we just felt like we needed to give them another option to graduate, so it was a good way to make use of that capacity and offer this infrastructure that we have,” she said. “The result was that it was a success.”

Summer tuition includes the same amount per credit hour as tuition during the academic year.

For a three-credit hour course Collegiate Arts and Sciences summer courses this year, in-state residents paid $1,128, Ingram said.

The university is offering for the first year graduation rate for those who entered as first-time, first-year students in the fall of 2013.

Ingram said 4,620 students were enrolled in summer classes last year, roughly 250 students took advantage of the program.

And the great deal has detained countless nonresidents from taking summer classes.

“The incremental cost was because it was a one-time limited-focus program.”

Six credit hours of courses cost $2,256; $12 credit hours cost $3,360,

Kevin Clancy, a student enrolled in 12 summer courses, was not aware of the Hawk Tuition Grant.

“It stands like a good way for freshmen to gain familiarity with the fact that they can take courses over summers.

A masterpieces isn’t made in a day.

But University of Iowa students, along with Iowa City residents, can look forward to seeing the complete shape of the new University of Iowa Hancher and Voxman Music Building within the next six to nine months.

Construction on both Hancher and Voxman is on track, and UI officials expect them to open in the fall of 2014.

Both the old facilities were heavily damaged in the 2008 flood, which damaged roughly one-sixth of the campus.

“We’ve all important stages where the general public can see the progress,” said Rod Lohrstein, director of planning, design, and construction for UI Facilities Management.

When the buildings are finally enclosed and construction moves to the interior, weather should no longer be an issue, he said.

Although officials are excited about the progress, some are still aware of possible delays.

Lohrstein said any foreseeable issues that could cause setbacks would happen during the finish and carpentry stage.

Workers’ schedules were adjusted and work hours were extended up to 24 hours per day in order to keep everything on track despite the cold winter that presented some delays, as well as historic floods discovered last fall.

Construction crews exposed foundation to a cabin that may date back to the 1830s. Along with the cabin foundation, six to seven cisterns—a hole in the ground that collects rainwater—were found.

Hancher Executive Director Chuck Swanson said faculty and staff should have access to the completed buildings in the spring of 2016.

At that time, the general public will be able to take tours of the new buildings.

The University of Iowa sees a steady increase in the number of applicants each year.

By Kristen Baron

University of Iowa students will see more new faces than in past years. The number of people who have applied to the UI has steadily increased over the last several years. In 2012, the UI had 19,430 applicants, and in 2013, there were 21,644 applicants. There were 23,850 applicants in 2014.

“Students and families are looking wider for the best fit for their education,” said Michael Barron, the UI assistant provost for enrollment management and the executive director of Admissions. Barron said because the UI publishes basic admission standards — which many colleges don’t — the admission rate is high.

For the fall of 2013, 93 percent of Iowa residents and 94 percent of nonresidents were offered admission, although Iowa residents are given the highest priority.

From 2012 to 2014, the number of Iowa resident applicants increased from 4,309 to 4,751. For nonresidents, the number of applicants increased from 11,686 to 14,756 (the figures do not include international students).

With the recently-passed performance-based funding formula, 60 percent of state allocations will be based on the enrollment numbers of Iowa residents, 15 percent for progress and attainment, 10 percent for academic year and financial aid, 5 percent for sponsored research, 5 percent weighted for graduate and profession- al students, and 5 percent on customized requirements set by the state Board of Regents.

Barron said admission requirements at the UI are lower for Iowa residents, and he noted that they have many other college options in the state.

This past fall, Iowa State University had the most undergraduate resident students at 18,009. The UI had 10,430 resident students, and the University of Northern Iowa had 9,411.

Prospective college students are applying to multiple colleges, and the UI has an increased interest in the number of college visitors in recent years. This past year the UI had 27,000 admission visitors.

Strong relationships with high schools in Illinois, Minnesota, and Wisconsin, along with shifts towards electronic communication, have kept nonresident applications up, Barron said.

“I believe that the UI offers a quality education that students recognize,” he said.

Some students agree.

“I believe in patient centered care and the importance of prevention.”

Growing polarization hurts everyone

Jan Overton

Since at least the 1950s, Republican and Democratic politicians have become increasingly polarized. Modern citizens are more divided than ever over who should identify as Democrats or Republicans.

A new report from the Pew Research Center shows that the share of Americans who hold strongly liberal or conservative views has tripled from 46 percent to 10 percent of the public in just 20 years.

Furthermore, the share of part-time workers who reveal their opinions to the public in nature.

After roughly a month-long break, The Daily Iowan is back to provide its readers with everything there is to know about Iowa sports. Here are a few things that happened while we were away.

Baseball in the Big Ten Tournament

The Iowa baseball team finished its regular season eighth in the Big Ten. With that, the Hawkeyes sent eight to the NCAA West Regionals. All three signed contracts.

Contract/Counterpoint

Will US. survive in Cup?

Two DI separators debate if the United States will make it out of pool play in the FIFA World Cup.

Yes

Trending upward, the US. Men’s National Team has been working toward the World Cup for several years. After being eliminated in group play in 2006, it reached the Round of 16 in 2010 and has continued to improve and showcase their talent in the years since. The year 2014 is the US. Men’s National Team’s best hope. Back in 2010,ulary, the Americans defeated the Germans, 0-3, in the Continental Celebration Match in June 2013, led by Cup participant Klinsmann and Jerzy Alidokie.

No

There has been plenty of drama before the US. Men’s National Team steps on the pitch for its first match in the 2014 World Cup against Ghana. But fear not; there is reason to remain en-thusiastic. Although Germany and Portugal, which both qualified for group stage play, will have a lot riding on the outcome of this match, the Americans will have to compete with Germany and Portugal. Besides that, Germany, Portugal, and Ghana will cause plenty of problems for each other’s opponents.

Klinsmann is the correct decision for the US. Men’s National Team. Klinsmann has continued to improve and showcase their talent in the years since. The year 2014 is the US. Men’s National Team’s best hope. Back in 2010, the Americans defeated the Germans, 0-3, in the Continental Celebration Match in June 2013, led by Cup participant Klinsmann and Jerzy Alidokie.

Dilanni takes over market

After Hawkeye soccer coach Ron Rainey left Iowa for Dartmouth in June, Iowa was without a head coach. But that changed when David Dilanni was named the new coach in charge.

He has coached 21 seasons at Grand Valley State, in charge of 12 of them. He has coached 21 All-Americans.

Football

Nice Law announced on Wednesday night that he would leave Iowa. The defensive back was arrested for disorderly conduct a few days before announcing his decision. The senior played in all 11 games for the Hawkeye last season.

Head coach Kirk Feren- z also hired Seth Wallace as a recruiting coordinator. He was previously a graduate assistant with Iowa and was the defensive coordinator at Valdol- is on in September.

Ramos wins World Team Trials

Former Iowa 135-pounder Tony Ro- mos — the 2014 NCAA champion at the weight — dropped down a weight class to 77 kilo- grams (165.5 pounds) and won the World Team Trials in Madi- son, Wis.

As a result of the vic- tory, he will join Team USA at the World Championships in Uz- bekistan in September.

Track and Field

Both the men’s and women’s track and field squads competed in both the NCAA West Region- al and NCAA meet. In the former, the Hawkeyes went second to Texas, 5-3, in the Cross Country, which wrapped up on Saturday. Longtime track and field as- sistant coach Larry Wesc- zerek also announced his retirement, effec- tive in early July. He has been involved with the Hawkeyes for more than 30 years.

The Germans are one of the top 10 most likely cham- pions based on the odds-makers, but a lot of that projection is dependent on Germany’s form. But, if what’s happened with the team over the past few years is any indication, there is reason to remain en- thusiastic. Although Germany and Portugal, which both qualified for group stage play, will have a lot riding on the outcome of this match, the Americans will have to compete with Germany and Portugal. Besides that, Germany, Portugal, and Ghana will cause plenty of problems for each other’s opponents.

Men’s National Team’s best hope. Back in 2010, the Americans defeated the Germans, 0-3, in the Continental Celebration Match in June 2013, led by Cup participant Klinsmann and Jerzy Alidokie.

As long as the United States can take care of business in a more evenly matched Game 1 against Ghana, it will have a chance to compete with Germany and Portugal. Because that, Germany, Portugal, and Ghana will cause plenty of problems for each other’s opponents.

The Americans to advance past group stage will primarily be dependent on the performance of Craf- tiano Ronaldo. At the age of 29 and playing competitive soccer for nearly his entire life, Ronaldo has been suffering from tendinosis, a degenerative condition affecting his left patellar tendon. Furthermore, re- cent surgery to the knee was unsuccessful because it has continued to im- prove. So this could be the unusual fashion? Klins- mann delivered another shocker by leaving Landon Donovan off the 23-man roster, arguably the best player in American soc- cer history. Maybe it is the correct decision for the future of the team, but until that is pre- viously. The all-time goal and assist leader for the USA is working for ESPN rather than the American squad during the World Cup.

Clint Dempsey, the team captain, will have his toughest test yet cre- ating opportunities to find the back of the net. With the Americans to advance past group stage play, the 2014 World Cup is already been an exciting run together and make a splash. That is, until they were placed in the Group of Death.

Many four the road ahead of the Americans, having to compete with Portugal, Germany, and Ghana. But four; there is reason to remain en- thusiastic. Although Germany and Portugal, which both qualified for group stage play, will have a lot riding on the outcome of this match, the Americans will have to compete with Germany and Portugal. Twelve members of the Iowa women’s bas-keetball team were also taken in the draft even though they did not participate in the tryout. Coming off of a strong season in which they lost in the Big Ten Tour-nament championship game, league director Randy Larson said he looks forward to watch-ing Hawkeyes play. I’m excited, because I think the Iowa team will be a real contender this season,” he said.

The Prime Time League held its tryouts and draft on Sunday.

The Prime Time League kicked off Sunday with tryouts and a draft to make up the teams. Dozens of players from Iowa colleges and high school teams partook in the tryouts, however, none of the Hawkeyes basketball players participated. Below are three story lines leading up to the season opener, which is scheduled for Thursday.

Five first-team All-Americans and eight second-team All-Americans — that was the final tally for Iowa at the 2014 outdoor NCAA meet. Top-eight finishes include first-team honors, and those who fin- ished No. 9-16 made second- team honors.

Pretty impressive for a squad that was not very competitive through the first month and a half of indoor season. But the Hawkeyes were in a good spot for the outdoor season. They peaked at the right time, and quite a few of their performances toward the end of the season were exceptional for as many personal records or very close to them. The five first-teamers were occurred over two events, the men’s 1400-meter relay and the women’s long jump. The growth and rapid maturation of the 4x100 relay that ran a season record 39.19 in pro- time, might very well be the reason the Hawkeyes opted into a sixth-place finish at NCAA finals.

While they certainly gave a big story, senior Zinnia Miller in the long jump was the feel-good story of the meet. Never having even competed in the event before this season, Miller got in with two different events — the long jump and triple jump. She certainly didn’t act like she had never been there before; she jumped a personal record 4.39 meters, which was new schools and second all-time in Iowa. While Miller’s record was not as surprising when she did not finish nearly as well as 4.50, she still received second-second All-American honors with her 4.39.

“I think [Miller] has come a long way,” assis- tant track coach Steve Steveson said after Miller’s performance.
