Christie heads to Iowa

The New Jersey governor will make four stops in Iowa today to campaign for the re-election of Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad.

Should he announce plans for Washington, the most pressing concern for Christie will be to appeal to the state's staunch conservative voters, which make up about one-third of all of Iowa's caucus-goers, Larimer said.

He said he expects Christie's talking points to focus on the Affordable Care Act, the country's path to economic recovery, foreign affairs, and the national deficit.

Christie's first return to the state in two years has resulted in political examinations about his motives and a re-evaluation of his viability in a state in which he has long been viewed favorably.

Those attempts, if all they amounted to, were already deep enough with a pick-marked commentary that is still reeling from the handling of the George Washington Bridge traffic scandal last fall.

UI center releases rental data

A high percentage of people are paying more than they can afford for rent, and some say it is not surprising.

BY THE DAILY IOWAN

UI Campus

Some University of Iowa students are not surprised by high rent. Recently, the Housing and Land Use Policy Program at the University of Iowa Public Policy Center made information available online to help students decide on a place to live.

"We wanted policymakers at the city, the state, at the county, and even at the national level to have easy access to this data to make informed policy decisions," said Anthony Alex Schuck.

A recent study at the UI Public Policy Center, and Grant Ritter, a new policy research assistant at the Public Policy Center, worked on the map part-time since November 2012 to make the information readily available to policymakers and the public.

The goal of the data map was to help improve the housing information situation, according to the data, to the need for affordable housing has increased quite a bit in the last three years.

Information on the map shows that Johnson County's steady increase in the percentage of people over 45 years old has been 4.8 percent in 2000 to 5.5 percent in 2010.

While a large percentage of people living property in Johnson County are realtoral-bound, the data were not startling. The Iowan, a property of the University of Iowa, has said in an email: "With that said, it is not surprising. The increase in rent is not meant to be a negative change for everyone. It is simply a reflection of the market and the demand for housing."

UI students, on the other hand, sometimes feel they are paying too much to live in a one-bedroom apartment in downtown.

"It would be really hard to change, though, because there are many different factors going on behind the scenes, all resulting in this," he said. "It could be done, but it would take a lot of effort and time to get it working."

When the UI's wrestling dynasty began, The Daily Iowan was there.

RAISE THE BAR

The staff went through an hour of learning how to identify situations that could lead to sexual assaults. Another hour was spent on how to come up with solutions to intervene.

Morgan Cohen, who has worked at Bo-James for 10 years, said he thinks the training has helped him think about real-life examples and come up with solutions to react to them.

"Every once in a while you see something and you want to intervene and act, but it’s good to be reminded how to do that appropriately," he said.

The training especially sparked an interest for newer staff, who may not be as comfortable asserting their authority.

Allison Tucker-Garon, who has worked Bo-James for about a month, said now feels more comfortable trying to stop unwanted situations that could arise in a bar setting.

"I think it’s really important for the bars to go through the training because a lot of students frequent the downtown area and come to the bars and the restaurants that are down here," Schorr said. "To have the same education awareness we can put out there for the staff, then the increase of opportunities to intervene and interrupt situations that lead to a sexual assault or sexual violence."

As the lazy days of summer drag on, it seems that the weather here in the state of Iowa might come to the realization that it has been warmer than usual. However, it seems unlikely that this trend will continue for much longer, as a significant cold front is expected to move through the region in the coming days. This will likely bring overnight temperatures down to the low 40s or high 30s, with daytime highs in the mid 70s or low 80s.

A recent article in the Des Moines Register highlighted a proposal to build a new football stadium in the state of Iowa. The proposed stadium would be located in Des Moines and would replace the current stadium, which is located in the city's downtown area. The proposed stadium would have a capacity of 65,000 seats and would be built using private funds. The article notes that the proposed stadium would provide a significant economic boost to the Des Moines area, and would likely generate millions of dollars in new tax revenue each year.

The article also notes that the proposed stadium would be built using private funds, and that the city of Des Moines would not be required to provide any financial support for the project. The article states that the proposed stadium would be privately owned and operated, and that the city of Des Moines would not be responsible for any of the stadium's operating costs.

Immigration splits O’Malley, Obama

By BRIAN WHITE

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Maryland Gov. Martin O’Malley was one of President Barack Obama’s top fundraisers in 2012, raising more than $1 million for his re-election campaign and supporting him regularly on political talk shows. Now, O’Malley is finding out what it’s like to be on Obama’s bad side.

Days after O’Malley criticized a White House proposal to deal with the immigration crisis at the U.S.-Mexico border, reports surfaced of a leaked phone call between the governor and the president on the border, according to a source familiar with the conversation.

“The source insisted on anonymity in order to protect the governor’s position,” the source said. “The source also made clear that he believe O’Malley would want to keep the call completely private.”

O’Malley aides emphasized that recommending against locating children at one site did not mean the governor opposed housing the children in Maryland. On Monday, the O’Malley administration took steps to formally reassign the facility and remove the children after weeks of working on the matter.

While O’Malley’s administration has said it’s working to find temporary shelters for immigrant children arriving from Central America, he asked the White House in a private conversation not to send the children to one of the sites that had been under consideration, according to a source familiar with the conversation.

The conversation between O’Malley and White House domestic policy director Cecilia Munoz took place late on July 11. The pair had been in touch with the source of the call said O’Malley told Munoz that the facility in Westminster, Maryland, was not a conservative part of the state, and the children were at risk of getting harassed or worse.

The source insisted on anonymity in order to protect the governor’s position. The source also made clear that he believe O’Malley would want to keep the call completely private.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Don’t let your emotions stand between you and a good relationship decision. Sharing costs or lowering your overhead will help you the freedom and good fortune to do more of the things you enjoy most. Plan a trip for two.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Keep an open mind when listening to the concerns of others. Offering simple but effective solutions will ensure you get the respect you deserve. Don’t let your emotions show, or someone will spot your vulnerability and use it against you.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Put your energy into doing a good job and helping others. The changes you bring about will be commendable, but not everyone will agree with your methods. Appeal to the emotional side of those trying to interfere with your plans.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your intuition will guide you, but don’t expect smooth sailing. Modelling can be expected, and it must be handled with professionalism if you want to avoid a disagreement that can hinder your reputation. Stay calm, and proceed with caution.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Jump into action, and make things happen. Control, and do your own thing. You’ll gain respect, attract attention, and be acknowledged for what you accomplish. Someone is likely to challenge you. Stand tall, and proceed with grace and dignity.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don’t let impulsiveness lead you to a costly move. Investments will not be as good as you appear. Control your emotions when it comes to money, health, and legal matters. Keep a calm disposi- tion, and refuse to let anyone take advantage of you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 20): Participate in an activity that offers positive re- sults. Doing something special with someone you love will help you bond and set the groundwork for a better relationship. Focus for equality, and you’ll achieve compatibility.

SCORPIO (Oct. 21-Nov. 20): Your actions will buy you the freedom and good fortune to do more of the things you enjoy most. Plan a trip for two.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Path. Speak up, and move forward.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep a low profile. Listen carefully to what others say, and be observant of what’s going on around you. Avoid confrontations and discord. Focus on family, important relationships, and do what you can to take advantage of a job or financial investment that comes your way. Stand tall, and proceed with grace and dignity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Opportunities are within reach. Take a look around you, and do what you can to take advantage of a job or financial investment that comes your way. Love is on the rise, and celebrating with someone special will bring you closer together.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do something creative or share your ideas with someone who inspires you. You will be able to resolve a pending conflict. It seems I underestimated him, as well as the potential for lunacy.

One of those potential contributors is out- side backer Trevor Perry, who had 10 tackles as a sophomore and a scholarship in the spring.

“That's the way they push us each day,” Perry said about the defense lines. “They expect the best out of us, just like we expect the best out of them. Ultimately we’re 11 guys who have to do our job right to help the team be successful.

“Now that you’re surrounded with the first-stringers, it pushes you to be better because you have to be.”

The Daily Iowan
At the first step inside, it’s clear Coralville’s Backpocket Brewery is not the typical brew house. The Backpocket Taproom, in which patrons can enjoy the menu of pizza, burgers, desserts, and various craft beers, is directly adjacent to the brewery itself. However, venture closer to the back, and it becomes clear there are no walls or windows separating the space in which the beer is made and the space in which the beer is enjoyed; visitors can watch the process.

Stainless steel tanks full of hops, yeast, grain, and water operate to churn out their five distinct microbrews, bringing the process closer than ever to the thirsty consumer. In fact, some lucky customers even get a chance to toss in the ingredients themselves.

“Right now, we distribute our beer all over the state of Iowa, which is great,” said Andy Skelton, the manager of Backpocket’s Taproom. “By the end of the summer, we should hopefully be shipping to Omaha, St. Louis, and maybe Wisconsin.”

Backpocket certainly has no shortage of suds; the facility can churn out 2,000 gallons of beer per week, making it the largest brewery in Iowa. For the curious connoisseur, tours are available daily at 5:30 p.m.

Although the Taproom is the main draw, Backpocket offers a bit more this summer than a place to eat, drink, and be merry.

Combining film fanatics and beer buffs

The 15,000-square-foot facility boasts a large beer garden complete with a fire pit, grill, and yard games. But the biggest attraction lights up every Thursday night — Movies on the Beer Garden.

As soon as the sun goes down, classic movies are played on a 17-foot screen in the back of the beer garden. Previous features have featured such classic comedies as Old School and Dazed and Confused, as well as more action-packed fare such as Jurassic Park and Lock, Stock, and Two Smoking Barrels.

Moonstruck in an Iowa City gastropub

Moonrakers Gastropub, 126 E. Washington St., is a small, friendly looking restaurant and bar tucked above One Twenty Six. The place has a slight, almost unnoticeable James Bond theme to it. Of course, the name comes from the Roger Moore-era Bond film. The house drinks are all named after James Bond villains, such as Blofeld, Jaws, and Galore; none named after Goldfinger or Oddjob yet, though. The booths are in the back, behind the bar, but the most popular seemed to be the tables by the windows facing Washington Street. The larger dining parties of five or six filled the tables and enjoyed the view as they ate.

The burgers are on the cheaper side of the menu and can be a nice quick meal if you happen to be working downtown and just want to stop in for a short lunch. There's also a Veggie Guadalajaran and a veggie version of the gastropub's namesake burger, the Moonraker. Like all of the burgers, the all-natural, veggie-fed and hormone-free burger comes on a bun baked fresh in-house. The Guadalajaran is the spicier end, featuring pepper jack cheese and pickled jalapenos alongside guacamole, lettuce, tomato, red onions, pickles, and ketchup. (I've heard it tastes better than it looks, though; there's no real kick to it.) I'm a sucker for anything spicy, be it mild or unsafe for human consumption. So I might just be resistant to it. Regardless, if you're not fond of spicy food don't let that turn you away. Speaking of fondness, I know some are not too big on guacamole, even with tortilla chips. I assure you, the addition of it isn't a problem with the Guadalajaran. You'll barely notice it.

Still not sold on the chips and guacamole? Don't worry — Moonrakers has other side options, ranging from the $1.50 potato chips to the $5 specialty salads. The burger I had was a $9.69 half-pound patty. (It can also be ordered as one-third-pound patty for $6.99.) It was absolutely delightful. It was served medium rare, and with such a juicy tenderness to the meat that I was reminded of the magnificent, maternal meatloaves of my childhood. It has a lovely texture and taste to it that will stay on your tongue for hours unless you wash it down with a drink or two.

If I'm waxing poetic about a burger, then I feel the rest of the menu must be something truly magical and not of this Earth.

Wild kids in the house

For two years in a row, Wild Child has been named the Best Indie Band at the Outdoor Life Expo at the South by Southwest music festival in Austin. Next week, the band will play the United States, including E. Washington St. Iowa City head Teen Daad will open the show. It ticketes are $10 in advance and $10 at the door.

Wild Child is an indie-folk band from Austin, and has been on the scene since 2007. The lead vocalist, Kelsey Wilson and Annye Chavis, met while in Chicago. The two quickly bonded because they were both in post-breakup situations and began writing music together. Upon returning to town, Wild Child became close friends with Derek Bristowe (drums), Smoke Wells (vocals), Evan Mages (keyboard), James Bruner (bass), and Chris D’Amore (bass).

“Well, the first album was created after the first major breakup of our lives, and the second after dating our significant others for six to seven years. Wilson said: ‘So that first album is really a soundtrack to our first breakup, it’s a breakthrough album; it’s really honest, and the things you do when discovering that everyone is more real than you thought. We need what we want and what we need is a heartbreak.’

Wild Child’s songs are especially powerful, because they have a lot of soul exclusively — artists such as Roalson Franklin, Stevie Wonder, etc. Wilson said: ‘They’re really coming together and sticking, and you can just tell they’re on.’ But when they’re on, they’re on, and it is amazing. I love their talent of watching a show.’

This weekend, Keturi will also watch Teen Daad as they open the concert. Teen Daad has three members, Julian Eifert (vocals, guitar), Noel Nissen (drums), and Rylan Keturi said. Wild Child’s album can be downloaded for free online at www.dropbox.com/s/9ghvrlfkrlmkmfg/WILD.Child.THE.RUNAROUND.MP3.
