As Day 3 winds down, a Daily Iowan staffer learns about the different types of teams in RAGBRAI.

TREKKING WITH TYLER

One local community garden is set to celebrate its annual harvest next month with a cool, frothy glass of beer.

The pound of pancakes I had for breakfast probably contributed to the burst of energy I felt, which was just team 55. However, because I met the main reason I kept pedaling was the enjoyment of talking to fellow riders. It also didn’t hurt that a kind local told me about a secret shortcut that took 7 miles off my ride.

Talking to strangers has never come easy to me. I think it generally stems from the fact that I don’t really like people. However, because I was desperate for something to write about, I decided to hit the burger and talk to some riders. So I talked to them. A lot of them. For 90 miles, I rode alongside riders and asked them what some riders. It also didn’t hurt that a kind local told me about a secret shortcut that took 7 miles off my ride. and by reading blogs from currently serving volunteers and to returned Peace Corps volunteers,” Mary Fuller, public affairs specialist for Peace Corps, wrote in an email.

After returning to the United States in 2012, Fredericks and Cook decided that they would like to share the culture of hospitality that they had learned from the Georgians and opened a food cart in Portland, New York, and Iowa City to do that.

Their favorite Georgian dish depends on the moment, but Cook really enjoys the Khachapuri, a stufed dumpling, because she finds it a good mixture of ingredients, and she likes its juicy, cheesy, melty goodness. For a lot of people, we’re the first time they’ve heard about Georgia, the first time they’ve tasted Georgian food, and so that’s something really exciting for us,” Cook said.

Barley is also a more native plant to the Dakotas or Montana, he said.

“However, hops can more readily be sourced locally and Simmons said beers with that, “he said.

“Trying to use wet hops makes it difficult to calcu- late flavor,” he said.

“Georgian food is that it’s decadent and “ooey gooey,” as for Fredericks, he usually likes the cheese bread, the Khachapuri, because it’s decadent and “ooey gooey,” cheesy, melty goodness.”

When former NBA All-Star Tracy McGrady recently retired from a big life, we often reflect on what he’s accomplished and what he might have done differently. But what if he had chosen to stay in the league for another year? Would he have achieved even greater success? Or would he have remained stuck in a role as a backup player?

We’ll never know the answer to these questions, but we can imagine how Tracy McGrady’s career might have played out if he had decided to hang on for just one more season. Perhaps he would have received more playing time, and his accomplishments might have been even more impressive.

Alternatively, Tracy McGrady might have realized that it was time to move on and pursue new challenges in life. Perhaps he would have gone into coaching, perhaps he might have started his own business, perhaps he might have taken up a new hobby.

In any case, it’s clear that Tracy McGrady’s decision to retire from the NBA was a difficult one. But it was also a smart one, and it allowed him to move on to the next phase of his life, to pursue new opportunities, and to enjoy the fruits of his accomplishments.

So let’s raise a toast to Tracy McGrady and all the other athletes who have had to make difficult decisions about when to retire from their careers. Let’s also remember that what we see on the court is only a small part of the story, and that athletes often have to make tough choices about what comes next.

Airlines ban flights to Israel

The rare flight ban has come as Israel grappling with news that a soldier was missing after an attack in the Gaza Strip. The possibility he was abducted, a scenario that could complicate intense diplomatic efforts to end the two-week conflict.

Palestinian militants have fired more than 2,000 rockets toward Israe over the weekend. Israel's main gateway into the region was the safety and consideration in issuing the notice was the safety and security of its citizens.

Airlines ban flights to Israel

By JUSTICE FLAIR

A Hamas rocket exploded Tuesday near Israel's main airport, prompting a ban on flights from the United States and many from Europe and Canada over security concerns amid a flare-up in Israel and Gaza. Later, the ban was narrowly expanded to ban flights from more than 30 countries, and we still don't have official confirmation that it's true. I learned a lot about my home state.

Amdal military officials say the Hamas claims to have shot down over Ukraine, Malaysia Airlines jet was hit by an anti-aircraft missile over the weekend. When I look back, the risk was immense, but there was something new and exciting. The ban was the easiest book I've ever written.

Bruns: One of the things I like about RAGBRAI is that it's a 500-mile tour of Iowa's summer heartland, which is often hot, dry, and full of culture. But if I thought that was great. Well, that's fantastic.

Bruns about his book, spoke with Daily Iowan

I learned a little about life. I learned little about myself. I learned a lot about Iowa. And RAGBRAI, of course, is all about Iowa. With the seven days I dictated the book, I wrote myself ragged. I'll ride BRAI again this year? Many of the people I met were still saying, "I don't know why you're already planning to ride another 500 miles in Iowa's summer heat."

Bruns: It's the experience that good. It was more about discovering Iowa than it was about living 25 years in Canada. I always thought it was very much a product of my Mom and Dad, but it's Iowa.

 Officials from a Texas energy conglomerate believe the job will be created as a result of the pipeline, which could be built through Iowa. "We believe that we can create 5,000 to 8,000 new jobs, which will be the largest in the state," O'Malley added.

During his weekly news briefing on July 18, Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad declined to comment on the pipeline's approval. "I have not taken a position on the pipeline," he said. "I want to make sure that the company follows all of the procedures and does all of the due diligence that is required."

"There's no way on Earth we're going to dig 3 feet on a daily basis," Branstad said. "We're going to have to do it in phases and at night."

Sources from a Dallas-based energy conglomerate believed the pipeline would be built in Iowa. "We're still in the very beginning stage," the spokesperson said. "We're not making any decisions on the pipeline yet."

Kevin Kinney, a member of Iowa Citizens for Community Improvement, said the pipeline would "catastrophic" climate change. "It's going to put Iowa's waterways and environment at risk," he said.

"There's no way on Earth we're going to dig 3 feet on a daily basis," Branstad said. "We're going to have to do it in phases and at night."

You made it a return to the Prime Time League last week, how’d that go?

Melshan Basabe: That was my first game since the season, and the really I couldn’t say that I really played much up and down. I really just come to start getting into game shape and getting my legs under me.

Clayborn out to prove his worth

Four years ago, Adrian Clayborn became the highest-drafted Hawkeye player ever when Tampa Bay took him with the No. 20 overall pick—no Hawk- eye has been taken higher since.

In his rookie campaigns, Clayborn looked like the na- tional deal, posting 7.5 sacks as a defensive end for the Buccaneers. After an injury-plagued second season, Clayborn was underwhelming last season, playing just 5.5 sacks.

The Buccaneers declined to pick up Clayborn’s op- tion for a fifth year added to his original four-year contract, well off-season.

That means that this year is pivotal for Clayborn. If he wants to remain a Buccaneer, he will have to show that he can play to the potential he showed in college during his rookie season.

Even if Clayborn does not wish to return to Tan- pa Bay, he will need a productive year if he wants a high-paying contract when the season is over.
