University theater work progresses

By AARON WALKER

The University of Iowa Theater Building has seen much progress since its construction began, but summer flooding caused unexpected setbacks.

Additions to the building include a newly designed patio, remodeled basement, and a third floor to house air-conditioning and electrical units. Although parts of the building are still under construction, many classes have moved back into the semi-operational building.

“The systems are done,” MacVey said. “The basement is not quite done yet, and we expect it will be October or so before it is done,” said Alan MacVey, the head of the Theater Department. “It was always either too hot or too cold, and it was always damp, but all that stuff will be fixed,” he said. “Although nothing formal was decided, there was overall council support for moving forward to stop the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well. The three options discussed were to not regulate e-cigarettes, ban the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well. The three options discussed were to not regulate e-cigarettes, ban the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well.

The Iowa City Council decided Tuesday it would try to quickly move forward on a resolution regarding electronic cigarettes and other vapor-producing devices.

Although not official, there was overall council support for moving forward to stop the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well.

The University of Iowa Theater Building has seen much progress since its construction began, but summer flooding caused unexpected setbacks.

Additions to the building include a newly designed patio, remodeled basement, and a third floor to house air-conditioning and electrical units. Although parts of the building are still under construction, many classes have moved back into the semi-operational building.

“The systems are done,” MacVey said. “The basement is not quite done yet, and we expect it will be October or so before it is done,” said Alan MacVey, the head of the Theater Department. “It was always either too hot or too cold, and it was always damp, but all that stuff will be fixed,” he said. Although nothing formal was decided, there was overall council support for moving forward to stop the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well. The three options discussed were to not regulate e-cigarettes, ban the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well.

The Iowa City Council decided Tuesday it would try to quickly move forward on a resolution regarding electronic cigarettes and other vapor-producing devices.

Although not official, there was overall council support for moving forward to stop the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well.

The University of Iowa Theater Building has seen much progress since its construction began, but summer flooding caused unexpected setbacks.

Additions to the building include a newly designed patio, remodeled basement, and a third floor to house air-conditioning and electrical units. Although parts of the building are still under construction, many classes have moved back into the semi-operational building.

“The systems are done,” MacVey said. “The basement is not quite done yet, and we expect it will be October or so before it is done,” said Alan MacVey, the head of the Theater Department. “It was always either too hot or too cold, and it was always damp, but all that stuff will be fixed,” he said. Although nothing formal was decided, there was overall council support for moving forward to stop the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well. The three options discussed were to not regulate e-cigarettes, ban the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well.

The Iowa City Council decided Tuesday it would try to quickly move forward on a resolution regarding electronic cigarettes and other vapor-producing devices.

Although not official, there was overall council support for moving forward to stop the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well.

The University of Iowa Theater Building has seen much progress since its construction began, but summer flooding caused unexpected setbacks.

Additions to the building include a newly designed patio, remodeled basement, and a third floor to house air-conditioning and electrical units. Although parts of the building are still under construction, many classes have moved back into the semi-operational building.

“The systems are done,” MacVey said. “The basement is not quite done yet, and we expect it will be October or so before it is done,” said Alan MacVey, the head of the Theater Department. “It was always either too hot or too cold, and it was always damp, but all that stuff will be fixed,” he said. Although nothing formal was decided, there was overall council support for moving forward to stop the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well. The three options discussed were to not regulate e-cigarettes, ban the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well.

The Iowa City Council decided Tuesday it would try to quickly move forward on a resolution regarding electronic cigarettes and other vapor-producing devices.

Although not official, there was overall council support for moving forward to stop the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well.

The University of Iowa Theater Building has seen much progress since its construction began, but summer flooding caused unexpected setbacks.

Additions to the building include a newly designed patio, remodeled basement, and a third floor to house air-conditioning and electrical units. Although parts of the building are still under construction, many classes have moved back into the semi-operational building.

“The systems are done,” MacVey said. “The basement is not quite done yet, and we expect it will be October or so before it is done,” said Alan MacVey, the head of the Theater Department. “It was always either too hot or too cold, and it was always damp, but all that stuff will be fixed,” he said. Although nothing formal was decided, there was overall council support for moving forward to stop the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well. The three options discussed were to not regulate e-cigarettes, ban the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well.

The Iowa City Council decided Tuesday it would try to quickly move forward on a resolution regarding electronic cigarettes and other vapor-producing devices.

Although not official, there was overall council support for moving forward to stop the use on city property and potentially Iowa City restaurants as well.
Faculty mall software shift

Deleitte recommends new application system

Student desks can apply to be part of the program. Deleitte said students would need to submit an application to be included at the mall.

Deleitte said she is working with a consultant to create a new application system that will be used to select students for the program.

Deleitte said she is working with the consultant to create a new application system that will be used to select students for the program.

Faculty mall software shift

University seeks apartment demolition

The University of Iowa is seeking to demolish the apartment complex located on the corner of 14th Avenue and Pine Street.

The university said it is seeking to demolish the building to make way for a new development project.

The university said it is seeking to demolish the building to make way for a new development project.

BLOTTERS

Kirkwood Avenue Church of Christ

Looking for a church home?

Immediate openings available!

Bible Class and Worship 10:15 am

Kirkwood Avenue Church of Christ

1220 Kirkwood Avenue

Iowa City, IA 52240

(319) 335-3870

kaccc.org

University seeks apartment demolition

The University of Iowa is seeking to demolish the apartment complex located on the corner of 14th Avenue and Pine Street.

The university said it is seeking to demolish the building to make way for a new development project.

The university said it is seeking to demolish the building to make way for a new development project.

Kirkwood Avenue Church of Christ

Looking for a church home?

Immediate openings available!

Bible Class and Worship 10:15 am

Kirkwood Avenue Church of Christ

1220 Kirkwood Avenue

Iowa City, IA 52240

(319) 335-3870

kaccc.org

University seeks apartment demolition

The University of Iowa is seeking to demolish the apartment complex located on the corner of 14th Avenue and Pine Street.

The university said it is seeking to demolish the building to make way for a new development project.

The university said it is seeking to demolish the building to make way for a new development project.
For starting middle line-backer Quentin Aleton from UI's football team, the facility the first time he walked into it, UI Administration was trying to benefit the Hawkeyes in more than one way.

It is designed to be, as the new strength and conditioning facility, a place of excellence for turf for agility and speed drills as well as a nutrition bar, so it’s going to be a facility that condition coach Chris Doyle can do the training for that area.

The facility will be a big help with recruiting in the future. "It’s going to be a big plus," Aleton said. "Everybody, when they’re getting recruited, they want to see big. It’s going to be a bonus, you know, big, shiny thing. That looks pretty amazing."
Iowa farmers are clamoring for clarification in regards to a rule proposed by the Environmental Protection Agency. That rule may result in the loss of a significant portion of their farming income. The EPA insists the rule is necessary, but Iowa farmers are concerned that it will result in the loss of income and increase the costs of doing business. They are calling for a moratorium on the rule until it can be more thoroughly discussed.

Jaycees are split on whether or not to support Jaycees for Akeson. The Jaycees are a non-profit organization that raises money for various causes. The Jaycees for Akeson are raising money to support the Jaycees for Akeson Scholarship Fund. The Jaycees for Akeson Scholarship Fund is a fund that provides scholarships to students who are members of the Jaycees. The Jaycees for Akeson Scholarship Fund is a fund that provides scholarships to students who are members of the Jaycees.

The people in charge of the space race are now looking to the future. Now, the United States ranks 16th in the world in math achievement, 25th in reading, and 24th in reading (PISA). Now, NASA's budget is only $16.8 billion for this year. This accounts for less than 1 percent of the federal budget and less than 2 percent of our funding gap. This projected military budget is about $570 billion. This is more than 43 times NASA's requested budget for 2015. While the United States is the second largest country in the world and possesses much of the world's space fleet, it is not the most active in space exploration.

The space race turned 50 a week ago and we are in an era of dreaming and innovating. As we go into the future, the In-...
Officially at the American Farm Bureau, admit their interpretation of the rule is based on as broad as possible, they want to point out how it could be interpreted, in court, said Don Parish of the bureau.

Kerrie Ruhle, the Iowa Farm Bureau’s national policy advisor, said the bureau is encouraging Iowa’s representatives to oppose legislation to prevent the EPA from implementing the rule. Both bills have been introduced in both the U.S. Senate and House. Sen. Chuck Grassley, R-Iowa, has cosponsored the Senate bill, and Rep. Tom Latham, R-Iowa, has signed on to the House bill. “The proposed rule is way beyond the scope of the law and is full of loopholes and unclear language that leave agriculture important high water mark” and something says that is a water of the United States.’”

Warren County. “When you read this rule, it says that this rule will hold the line and we are going to work to make sure nothing changes for farmers,” Parish said. “I understand here the proposed rule is very confusing for many different folks,” he said in a statement. “The EPA has continued to say that this rule is not intended to affect farmers. It is the proposed water rule. The controversy over the proposed rule has continued to say that this rule is not intended to affect farmers. It is the proposed water rule for public comment intended to define what is a considered a water body under the jurisdiction. The rule includes the navigable waters of the country that have traditionally been covered under the Clean Water Act as well as all tributaries, waters subject to those waters, and other waters with what the EPA vaguely calls a significant nexus to a navigable water. The main controversy for farmers is the definition of what is or isn’t a tributary. Under the proposed rule, a tributary, as defined by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, is formed on valley sides and floors where they do business.

Farm group backs Braley Farmers across Iowa waded into the mid-term elections a key agricultural group backed one of its own candidates, including Rep. Bruce Braley, D-Iowa, on Tuesday. The Iowa Farm Bureau Political Action Committee endorsed 71 state and federal candidates on the midterm ballot, the group says the committee that determines which candidates to back is a mark up as an equal balance of the nation’s farms. Despite a large number of national and congressional delegation, the group says the committee that determines which candidates to back in the midterm ballot, the group says the committee that determines which candidates to back in the midterm ballot.

Braley’s decision to run for Senate means his House seat is open. The group endorsed city’s Pat Murphy, D-Moline, in 2010. If the election follows the pattern of the endorsement, it would mean the race would have a split delegation in both houses, the same thing can happen in Washington. Another agricultural group, the Iowa Farm Bureau, has previously backed Sen. Joni Ernst, R-Iowa.

— By保税Griffiths

Perry stumps in Iowa Iowa Gov. Rick Perry has been on the campaign trail recently because he has been indicted in Texas, but he returned to Iowa this week to campaign for a U.S. Senate seat. Perry made several stops in eastern Iowa with one of the most visible campaigns in Congress, including stops in Cedar Rapids and Waterloo. The visit was Perry’s first since he announced his campaign for the Senate.

— By保税Griffiths

“I think that would be great, but we would have to talk to them about it,” he said. “We would be really happy with that. ”

— By保税Griffiths
Some people walk in the rain, others just get wet.
The buzz around Carver-Hawkeye Arena regarding Iowa's latest volleyball head coach, Bond Shymansky, has been overwhelming positive in the early months of his reign. The Iowa City native has several Quiet qualities important to a great coach. He's personable, positive and a knowledgeable teacher of the game. What Iowa fans and residents should be most excited about, however, is that he is a passionate recruiter. And now, Shymansky is focusing on Iowa's in-state talent in the cruelest heat. "We are a sport that can build success on in-state talent," he said. "It's where we've spending our spending our 80 or 90 percent of our recruiting effort right now, and we know we can build a winner on in-state kids." The Hawkeyes have struggled through a tough first season, and the only representative of the level of volleyball talent in the state was a middle-school volleyball team from Cedar Rapids, the Iowa City Press-Citizen reported. But the Hawkeyes produced the sixth-most Iowa-born players in Division-I programs. "Every year, there are at least two or three top-level Division-I recruits from Iowa," Shymansky said. "Now, we've got two for the first time in many years."

There is a surprisingly low number of Iowa natives on the roster, particularly in the frontcourt. Only two of the josters and setters are from Iowa, and only two of the backcourt players are from Iowa. "It's really weird, you know, just like that, would be included two of the top players in Iowa," Shymansky said. "There were three seniors named to the All-State first team, All-State second team, and All-State honorable mention in Iowa State, and Danielle Cabal of Bettendorf and Kaylee Smith of Indians new play volleyball for the Hawkeyes. "It really only takes a few from the in-state We don't need five; we only need two or three," Shymansky said. "And one, you can get, hard-work- ing Iowa people into our pro- gram, who are humble, and earnest, and, well, we'd find it easy to win. That opportu- nity is there for us, we just have to make sure of the best players." Smith and Cabal certainly seem to fit the bill of the best the state had to offer. Both had impressive high- school careers, Smith capped by All-State honors. Now, they are members of a nationally ac- knowledged team, and that will be no- tionable contributors in their final Hawkeye season.

"There's a refreshing new feeling of Iowa volleyball being handled in, and it seems that will come with plenty of familiar faces for fans around the state. "We're great being here, knowing how much it means to me and my fam- ily," Smith said. "We're Hawkeye fans. Ac- tually being here is really surreal. Every time I walk into Carver, I still get the butterflies."
A brutal schedule, so it was a good day. It’s just growing pains. There were just a few reasons for the low expectations. For the second-straight week, a Big Ten opponent will return home to play Iowa, an experienced and well-coached team, especially in the best in the midfield and the other forward position to draw some attention from foes.

The other forward position is better filled, with both of Iowa’s starting forwards having been effective (goal, assists) so far this season. This is not to say that goal is a problem, however, for the team. Both forwards have scored two goals each in the first two games, and that’s a good sign of things to come.

With that said, it’s important to remember that this is a new team, and it will take time for the players to gel. However, with the experience and talent on this roster, there’s no reason to think that this team can’t be competitive in the Big Ten conference.

In conclusion, while there are certainly some challenges to overcome, this Iowa soccer team has the talent and potential to be successful. It’s just a matter of putting it all together on the field and working hard to prepare for each game.

Iowa football

A bad start for him.
SPORTS

UPCOMING HAWKEYE SCHEDULE

- Foodball at Nebraska, 7 p.m.
- Volleyball at Wisconsin, 7:30 p.m.
- Men’s Tennis vs. Ball State, 1 p.m.
- Women’s Tennis vs. Youngstown State, 1 p.m.
- Women’s Soccer vs. Morehead State, 3 p.m.

IOWA NOTEBOOK

Bo Bower gets a bounce

Bo Bower had a ton of friends and family show their support on Twitter for him during the Hawks’ 31-23 win over Northern Iowa.

By COBY GOODWIN

INJURIES PLAUGE BADGERS’ OFFENSE

By JACOB SHEPHERD

No. 18 Wisconsin opened its season with a loss this past week, but it did so with their two top offensive players watching from the sideline.

Many people who viewed Wisconsin’s matchup with LSU asked the same question: Why isn’t Melvin Gordon in the game? The Hawks leave their comfort zone, while friends and family from back home tweeted different kind of messages.

BIG TEN NOTEBOOK

By JORDAN HANSEN

Iowa forward Cloe Lacasse (5) dribbles past Fresno State midfielder Peyton Cline at the Iowa Soccer Complex on Aug. 29. Iowa defeated Fresno State, 3-0. (The Daily Iowan/Photos by Margaret Kispert)

Clare dailyiowansports.com for all the latest Iowa sports coverage you need throughout the day.

Hawks slip in soccer rankings

The Hawkeyes women’s soccer team dropped one spot to No. 3 on the NCAA Central Regional poll despite putting up a impressive showing in their 3-2 win over Northern Iowa.

Bo Bower

Bo Bower played pretty well during the Aug. 30 game. He had just two tackles but picked up a pass in the third quarter and recorded a big-time sack when Northern Iowa was in the red zone early in the fourth quarter.

Bo Bower played pretty well during the Aug. 30 game. He had just two tackles but picked up a pass in the third quarter and recorded a big-time sack when Northern Iowa was in the red zone early in the fourth quarter.

Bo Bower, the Hawks’ co-starter at outside linebacker after Marv Cook, had just two tackles and a big-time sack when Northern Iowa was in the red zone early in the fourth quarter.

Bo Bower earned a redshirt freshman, Bower earned a double-team (Northwestern), seemingly everybody from his hometown in the Red River 10-11 (the Daily Iowan) and the Hawks’ 3-2 win over Northern Iowa.

For example, let’s say there is a double-team on me, so it opens things up for someone else in her spot.”

Iowa soccer seeks help for Lacasse

By JORDAN HANSEN

Iowa forward Cloe Lacasse dribbles past Fresno State midfielder Peyton Cline at the Iowa Soccer Complex on Aug. 29. Iowa defeated Fresno State, 3-0. (The Daily Iowan/Photos by Margaret Kispert)