IOWA VS. MINNESOTA | SATURDAY, OCT. 21 | 2:33 P.M. |

Five things to watch

Matt McGowan

Pregame Editor

matthew-r-mcgowan@uiowa.edu

1. Performance of tight ends

Now with Erick All out for the season, Iowa is left with a tight end room that has caught a grand total of eight passes in the Black and Gold over the past two seasons. Five of these receptions have come from senior Steven Stillianos, who is now listed as the starter on the depth chart. A transfer from Lafayette, Stillianos earned All-Patriot League first-team honors in the spring and fall of 2021. Stillianos said he's valued his time in Iowa City, especially learning from Hawkeye TE coach Abdul Hodge, who has taught him to be an all-around tight end, one who is both confident to run routes and unafraid to block in the run game.

Also, Hawkeye head coach Kirk Ferentz mentioned fullback Hayden Large as another possible option at tight end, as Large played the position for three years while at Dordt University in Sioux Center, Iowa. During that time, Large recorded 62 catches for 950 yards and 12 touchdowns. Don't be surprised to see a mixed bag of tight ends out there, as probably three to four will see action as the Hawkeyes run multi-TE sets a lot. I'm not saying these replacements must put up numbers, but they need to at least catch passes when needed, especially on third down.

2. Run game

Time and time again, the Iowa ground game has proven it's capable of carrying the offense, but oftentimes this production comes through one big play, such as Kaleb Johnson's 67-yard score against Purdue and Leshon Williams' 82-yard TD run last week against Wisconsin. Eliminating Williams' highlight, the Hawkeyes ran for just 2.5 yards per carry. Nevertheless, Minnesota is rather average against the run, ranking 65th in the FBS in terms of rushing defense, allowing 137 rushing yards per game to its opponents.

Completing passes at a 34 percent clip this season, Hill's accuracy at QB is still a concern, so Iowa's offense on Saturday will feature plenty of handoffs. How consistent the run game can be will be answered on Saturday, and the Hawkeyes will receive a much-needed boost with the likely return of running back Jaziun Patterson, whom Ferentz hinted could be back on the field this weekend against the Gophers.

3. Deacon Hill turnovers

I know I've been saying this for the last couple weeks now, but Hill can throw for as few yards as he wants, as long as he doesn't turn the ball over. The Wisconsin transfer almost threw two picks against his former team last week, the second of which would've put the Badgers within field goal range. The last thing the Hawkeyes need to do is keep their defense on the field longer than it has to be, as the unit will be taking a physical beating as a result of Minnesota's tendency to keep the ball on the ground. Hill will throw the ball when he needs to, but he has to keep possession, or else Iowa will be in trouble, and the idea of backup Joe Labas under center will be a stronger possibility.

4. Defensive line impact

Minnesota has been known for having size up front on its offensive line, and its 2023 squad is no different. The smallest person on the Gophers' front five is center Nathan Boe, who stands at six-foot-five and 300 pounds. Stationed around Boe are six-foot-five and six-foot-seven guards Tyler Cooper and Martes Lewis, while on the edges at the tackle spots are 2022 All-Big Ten honorable mentions Quinn Carroll and Aireontae Ersery.

Breaking through such a "wall" of an offensive line will be tough on Iowa's rather undersized defensive linemen, such as Joe Evans, who is listed at six-foot-two and 252 pounds. Evans said Tuesday that proper fundamentals and staying low in his pass rush will prevent him from being "thrown out of the club" by his opponents. With the health of six-foot-five defensive tackle Yahya Black in question, the Hawkeyes' QB pressure needs to be consistent if they want to be as disruptive as they were in the past two contests.

5. Limiting penalties

Here's a fun fact: Minnesota and Iowa rank fourth and sixth in the nation, respectively, in fewest number of penalties on the season. Why that is could have to do with a lack of pass attempts, as pass blocking often results in more holding calls, but I'm not certain. What the stat does tell me is both squads are disciplined, and will have to continue to be so on Saturday.

Against Wisconsin, Iowa had an unusual amount of penalties, registering five flags resulting in a total of 55 yards lost. Those five nearly make up a quarter of the Hawkeyes' total of 22 for the season. While it may sound obvious, penalty yards will be a huge difference-maker in this game, especially with the lack of offensive power.

Logan Lee's purpose extends beyond football

The defensive tackle is not only competitive, but committed to guiding others.

Kenna Roering
Sports Editor
mckenna-roering@uiowa.edu

Lee

Logan Lee hasn't had a sip of soda since Feb. 3, 2012.

After reading Tim Tebow's book, "Through My Eyes," Lee, 11 years old at the time, couldn't help but make a $100 bet with his father, Mitch, that he could stop drinking soda for a year.

A year-long bet turned into over a decade of dedication and a deal that the Orion, Illinois, native plans on sticking to for the rest of his life.

"I just remember as a kid being the most competitive in every area of life, almost a little excessive," Lee said. "Whether that be in a board game, whether that be in a card game, whether that be playing soccer or playing football, I was just always trying to compete in every aspect."

Lee's competitive nature is just one reason why the fifth-year defensive tackle has started the last 34 games for the Hawkeyes.

Treating this season like his last, the team captain says he is focused on having fun and making a positive impact on every single one of his teammates, whether that's by helping a rookie improve their game, being a good friend, or sharing his Christian faith. The Hawkeyes' Kirk Ferentz said having Lee's leadership makes the longest-tenured head coach in the FBS feel like he's "coaching a 40-year-old man."

As the only married player on the Hawkeyes, Lee's priorities stretch much further than winning on the field.

"There's so much more to this than just football ... So being available, being able to help the younger guys, help the older guys just navigate life, it's a great opportunity as an elder," Lee joked.

Path to Iowa

Lee said he didn't watch much college football when he was a boy but always had a dream of playing in the NFL.

When Lee started playing flag football in elementary school, he showed natural talent and a desire to win.

Mitch recalled his son challenging an opposing team member to a race after one of Lee's games in third or fourth grade. The father jokingly told his son that a kid on the other team looked faster than him — and Lee wasn't going home without testing it out.

"I'm talking to the dads and look over, and Logan's walking over towards that huddle. Next thing you know, him and the blonde kid were lined up because they were gonna race," Mitch said. "It was funny to see him walk over there. He wasn't mean, it was just like, 'Hey, my dad says you're faster than me. What do you wanna do?'"

Lee won the race, but Mitch was quick to admit that someone walked in front of his son's opponent and "blocked him for a second."

Lee said he started taking football more seriously in eighth grade when he realized he needed to play in college to reach the NFL.

Lee played tight end and defensive end on Orion High School's varsity team for four years. He holds the career sack record at the school with 35 and earned unanimous all-conference honors on offense and defense for three straight seasons.

As a sophomore, Lee totaled 11 receptions for 120 yards and three touchdowns, along with 28 tackles, 10 tackles for loss, and eight sacks. The two-way player also excelled in wrestling. He won a state title at 220 pounds as a sophomore in February 2017. The next month, Lee went on an unofficial visit to Iowa, and newly-appointed offensive coordinator Brian Ferentz offered him his first scholarship.

Kirk Ferentz said he and the coaching staff knew about Lee and his family early on and liked "everything about him" in the recruiting process.

"So that was just shocking because usually you build up with non-Power Five teams," Lee said of getting offered by Iowa. "You build those up, and then the Power Five teams start coming in, but that was my first actual college recognition."

Michigan offered Lee three days later, and over the course of the next year, he received interest from Notre Dame, Ole Miss, Michigan State, Northwestern, Minnesota, and Wisconsin.

Lee's last visit before choosing Iowa was Wisconsin, which offered him a scholarship on May 24, 2017. Mitch said the visit to Madison went great, but he and his wife were "pretty confident" that their son would end up choosing the Hawkeyes.

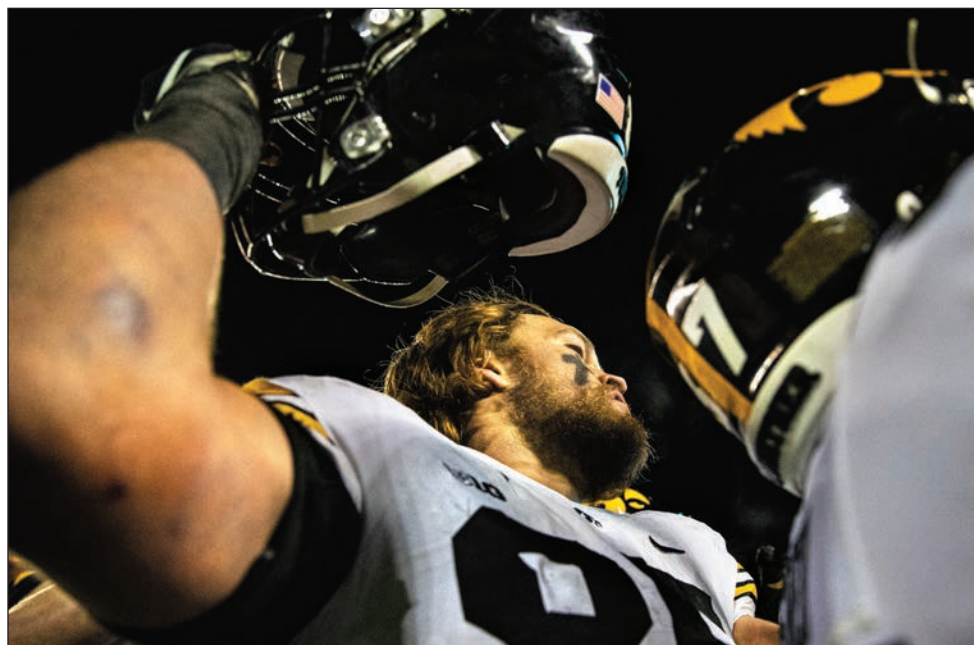

Lee planned to go on another visit to Iowa on Saturday, June 24, 2017 — his third visit to Iowa City that month. The Friday before, Lee's mind was made up.

He told his family he was going to verbally commit to the Hawkeyes during the visit.

Iowa defensive lineman Logan Lee lifts his helmet while interacting with Iowa fans during a football game between Iowa and Minnesota at Huntington Bank Stadium in Minneapolis on Saturday, Nov. 19, 2022. The Hawkeyes defeated the Gophers, 13-10.

Lee's sister, Ashton, was home at the time from Mankato State University, where she played volleyball. So, the whole family sat down at the dining table and talked about Lee's decision to commit to the Hawkeyes, and everyone was in full support.

Lee and his parents drove the hour and 15 minutes to Iowa City and walked into Kirk Ferentz's office. The athlete was rubbing his sweaty hands nervously on his legs, causing the Iowa coach to ask if everything was OK.

"I'm gonna be a Hawkeye," Lee responded.

Mitch said Ferentz was surprised and asked him and his wife, Susan, if they were OK with their son committing — the answer was an immediate yes.

Not only did Mitch respect the physicality that Ferentz instilled in his players, but he was also impressed by the coach as a person.

"He is a class act. He always starts with Ash, and to this day, he knows my daughter's name," Mitch said. "He will say, 'How's Ashton doing?' It's like, oh my gosh, how do you remember that?"

A three-star recruit coming out of high school, Lee felt Iowa was the best place for him to develop as a player and person.

"I really respected the developmental staff and the way they took no-star recruits and small-town kids and developed them into starter-quality individuals," Lee said.

Lee had great success in his final two years at prep school, combining for 54 receptions, 937 yards, and 18 touchdowns, as well as 120 total tackles, 42.5 tackles for loss, and 27 sacks over that span.

He won another state wrestling title at 285 pounds as a senior, becoming just the third two-time state champion in school history.

Family-oriented

Beside Lee through his high school career was his girlfriend and now-wife, Tori.

Tori lived in Geneseo, Illinois, about 30 min-

"I finally muster up the courage to say, 'Did you see the girl eat it yesterday in the hurdles?'" Lee recalled. "[Tori] stands up, looks at me, and says, 'That was me,' and then walks away. And I didn't see her again for another two years."

The pair reconnected during their freshman year and started dating as sophomores. Tori said she didn't even know Lee was the same guy from seventh grade until he brought it up three years into the relationship.

Since Lee lived in a different town, Tori's mother asked around to see if anyone had heard of the guy her daughter wanted to hang out with. The only response she got was when she was checking out at Walmart, and a random person butted in and said, "Oh my gosh, the Lees are such a good family. Logan is such a good guy."

Tori's mother questioned her initial good impression of Lee when he came to pick up Tori for the first time in a topless Jeep without doors.

"She was like, 'You did not tell me it was a Jeep,'" Tori said of her mother's reaction. "And then my mom actually sent the picture to my dad because he wasn't home at the time of us driving away, and I will forever keep the screenshot of what he sent back."

Mitch said he warned his son about picking Tori up in the Jeep for the first date, but Lee's only other option was a van, so it was an easy choice for the 16-year-old.

"They're going on the interstate at like 60 miles an hour, and they're passing semis, and they can't talk because there's so much wind," Mitch said. "So the first stage didn't go so well. They've done pretty well since."

Tori attended the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater to run track, while Lee started his college football journey in Iowa City. The couple said being three hours away from each other was difficult, but it helped them develop a deeper appreciation for spending time together.

Lee was hurt for much of his redshirt season in 2019, and a shoulder injury kept him out of spring practices in 2021.

Tori knew how to comfort Lee through his injuries from Lee's hometown, when the pair met in seventh grade at a state track meet through mutual friends. Lee instantly thought Tori was cute, but it took some time before he mustered up the courage to talk to her.

"I'm like, 'Come on, say something, Logan,'" Lee said. "But we're in seventh grade, so nobody's saying a word. We're just walking in silence."

injuries because she tore both her ACLs in high school and had several major surgeries. Along with track, she played volleyball, soccer, and basketball but spent 22 months of her high school career in physical therapy.

him through it all, I think was my biggest thing. And just like checking in on him mentally because I feel like a lot of guys don't talk about their feelings in that aspect."

Lee asked Tori to marry him on Dec. 30, 2021, during Iowa's Citrus Bowl trip to Orlando. Lee bought the ring just a day before leaving and proposed at Universal Studios with his teammates watching from afar.

On July 3, 2022, the couple got married at a small chapel in Tori's hometown with just family in attendance. The reception was held at Lee's parents' house.

For their one-year anniversary, Tori and Lee did vow renewals in Punta Cana in the Dominican Republic. Tori said about 120 people attended, including some of Lee's Iowa teammates — linebackers Jack Campbell and Kyler Fisher, tight ends Sam LaPorta and Jackson Frericks, and defensive back Sebastian Castro. Campbell was Lee's best man in the wedding.

"It was a party all week," Tori said of the trip. "It was so much fun but very exhausting."

Tori moved in with Lee and his four roommates — Fisher, Campbell, LaPorta, and Frericks — ahead of the 2022 season. At the time, Tori was a student-teacher in North Liberty, so she had an opposite schedule from the players, who had the middle of the day off.

Tori said she loved seeing how Lee and his teammates interacted and joked with one another. She also appreciated how they all treated her like family.

"I learned my biggest pet peeve is when people put their dirty dishes in the sink when the dishwasher is empty," Tori said of living with the five athletes. "But overall, it was super fun."

Lee said some of his favorite memories with his roommates came during the COVID-19 pandemic, when Iowa's strength and conditioning staff dropped off equipment so the group could work out from home.

"We loved our garage workouts together," Lee said. "It was just so much fun because you had to improvise with a lot of the exercises they were having us do. So we loved bonding through that."

Tori says she fell in love with the North Liberty community while student teaching, so she and Lee moved there over the summer and now live about 20 minutes from the football facility. Lee may be farther from Kinnick Stadium, but he still cannot escape the elder title.

"He goes to bed at 9:15 or tries to," Tori said. "I call him 'old man' at home too, because if we're not in bed by 9:15, he turns into a crab and stresses out about sleep."

Faith-driven

Something that's special to Lee and his wife is their Christian faith. Mitch said his son has been a firm believer in his faith since he was young and teaches him new things all the time, like how to read and interpret scripture.

The defensive end went on missionary trips to Detroit in eighth grade and Houston in his junior year of high school.

"Football is secondary to what his faith is right now, in my opinion, and that's not a gimmick," Mitch said.

Since Lee arrived in Iowa City, he has been involved with Athletes in Action (AIA), a college athlete ministry that seeks Christian followers in every sport at the university. He was on the introductory leadership staff as a first-year and has led the group since. Lee said he is thankful for the people in his life that he wouldn't have met without AIA.

Some of his favorite memories with the group have come from the ministry's annual Ultimate Training Camp and his two mission trips to Ecuador.

Lee said that any college athlete can attend the Ultimate Training Camp.

"It's really just trying to break you down physically, mentally, and spiritually so that you have nothing else to rely on other than the strength that you have in Christ," Lee said of the camp's purpose.

During AIA's trips to Ecuador over spring break in 2022 and 2023, Lee and other Hawkeye athletes passed out water filters and shared the gospel with those in need. AIA partnered with Filter of Hope, a 501(c)(3) nonprofit organization dedicated to providing clean drinking water to families in poverty.

Lee said he tries to encourage anyone who will listen to grow in their faith. Tori said she's loved watching Lee's spirituality grow in their relationship and added that his "love for Jesus" is one of her favorite things about him.

"I don't think he knows yet just how big of an impact he's had on the football team and a lot of people around him," Tori said.

Lee credits his faith for the success he's experienced in his college career. So far this season, the defensive end has amassed 30 total tackles, 3.5 tackles for loss, two pass deflections, and two sacks, including a career-best 10-tackle game in Iowa's 20-14 win over Purdue.

Lee said early on in his career he struggled because he tried too hard to be perfect. Now, he's not focused as much on filling the stat sheet but instead cares about having fun and learning from his mistakes.

"You'd see him getting better with each game out there because he's more comfortable and more instinctive," Kirk Ferentz said. "Now, he's playing really well for us and is a great leader on top of it."

MINNESOTA +3.5

I'm not sure how many more games Iowa can win when it throws for 37 yards. That'll make Iowa incredibly one-dimensional on offense, which is bad news against a Minnesota defense that comes in at 49th in Defensive Line Yards. If the Gophers commit to stopping the run, Iowa will be in trouble.

UNDER 32.5

Both of these teams rank inside the top 25 nationally in rush rate, as Minnesota runs the ball on 63.9% of plays while Iowa takes to the ground 59.5% of the time. Add in the fact that both teams are in the bottom third nationally in Finishing Drives on the offensive side, and I'll take yet another under.

IOWA -3.5

I know this sounds like the perfect trap game for Iowa, but I believe the Hawkeyes can weather the storm once more at home. Even though Minnesota might be returning starting running back Darius Taylor from injury, it's not like the Hawkeyes haven't contained a star in the backfield before.

UNDER 32.5

I will admit, I got a little tempted when I saw this total, but nevertheless, I must stay strong. Last year's matchup yielded just 23 total points, and I doubt this one will be much better. Both squads prefer to run the ball, meaning that a lot of clock will bleed away in what's sure to be an ugly game.

One on One: T.J. Hall

The cornerback talked favorite meals, fruit snacks, and basketball with The Daily Iowan Sports Editor Kenna Roering.

#2 T.J. Hall

Sophomore Cornerback
6-foot-1
Fresno, CA

Kenna Roering

Sports Editor
mckenna-roering@uiowa.edu

The Daily Iowan: So you're from California; what do you miss most about California, and what was your favorite thing to do back home?

T.J. Hall: The thing I probably miss most is the weather in the wintertime. It gets a little cold here, and back in California, it's warmer in the wintertime, and my favorite thing is probably going to the beach or just spending time with family and friends.

What's your 'death-row meal' if you had to eat one thing before you go?

I think I'm gonna go with this place in Fresno, California, and it's called Country Fair Cafe. I get the No. 2 every time, which is two tacos, beans, rice, and two enchiladas. I'd probably go with that.

So what do you like to do in your free time?

If I'm not hanging with friends or family, I like to play a little bit of Madden.

Are you any good?

I'm pretty good. I think I'm one of the best on the team.

Who do you think is one of the worst on the team?

Worst on the team? Probably [redshirt freshman defensive end] Brian Allen.

So is Madden like your main video game, or do you play any others?

I'll play UFC Fight Night and FIFA. I'd say FIFA is probably my favorite other than Madden.

What's your favorite sport to watch besides football?

I'd have to say basketball—I'm a big Lakers fan.

Have you always been a fan of LeBron James?

I would say so. I've always watched him, and he's always been one of the best, so you always like to watch the best play.

What three items would you take with you if you were on a deserted island?

I'd probably take my phone, water, and probably some fruit snacks.

What are your favorite fruit snacks?

I'd say there are two. One of them is the Welch's, and the other is the Great-Value Walmart Fruit Snacks. Those are the smiley-face ones. Those gotta be the top two.

Do you have a favorite highlight play in your football career?

My favorite play as of right now would probably be back in high school when I got my first touchdown, which was a 100-yard pick-six. So that is probably one of my favorite highlights, and hopefully I can get one of those in the coming years.

Do you have a go-to celebration, or are you not really one of those guys?

I don't have a go-to celebration right now. I kinda like to celebrate, but it all depends on the moment.

The unique tale of the Floyd of Rosedale Trophy

One pig represents over a century of cross-state tensions between Iowa and Minnesota.

Colin Votzmeyer

Assistant Sports Editor
colin-votzmeyer@uiowa.edu

The Iowa and Minnesota football teams duke it out each year for the opportunity to take home the Floyd of Rosedale Trophy. But few know the story behind one of college football's most iconic rivalry hardware.

The Hawkeyes and Golden Gophers first met on Nov. 2, 1891, with Minnesota capturing a 42-4 victory. And although Minnesota leads the all-time series with 67 wins to Iowa's 47 — including a win streak of 12 from 1891 to 1916 and 75-0 victory in 1903 — Iowa leads the trophy series with 44 of those wins to Minnesota's 42.

The trophy series began with the 1934 matchup between Minnesota and Iowa at Iowa Stadium in Iowa City. In that contest, the Golden Gopher defense targeted a barrage of rough hits at Iowa halfback Ozzie Simmons — one of the era's few Black football players — forcing Simmons to leave the game injured a handful of times.

Minnesota won the contest, 48-12, setting the scene for a hot rematch in 1935 in a return to Iowa Stadium.

Before the matchup, according to Gopher Sports, Iowa Gov. Clyde L. Herring said even if the officials ignored dirty plays on Simmons this time around, the Iowa crowd would not.

In response, Minnesota Attorney General Harry H. Peterson was outraged, and Minnesota football coach Bernie Bierman threatened to cut athletic relations with Iowa.

"Your remark that the crowd at the Iowa-Minnesota game will not stand for any rough tactics is calculated to incite a riot," Peterson said, according to Minnesota Public Radio. "It is a breach of your duty as governor and evidences an unsportsmanlike, cowardly, and contemptible frame of mind."

But Minnesota Gov. Floyd B. Olson sent a telegram to Herring the morning of the game in an attempt to cool matters — a telegram that changed the rivalry forever.

"Minnesota folks are excited over your statement about Iowa crowds ... I have assured them you are law-abiding gentlemen and are only trying to get our goat," Olson's telegram said, according to Gopher Sports. "I will bet you a Minnesota prize hog against an Iowa prize hog that Minnesota wins."

Herring accepted, and the situation calmed before kickoff.

And Minnesota won the contest, 13-6, with no incident, as Golden Gopher players complimented Simmons for his play in the game, with Simmons returning the praise.

Shortly after the loss, Herring obtained an award-winning prize pig — the brother of the pig in the Will Rogers movie "State Fair" — by way of donation from Allen Loomis, owner of Rosedale Farms near Fort Dodge, Iowa.

Herring named the pig Floyd after Olson and personally walked it into the Minnesota governor's carpeted office.

And Floyd of Rosedale was thus born. Although the pig died of cholera eight months later, Olson recruited Saint Paul, Minnesota, sculptor Charles Brioschi to capture Floyd's image. The result was the Floyd of Rosedale trophy — a 98-pound bronze pig trophy that's nearly two feet long and just over a foot high. On Saturday, the Hawkeyes will look to take Floyd home for a ninth-straight year.

BIG Game Guide

Matt McGowan

WEEK EIGHT

Power Rankings

1. Michigan

The Wolverines will play against actual competition soon, right?

2. Ohio State

Marvin Harrison Jr. is him, but he also has a surprisingly long neck.

3. Penn State

Please stop playing nonconference games in October; it's embarrassing for both sides.

4. Iowa

Every sicko college football fan's dream team is now in control of its own destiny.

5. Rutgers

No one will talk about the Scarlet Knights' 20-point comeback, but I will.

6. Wisconsin

Luke Fickell is in quite the pickle after losing to the worst offense in the Power Five.

7. Maryland

That Kevin James meme didn't work.

8. Minnesota

It will work its way to the basement soon.

9. Nebraska

It's Mediocre Central in Lincoln.

10. Illinois

Way to represent my home state and get that W. Governor J.B. Pritzker, pop the champagne.

11. Purdue

Get that student a helmet, shoulder pads, and even an NIL deal. Forty yards are no joke.

12. Northwestern

Apparently there's a new stadium coming to Evanston? Good riddance, Ryan Field.

13. Michigan State

Who knows how to do the Heimlich maneuver on a Spartan?

14. Indiana

Little known fact: the Hoosiers led by a touchdown after 15 minutes against the Wolverines.

PENN STATE @ OHIO STATE

Saturday | 11 a.m. | FOX

No. 7 Penn State (6-0, 3-0)
No. 3 Ohio State (6-0, 3-0)

Ohio Stadium
Columbus, OH

Finally, a watchable game in the Big Ten. The Nittany Lions have been haunted by the Buckeyes in the past. Either way, a toxic fanbase will win and annoy everyone.

Line: Ohio State -4.5 | O/U: 46.5

RUTGERS @ INDIANA

Saturday | 11 a.m. | BIG NETWORK

Rutgers (5-2, 2-2)
Indiana (2-4, 0-3)

Memorial Stadium
Bloomington, IN

Please put some respect on Rutgers' name. Meanwhile, Indiana is a dumpster fire. My Hoosier friend Eric should throw a chair on the field to send a message.

Line: Rutgers -5 | O/U: 42.5

MINNESOTA @ IOWA

Saturday | 2:30 p.m. | NBC

Minnesota (3-3, 1-2)
Iowa (6-1, 3-1)

Kinnick Stadium
Iowa City, IA

There should be a Manning Cast for this game, as it would be hilarious to watch the QBs keel over at the copious amount of offensive ineptitude in this game.

Line: Iowa -3.5 | O/U: 32.5

WISCONSIN @ ILLINOIS

Saturday | 2:30 p.m. | FS1

Wisconsin (4-2, 2-1)
Illinois (3-4, 1-3)

Memorial Stadium
Champaign, IL

The Badgers have to fuming after being embarrassed by the Hawkeyes last weekend, not to mention being trolled with "Jump Around." They will take that anger out on good ol' Illinois.

Line: Wisconsin -2.5 | O/U: 42.5

NORTHWESTERN @ NEBRASKA

Saturday | 2:30 p.m. | BIG NETWORK

Northwestern (3-3, 1-2)
Nebraska (3-3, 1-2)

Memorial Stadium
Lincoln, NE

These teams are practically identical. The only differences are their colors and helmets. Northwestern's 'N' stands for "not good," while Nebraska's 'N' stands for "knowledge."

Line: Nebraska -12 | O/U: 43

MICHIGAN @ MICHIGAN STATE

Saturday | 2:30 p.m. | NBC

No. 2 Michigan (6-0, 4-0)
Michigan State (2-4, 0-3)

Spartan Stadium
East Lansing, MI

The Spartans will need at least two Kenneth Walkers, 12 Paul Bunyans, and perhaps one Draymond Green out on the gridiron if they want to have a chance on Saturday.

Line: Michigan -24.5 | O/U: 48

KID CAPTAIN

Kid Captain returns for 'profound moment'

12-year-old Iowa football Kid Captain Bentley Erickson spent much his life as an infant in the hospital.

Cooper Worth
Pregame Reporter
cooper-worth@uiowa.edu

For Bentley Erickson, returning to Iowa City usually isn't a good thing.

The Ericksons have been visiting Iowa City and the University of Iowa Stead Family Children's Hospital consistently for the past 12 years, as their youngest son, Bentley, received multiple life-saving surgeries from physicians at the hospital.

But now that Bentley, 12, is being recognized as the Kid Captain for the Week 8 Iowa football game against Minnesota, the Ericksons are looking forward to this trip.

"Having spent so much time at the hospital, we really established good relationships with all the staff that played a huge part in helping Bentley, so we're looking forward to catching up with them," Bentley's mother, Kris, said.

Bentley, who has spent a lot of his life receiving care at the UI Stead Family Children's Hospital, was born 31 weeks premature into his mother's pregnancy, which caused him to develop Goldenhar syndrome, a rare disorder that affects the development of the face and skull, and VACTERL association, a group of conditions that affect the vertebrae, anus, cardiac system, trachea, esophagus, renal system (kidneys), and limbs.

He was also diagnosed early on with esophageal atresia, where his upper and lower esophagus do not connect, preventing food from getting to the stomach, and tracheo-esophageal fistula, an abnormal connection between the esophagus and trachea.

While Bentley stayed in the children's hospital for four months after his birth to recover from his surgeries, the Ericksons became close with UIHC pediatric surgeon Graeme Pitcher, who would become Bentley's primary physician.

Pitcher would go on to perform the surgery to provide Bentley with a natural esophagus, a procedure Pitcher said was challenging due to Bentley's Goldenhar syndrome.

He said throughout his career, he's never had to perform a procedure quite like Bentley's.

Kris credits Pitcher for saving Bentley's life multiple times.

"[Pitcher] is our knight in shining armor ... We do think he's the best, and if anyone disagrees, we have a problem," Kris joked.

Before their Zoom interview with The Daily Iowan, Kris told Pitcher that Bentley had eaten potatoes and carrots for the first time.

"That's the first time that he ate them, and he was able to because [Pitcher] gave him a natural esophagus, and [Bentley] just did the happiest dance in the world because he accomplished that, and every inch-stone eventually will equal a milestone," she said.

Pitcher said it's been astonishing to watch Bentley progress throughout the years and said it's great to see him healthy outside of the hospital.

"Bentley has now moved from the sick kid category to the healthy kid category, and it just gives me joy when I see him," he said.

Natives of northern Iowa, the Ericksons moved to Brainerd, Minnesota, after Bentley was born. When asked if their family would root for the Gophers or the Hawkeyes, Kris gave a definitive answer.

"One hundred percent, we will be rooting for the Hawkeyes," she said. "We are the obnoxious people in our Minnesota neighborhood who have Hawkeye flags and signs outside our door."

Besides rooting for the Hawkeyes, Bentley also enjoys playing sports video games on his Xbox, spending time with his two adult siblings, Clint and Kennedy, and playing with his service dog, Maya.

Iowa head football coach Kirk Ferentz said Bentley is also a big fan of former Hawkeye tight end and current San Francisco 49er George Kittle.

Kris said the last time Bentley was in Iowa City was when the family attended Iowa football's Kids' Day at Kinnick this past August. While there, she asked Bentley if he remembered being in the hospital.

"I told him, 'Isn't it grand to be on the outside of the hospital for the first time here rather than on the inside of the hospital fighting for your life?'" Kris said. "I can't tell you how many times we have stepped on the inside [of the hospital] just trying to survive, just praying to God not to die or to just get home ... This is definitely a profound moment for Bentley."

WEST VIRGINIA The Mountaineers bounce back after a heart-crushing loss.	WEST VIRGINIA Songs about Oklahoma aren't as catchy.	WEST VIRGINIA Iowa State is a half-game out of first place in the Big 12.	WEST VIRGINIA One of these teams lost to Iowa State.
	ALABAMA Morgan Wallen, stop singing about sports teams. You'll jinx them.	ALABAMA Milton is mid.	ALABAMA Put Tyler Buchner in.	ALABAMA Tennessee has screwed me too many times this season.	ALABAMA Bama rolls the Vols.	ALABAMA Tide kinda-sorta has figured things out.	ALABAMA Somehow, 'Bama is going to find itself in the SEC Championship.
	AIR FORCE Iowa must really support the troops based on its offense.	AIR FORCE Shoutout to my brother, who is in the Air Force.	AIR FORCE I love America, but these games are brutal to watch.	AIR FORCE AMERICA, HECK YEAH!	AIR FORCE I bet both teams finish with more passing yards than Iowa.	AIR FORCE Games featuring the academies can be entertaining.	AIR FORCE When will the Space Force have a football team?

It's your move: houses, condos, townhomes, Ready to move when you are!
