Five things to watch

Matt McGowan
Pregame Editor
matthew-r-mcgowan@uiowa.edu

1. Rutgers' run game

Monangai

Unlike its last contest, Iowa will take on one of the best rushing attacks it will see all year with the Scarlet Knights. Third-year running back Kyle Monangai leads the Big Ten with 903 rushing yards on 168 attempts, averaging more than five yards per carry. Iowa line-backer Kyler Fisher credited Monangai for his ability to get downhill. Hailing from New Jersey, Monangai dashed for a 45-yard run against top-ranked Ohio State last week, the longest play the Buckeyes' defense has let up this season.

The Scarlet Knights' second-leading rusher is quarterback Gavin Wimsatt, who's amassed seven rushing touchdowns and 45.7 yards per game on the ground. Against Indiana, Wimsatt scampered for 143 yards and three scores, including an 80-yard dash. Containing a star running back has become routine for the Hawkeye "D," but with this mobile of a quarterback under center, the Hawkeyes will have their work cut out for them on Saturday.

2. Improvement in the punting

Taylor

Just to clarify, Iowa punter Tory Taylor has been one of the Hawkeyes' most critical players this season and one of the best at this position in the FBS. Ranking eighth in the nation in yards per punt, Taylor has downed 38.3 percent of his boots inside the 20-yard line, gifting the Iowa defense great field position and making opposing offenses travel quite the distance to the end zone.

Against Northwestern, however, Taylor was somewhat off his game, averaging 39 yards per offering. It was his lowest output of the season, nearly seven yards less than his career average. In the eyes of Iowa special teams coordinator LeVar Woods, Taylor is more than capable of bouncing back. Woods said Wednesday that the punter from Melbourne, Australia, is a mentally strong athlete and "rises to challenges." Taylor will have quite the challenge before him on Saturday, as field position will be premium in what's sure to be a close-score game.

3. Kaleb Brown resurgence

Brown

Iowa second-year receiver Kaleb Brown ignited plenty of cheers from the Black and Gold faithful at Wrigley Field last week when he snagged his first catch of the season; a 23-yard grab in the fourth quarter on the Hawkeyes' game-winning drive. Talking to reporters on Tuesday, Brown said it felt nice to "break the ice" and that the catch was something he needed considering the work he's put in behind the scenes. The Ohio State transfer said he knew he had to step up once starter Diante Vines suffered an injury against the Wildcats, and he did just that, all in front of his family in his hometown Chicago.

Back on the two-deep depth chart this week, Brown will have to be a factor again versus a Rutgers passing defense that ranks sixth in the nation in passing yards allowed. Aside from running routes, Brown can also be an asset in the run game, taking jet sweeps alongside cornerback Cooper DeJean.

4. Offensive line shuffle

Wrigley Field wasn't so kind to the Iowa offensive line, as four linemen went down due to injury last week. This group included starters Logan Jones, Rusty Feth, Mason Richman, and backup Beau Stephens. While Stephens is out for Saturday, the trio of starters are all listed at their usual respective spots on the depth chart, but Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz hinted Tuesday that plenty of players are banged up and will have "up in the air" statuses against Rutgers. If any of those three cannot go Saturday, expect Tyler Elsbury to be the first man off the bench.

Having the ability to play the tackle, guard, and center spots, Elsbury excels at identifying defensive fronts and making calls at the line of scrimmage. Iowa starting right tackle Gennings Dunker labeled him as the "dictionary" of the group.

5. Cooper DeJean snaps

Iowa fans got their holiday gift early this year, as DeJean got his first two touches on offense this season last week. Taking a handoff eight yards and then running as a decoy on the next snap, DeJean's day on the offense was over in the blink of an eye. The last thing the Hawkeye coaching staff wants is an injury, but DeJean ought to get at most 10 snaps on offense Saturday.

'When he hits people, they go down'

Iowa fifth-year defensive back Sebastian Castro credits his capabilities to his Chicago roots.

Castro

When defensive back Sebastian Castro first arrived at Iowa in 2019, he didn't expect it would take three years for him to start for the Hawkeyes.

In a landscape marked by college athletes who can transfer without sitting out a year, most players in Castro's position would choose to take their talents elsewhere instead of losing playing time.

Hailing from Oak Lawn, Illinois, Castro stuck it out in the Black and Gold and made a name for himself within the program, making plays on the scout team and competing alongside and against fellow defensive backs and teammates Dane Belton and Riley Moss, who were each selected in the last two NFL Drafts, respectively.

Now, the fifth-year senior leads a stout Hawkeye defense in pass deflections and interceptions and was named a second-team midseason All-American by the Associated Press.

"I'm kind of glad [how] it happened," Castro said at a July media availability. "It's like coming to Iowa and having to wait to play and just learning the whole time — it's a humbling experience."

Williams

Castro's three interceptions nine games into the season thus far is tied at third overall in the Big Ten and knotted at fourth in the NCAA, but he's been making an even greater impact on Iowa fans for laying the hitstick on his opponents.

"Castro ... he hits hard. Everybody sees it," Iowa running back Leshon

"We didn't play with pads. I got used to the physicality. We played tackle. We didn't care."

Sebastian Castro

Williams said at an Oct. 17 media availability. "When he hits people, they go down."

Castro approaches his hard-hitting tackles in a methodic, systematic way.

"I feel like it's affecting [the opponents'] game because, in the back of their mind, they know that I can just come out of nowhere and hit them," Castro said.

One player who can attest to Castro's hitting capabilities is Wisconsin running back Braelon Allen, who Castro pounded on a fourth-and-1 play late in their Oct. 14 matchup, nearly forcing a fumble on the collision.

"That's the mental part of the game I try to enforce because whether or not they know [where I am], that's breaking them down slowly and slowly," Castro said.

But his aggressive playstyle reflects the challenging upbringing he faced as an adolescent in Chicago.

"We didn't play with pads," Castro said in an interview with Our Esquina. "I got used to the physicality. We played tackle. We didn't care."

“Playing with older kids growing up, I was scared to go against them because I didn’t know what it felt like to get hit like that, and once I realized it wasn’t that bad, I just embraced it.”

Sebastian Castro
Iowa defensive back

Castro’s love for football grew as games in the backyard with his family evolved into Pop Warner football and eventually suiting up for the Richards High School Bulldogs.

Castro learned how to play football at the next level from Roque, who’s three years older than him and was a defensive back for St. Xavier University, an NAIA school.

And Castro excelled for the Bulldogs, joining with Williams as the team made it to the state playoffs three straight seasons and earning first-team All-State honors as a junior and senior.

Castro finished his final season of high school with 95 total tackles, 6.5 tackles for loss, and six interceptions. He was named Player of the Year by The Reporter and Daily Southtown.

During this time, the three-star recruit began receiving offers from schools such as Iowa State, Minnesota, and Syracuse. However, he fell in love with Iowa following a visit in his junior year.

“When I first came here, I really knew nothing about Iowa, but when I just saw how everyone operated and the production and consistency they had, [committing] was almost like an easy decision,” Castro said at a Sept. 13 media availability.

Early days

Growing up in Oak Lawn, a Chicago suburb, Castro, along with his mother and older brother, Roque, lived with his grandparents Jose and Teresa Gonzalez. The household would fill up to nearly 10 people as Castro’s cousins would also stay there.

Castro was only a month old when his father was sent to prison, leaving both him and his brother to look toward Jose as a positive role model.

“He’s the provider and protector of his family,” Castro said regarding his grandfather. “I always looked up to him.”

With kids of all ages running around the Gonzalez home, Castro grew up recreating WWE moves and playing football with his older brother and cousins. It was during these early and sometimes violent instances in his grandparents’ home that Castro said he developed his hard-hitting mentality as a player.

“Playing with older kids growing up, I was scared to go against them because I didn’t know what it felt like to get hit like that, and once I realized it wasn’t that bad, I just embraced it,” Castro said.

Trusting the process

Castro redshirted at Iowa in 2019 and appeared briefly in just one game during the COVID-19-shortened 2020 season. He saw action in all 14 contests in 2021, racking up six tackles while playing mostly on special teams.

He admitted to being humbled his first few years at Iowa, struggling to see any meaningful playing time in a defensive back room that consisted of future NFL players Geno Stone and Michael Ojemudia.

“I was a star player in high school, and I think I’m going to walk into Iowa and just start,” Castro said. “I had the talent, but I wasn’t a good player. That was hard for me to accept as an 18-19 year-old.”

But he remained patient with his role in the program and took the time during his first couple of years at Iowa to master defensive coordinator Phil Parker’s scheme while catching the eye of coaches on the scout team.

"I heard rumors of what he was doing on the scout team his freshman year and how [coaches] would get mad at him for tackling guys, but he's one of those dudes who just sits in Coach Parker's room and listens to everything he says," Iowa linebacker Jay Higgins said at Iowa football's 2023 media day.

Higgins

It wasn't until last season that Castro's role on the defense increased, starting eight games at the CASH position, which is a hybrid position of a defensive back and linebacker. He finished the season with 33 tackles, two forced fumbles, and one sack, including a career-high five tackles in Iowa's 21-0 Music City Bowl win over Kentucky last season.

"He's an aggressive, tough guy, who's totally committed and 100 percent onboard," Iowa head coach Kirk Ferentz said following Iowa's 20-13 win against Iowa State.

Ferentz

Castro's performance so far in 2023 has been a bright spot on a 7-2 Iowa team still in the running to compete for a Big Ten Championship despite being hindered by injuries on the offense.

Iowa junior defensive lineman Yahya Black said the team can always depend on

"I made a deal with myself that until you start playing at a high level consistently all the time, you don't have the right to transfer. I felt if I did [transfer], I would regret it."

Sebastian Castro
Iowa defensive back

Castro being in the right position to make a play. "He's a pretty soft-spoken guy, but he's all business, and when it comes time to play, he doesn't miss," Black said at an Oct. 25 media availability.

Black

Once a three-star prospect and 111th-ranked safety in his class according to 247 Sports, Castro is now a key member of the 2023 Hawkeye defense as a top-five tackler and disruptive force for any opponent.

Castro's performance this season is a testament to his commitment to developing as a player — a commitment he made with himself on why he decided to ride it out with Iowa.

"I made a deal with myself that until you start playing at a high level consistently all the time, you don't have the right to transfer," Castro said. "I felt if I did [transfer], I would regret it."

IOWA -1
The Scarlet Knights boast a middle-of-the-pack run defense that allows 122.6 yards per game on the ground, but they rank 126th in defensive rushing success rate and 125th in defensive line yards. The Hawkeyes don't excel in those areas offensively, but they should prevail in a mucky one.

UNDER 28.5

Rutgers leads the nation in preventing explosiveness on the defensive side of the ball, while Iowa ranks outside the top 120 in creating big plays on offense. On the other side, the Hawkeyes' defense comes in at second nationally in defending explosive plays.

Even with the home crowd at Kinnick, Iowa is squaring up with the best rushing defense it's seen since Minnesota, and we all know how that turned out. This Rutgers squad isn't the laughing stock of recent years, and it has the potential to wipe the smiles off the faces of the Iowa faithful.

UNDER 28.5

Even if mobile Rutgers' QB Gavin Wimsatt leads his squad to 17 points, his Iowa counterpart Deacon Hill, with help from his defense, will have to conjure up 12 points against the fifth-best scoring defense in the Big Ten, a unit that yielded just 28 offensive points to the No. 1 team in the nation.

One on One: Anterio Thompson

The Hawkeye defensive lineman talked cartoons and his pet Chihuahua with The Daily Iowan Sports Editor Kenna Roering.

#54 Anterio Thompson • Sophomore | Defensive lineman | 6-foot-3 | Dubuque, IA

The Daily Iowan: What's been your favorite part about Iowa City so far?

Anterio Thompson: Just the bond that everybody has with each other. I mean, everybody's gonna say 'Hi' to you. Everybody's gonna say, 'What's up,' to you. It's not like you're just gonna come into this building and feel like you're just alone.

Is there anything you like to do with your teammates off the field?

I mean, we're very competitive. I wouldn't say like we play basketball, [because] we know that we're in season. But, like, we'll go around, shoot a couple of hoops, play some video games here and there.

Did you have a favorite cartoon when you were younger?

"Courage the Cowardly Dog." I just liked how you know it's not real, but the fact that a dog is able to talk a little bit and do that, it's just cool.

Do you have a lot of family come down to games being kind of a local guy?

My family comes all the time. And then I have some teammates. And then some coaches were popping up here and there, but they're very supportive.

Do you have a piece of advice or a life motto you live by every day?

Just get one percent better. That's the one thing I go by. [Iowa defensive line coach Kelvin] Bell talks to me all the time, talking about how I just need to improve every day. Yes, I'm not in the rotation right now. But I'm improving, and if I get one percent better each day, I'm gonna get closer and closer to that.

If you could eat one thing for the rest of your life what would it be?

A really good bowl of chicken Alfredo.

What's your favorite chicken Alfredo you've had?

I think the one that my mom makes. She makes the best ones. I tried the one at Olive Garden. It was good, but it wasn't great.

Do you have any pets?

I have a dog. It's a Chihuahua mixed with a Wiener dog. We call her Lady. She's at home. She's a little brat.

WEEK ELEVEN

Power Rankings

1. Michigan

Harbaugh's in hot water — again.

2. Ohio State

The Buckeyes' defense doesn't quite match up with the Wolverines.

3. Penn State

We will see what the Nittany Lions are all about this Saturday.

4. Rutgers

The Scarlet Knights held tough with the Buckeyes.

5. Iowa

The Hawks just keep finding a way to win.

6. Minnesota

Squeaking out a win over Iowa is literally the only reason the Gophers are here.

7. Wisconsin

Tough last couple of weeks for this highly-anticipated Air Raid offense.

8. Nebraska

I ranked Nebraska last at one point. This just shows how bad the Big Ten West is.

9. Northwestern

Holding Iowa to 10 points isn't impressive, it's expected.

10. Illinois

The Fighting Illini's last three games have been decided by four or fewer points.

11. Maryland

The Terps started off hot with five straight dubs and have been a train wreck since.

12. Indiana

The Hoosiers earned a good morale boost against Wisconsin after losing four in a row.

13. Michigan State

I try to feel bad for the Spartans, but I just can't after that 2015 Big Ten Championship game.

14. Purdue

The Boilermakers blow.

MARYLAND @ NEBRASKA

Saturday | 11 a.m. | peacock

Maryland (5-4, 2-4)

Nebraska (5-4, 3-3)

Memorial Stadium

Lincoln, NE

With a win on Saturday, Nebraska will be bowl eligible for the first time since 2016. I'm not sure that's a good thing.

Line: Maryland -2.5 | O/U: 41.5

MICHIGAN @ PENN STATE

Saturday | 11 a.m. | FOX

No. 3 Michigan (9-0, 6-0)

No. 10 Penn State (8-1, 5-1)

Beaver Stadium

University Park, PA

Can the Nittany Lions dash the Wolverines' hopes of an undefeated season? It's more likely now than ever amid Michigan's sign-stealing scandal, but I doubt it.

Line: Michigan -5 | O/U: 44.5

MINNESOTA @ PURDUE

Saturday | 11 a.m. | ESPN2

Minnesota (5-4, 3-3)

Purdue (2-7, 1-5)

Ross-Ade Stadium

West Lafayette, IN

These two squads embody Big Ten West football — ugly. Look away, viewers.

Line: Minnesota -9.5 | O/U: 53

RUTGERS @ IOWA

Saturday | 2:30 p.m. | BIG NETWORK

Rutgers (6-3, 2-2)

No. 22 Iowa (7-2, 4-2)

Kinnick Stadium

Iowa City, IA

This will be a tough game for the Hawkeyes, but I'm confident the Iowa defense will come in clutch once again.

Line: Iowa -1 | O/U: 28.5

NORTHWESTERN @ WISCONSIN

Saturday | 2:30 p.m. | FS1

Northwestern (4-5, 2-4)

Wisconsin (5-4, 3-3)

Camp Randall Stadium

Madison, WI

A loss to the Wildcats would make an already-disappointing season for the Badgers that much worse.

Line: Wisconsin -10 | O/U: 44.5

MICHIGAN STATE @ OHIO STATE

Saturday | 6:30 p.m. | NBC

Michigan State (3-6, 1-5)

No. 1 Ohio State (9-0, 6-0)

Ohio Stadium

Columbus, OH

This should be a blowout, but I don't think the Buckeyes will cover.

Line: Ohio State -28.5 | O/U: 46.5

KID CAPTAIN

Chloe Dinkla spreads joy around UIHC

Dinkla has been diagnosed with several spinal conditions, but doesn't let them slow her down.

Grace Olson
News Reporter
grace-olson@uiowa.edu

On Saturday at Iowa football's game against Rutgers at Kinnick Stadium, Kid Captain Chloe Dinkla will have her moment in the spotlight, so much so that the 11-year-old says she will be as famous as Taylor Swift.

Dinkla, who is from Winterset, Iowa, has faced many medical conditions in her spine, but through it all, has remained a bright personality and supportive character.

When Dinkla's parents, Megan and Alex, applied to adopt her from China at 18 months old, they knew she'd have a clubbed left foot; however, when they traveled to bring their daughter home they realized there was more to the picture.

When Dinkla's parents brought her home they took her to their pediatrician in Des Moines, Iowa. The doctor said Dinkla most likely had scoliosis, a curvature of the spine, and that they should bring her back in about half a year for another checkup, but the Dinklas said they needed a second opinion.

The family ended up at the University of Iowa Stead Family Children's Hospital where they met pediatric orthopedic surgeon Stuart Weinstein. He did an X-ray of Dinkla's back and confirmed the earlier diagnosis. In addition, Dinkla was also diagnosed with spina bifida, which is an incomplete closure of the spine, a tethered spinal cord, and a bony mass that split her spinal cord.

After Weinstein examined Dinkla's X-ray, UIHC doctors were able to remove the mass and repair her spinal cord almost immediately.

"We're super thankful," Megan, Dinkla's mother, said. "Dr. Weinstein had said we were within months of her potentially being completely paralyzed because the bone spur was rubbing into her spinal cord. She was super fortunate that the only function that she lost initially was just that left foot."

Now, Dinkla is 11-years-old and faces all her medical conditions with little to no worry.

"Chloe is an absolute rockstar," Alex, Dinkla's father, said. "It is unbelievable how brave this little girl is. She has not let any part of this slow her down."

As Dinkla has gotten older she only needs to visit her doctors at the hospital every three months to have her spine "stretched". She has MAGnetic Expansion Control (MAGEC) rods in her back. These rods respond to an external device that spins a magnet in the rods to make them longer. This allows Dinkla's spine to grow normally as the rest of her body does.

Once the pain gets to be too much, it's up to Dinkla to tell Weinstein when she wants her permanent rod to be put in, one that will not grow as she does.

Living in Winterset, Dinkla goes to school and cheers on her siblings at their sports games. She loves singing and dancing and is most looking forward to meeting the cheer and dance teams on Saturday.

Although she can't participate in gymnastics or any movements that involve a lot of bending, Dinkla's parents say one of her favorite activities is filming TikTok dances with her older brother, Brayden.

The song Dinkla chose to play during the wave will be "This Is Me" from "The Greatest Showman."

"Sometimes before I go into surgery, I sing that song in my head," she said.

The entire family is very excited for the game and the opportunity to celebrate Dinkla and all the kids in the hospital. Dinkla said she hopes that all the kids in the hospital feel happy all the time and hopes the wave makes them smile a lot.

"Chloe has to take a backseat a lot just because of things that she can't do, and her siblings are all in sports and very active and I think sometimes it's probably hard for her to sit in the background and watch them do things," Megan said. "So this is really her moment to shine. It's just really fun to see her excited about something and looking forward to something that's truly for her."

	RUTGERS I've been scared of this game all year. Jersey is no joke.	IOWA The Hawks have won 15 of their last 16 November games.	IOWA I'll never pick against the Hawkeyes. Take that how you will.	IOWA Keep feeding Coop the ball on offense.	IOWA Bet the under.	IOWA What the heck, it's November.	IOWA There is a real possibility that no touchdowns are scored.
	MISSOURI Shakespeare's Pizza is pretty good, especially on a midsummer night.	MISSOURI Missouri's defense will be better this time against the Vols.	TENNESSEE Josh Dobbs, UTK alum. He is the future.	TENNESSEE A revitalized Tiger team won't make a difference. Vols' win streak to five.	TENNESSEE Unless Chase Daniel's at QB, I'm not buying Mizzou.	MISSOURI A really fun SEC East game that doesn't matter in the standings.	TENNESSEE Never forget when Missouri ducked Iowa in a football series.
	GEORGIA Millie would growl with disappointment if I said otherwise.	GEORGIA The Bulldogs are vulnerable but will pull out with a win.	GEORGIA Boring.	GEORGIA Great SEC matchups this week.	GEORGIA Bulldogs stay unbeaten.	GEORGIA Get ready for another Bulldogs vs. Crimson Tide SEC Championship.	GEORGIA Two coaches with visors walk in, only one can leave.
	MICHIGAN 49ers Jim aided my fashion sense. Come to the Bears. Please.	MICHIGAN In Happy Valley or not, Michigan is just better.	MICHIGAN Let's call this one, "The Battle of the Scandals."	PENN STATE Harbaugh suspended or not, give me the Nittany Lions at home.	PENN STATE Too much outside noise for Michigan right now.	MICHIGAN Wolverines have figured out James Franklin's signs for flopping.	PENN STATE All signs point to the Wolverines missing Connor Stalions.
	WASHINGTON Stay at the American Hotel in Seattle. Great place.	WASHINGTON I'm a huge fan of HC Kaleb DeBoer.	WASHINGTON Utah is the most stagnant team that is consistently ranked.	WASHINGTON Don't mention Riley Moss 9/4/2021 to QB Michael Penix Jr.	UTAH Washington's lack of defense will finally catch up.	WASHINGTON Huskies have those CFP hopes.	WASHINGTON The Huskies are a legit title contender.
	OREGON My uncle thinks Phil Parker will go to USC. What a joke ... right?	OREGON USC scoring 42 points in a loss is insanity. Iowa could never.	OREGON That camera operator was wrong for recording Williams crying.	OREGON Caleb Williams is the Drake of CFB. I'll leave the meaning up to you.	OREGON Iowa could score 25 points against USC's defense. Ducks roll.	OREGON 9:30 p.m. Saturday game on BTN next season.	OREGON USC's defense is the Iowa offense of defenses.

It's your move: houses, condos, townhomes, Ready to move when you are!
